STUDENT SLAIN IN HOLDUP

RUSH PROGRAM IN CONGRESS TO CUT PRICES

Wilson Will Appeal for Public Help Against H. C. L.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Action by both the administration and congress to combat the high cost of living will be taken during the week.

The president will carry the fight to the people. He will make a tour of the country, urging simultaneously methods to reduce the present high prices and immediate disposal of the peace treaty. Mr. Wilson seeks to convince the country that ratification of the peace treaty without amendment is essential to restoration of normal economic and industrial conditions.

It was stated at the White House that the president now plans to be in San Francisco early in September to review the Pacific fleet, and that he probably would leave Washington during the week of Aug. 24.

Some of Proposed Measures.

Leaders in congres began today to consider legislaiton to embrace features of government control and regulation of foodstuffs and other necessities, as urged by President Wilson. Congress soon will have before it many bills dealing with articles of necessities. Of the suggestions for legislation these stand out:

1. Measures to limit the time in which meat, eggs, and other foodstuffs may be left in storage warehouses.

2. Drastic regulations against profiteering, including penalty for the offense.

3. A system of licensing corporations or individuals engaged in interstate commerce in foodstuffs and other necessaries.

4. Marking of goods destined for interstate commerce with the price at which they left the producers.

Begin Hunt for Profiteers.

Meanwhile the government is on the trail of the profiteer. All special agents of the department of justice over the country have been ordered to assist district attorneys in uncovering evidence of profiteering in foodstuffs and other necessities.

Attorney General Palmer's instructions were that the special agents should drop everything but the most pressing cases now pending and devote their entire attention to assisting in the campaign to reduce the cost of living. The result will be to put hundreds of trained investigators in the search for men who have inflated prices exorbitantly.

Numerous reports received at the department from district attorneys indicated that much evidence against profiteers was being accumulated. Prosecutions are expected to result soon in a number of districts.

Optimism prevailed in administration quarters today over the effect of the president's message on the cost of living.

The Wilson administration believes that the hundreds of letters and telegrams reaching the White House reflected general approval of remedial measures recommended.

President Wilson believes that the urgency of his presence in Washington has been relieved, and he shares the optimism of his advisers in the conviction that he has been successful in pointing a way to relieve the high cost of living problem and that further action in the crisis is up to congress.

To Confer with Republicans.

During the coming week the president expects to finish conferences with Republican senators on the treaty and league of nations.

Today he completed preparation of his reply to the senate and the senate foreign relations committee regarding requests for information and records relating to peace conference negotiations, and will forward it Monday. Some of the records sought are not available, and this fact will be fully explained.

It was said at the White House that the president had made a sincere effort to furnish all facts and information within his power to supply.

Pulling Together Most Vital Thing Today, He Declares.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

New York, Aug. 9.—[Special.]—John D. Rockefeller says the greatest need at present is coöperation. His views, given in response to a request from the editor of the Lamp, published by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

"The world we live in today is a very different world from that into which the original Standard Oil company was launched in 1870. Conditions have vastly changed.

Needs Are the Same Today.

"Yet, even with the complete remaking of the world, which we see going on around us on every hand, the needs of mankind are the same today as they were fifty years ago.

"And what is the greatest need? Coöperation. The world needs, above all else, coöperation. That is, working together, which implies friendship, brotherhood, mutual endeavor, mutual sympathy and mutual support.

New World Has Heritage.

"But much remains to be done. A new world is to be established. You are to play an important part in making it right and keeping it right. In our beginnings we had everything to do and nothing to do it with. The men of this generation are entering into a heritage which makes their father's lives look poverty stricken by comparison.

"You need only to steer the straight course, to apply yourselves assiduously to the task, to use your imagination, your sympathy, your best judgment, and success must be yours."

RIOTERS FIGHT GERMAN TROOPS; 50 ARE KILLED

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Fifty persons were killed during disturbances yesterday near Chemnitz, thirty-eight miles southwest of Dresden.

Troops were overpowered and disarmed by a mob. The soldiers' horses were slaughtered and the flesh distributed to the crowd. Many wounded persons are in the Chemnitz hospital.

Additional troops are being sent to quiet the disorders.

The riots at Chemnitz, due to the shortage of food, did not become serious until yesterday. Then Spartacan agitators persuaded a mob to storm the railway station. The mob dispersed the government troops sent against it and then stormed the prison and released several communists.

GAUNT EUROPE PINS HOPES ON U. S. GRANARY

Friend and Foe See in America Land of Milk and Honey.

Believing that the extent to which Europe's need for foodstuffs will affect America's resources is a matter of vital importance in our own fight against the high cost of living, "The Tribune's" Paris correspondent was instructed to obtain a comprehensive review of the situation in continental countries and a forecast of the approaching harvests. Below is given a report indicating just what the allies and central Europe expect to purchase from America.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Plenty of foodstuffs exists in the world.

There will be no starvation anywhere during the coming year and there will be plenty for all peoples, even those of central Europe, if proper financing is arranged for, if the supply of shipping is so controlled as to deliver the maximum tonnage, and if coal is available to operate the shipping.

Despite the big deficits in foodstuffs which Europe will buy from America there is no reason why these purchases should increase prices in America, as Europe can only take our oversupply and cannot strip the American markets through lack of shipping to carry the products away and through lack of financial power.

Toledo Expert Aid of Hoover.

These are the opinions of Dr. F. M. Surface, formerly of Toledo, O., who is chief statistician for the export department for Herbert Hoover. He has the figures of every nation at his fingers' ends.

Dr. Surface believes the three problems, as he sees them, of feeding central Europe are easily solved if the people, themselves, determine to do their share.

First: He favors the United States appointing some one big man—maybe a government official—to superintend the purchasing and selling relations with the buying governments of Europe. This official would apportion so many hunderd thousands tons of grains; so many tons of meat, canned goods, and so on down the line of all commodities, rationing each European nation according to its needs and population, and fixing all prices.

Governments Must Co-operate.

Second: Dr. Surface suggests the governments involved must oversee the operations of all steamships and work together so that ships won't haul cargoes from France to America, for instance, and return empty because they could not buy goods at the lowest prices. He would also terminate temporarily certain competitive lines, neither of which is operating at full capacity, and thus utilize every available cubic inch of tonnage.

Third: Dr. Surface would obtain immediate resumption of the biggest possible coal output through the settlement of strikes and other labor troubles, so that steamers and locomotives would have fuel to enable them to transport commodities during the coming year.

Fair European Crops Forecast.

In spite of the ravages of fifty-two months of war and the absence of Europe's manhood from the plow and lathe while they shouldered rifles in the trenches, there is every indication that nearly all the nations affected will produce fair crops this coming year.

Inquiry shows that farmers have returned to work and are busily tilling the soil with whatever implement they have or can devise; and that strikes, lockouts and all labor troubles are entirely limited to the industrial classes.

The loss of men among those killed or maimed in the war is apparently a negligible factor—in fact, the women alone managed to get out creditable crops during the war.

What Continent Requires.

Europe will need from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 tons of grain during the coming year. It is expected they will get about 10,000,000 tons from Amer-

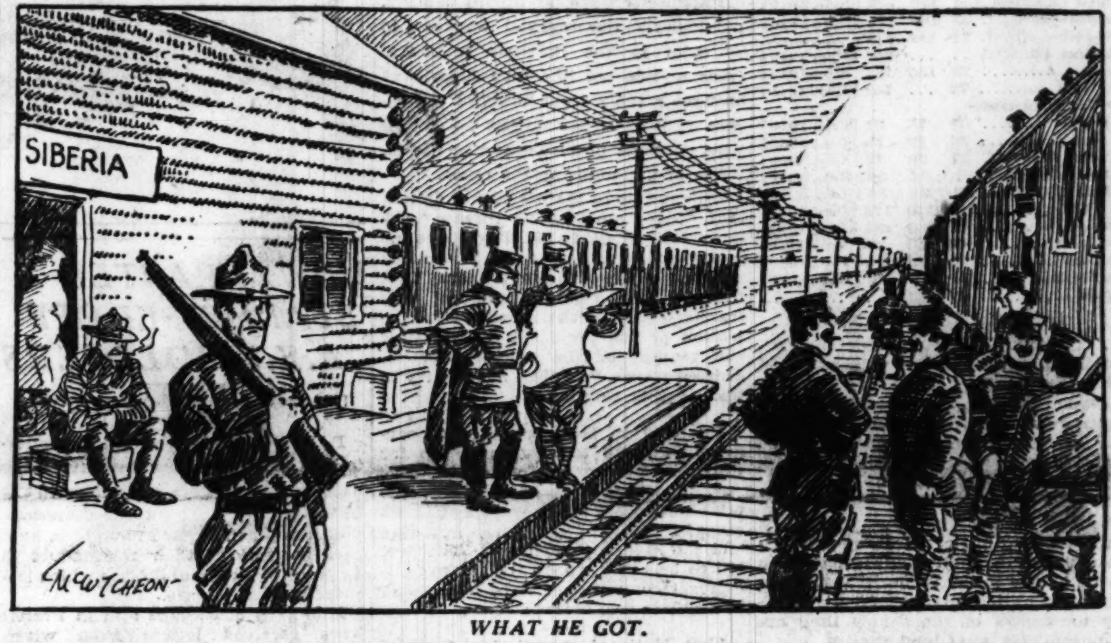
WHAT HE ENLISTED FOR.



WHAT HE GOT.

PERFECT NIGHT MARKS END OF PERFECT DAY

O. Sol, Aided by Eolus and Zephyr, Give a Party.

Again a charming social function, one of the most successful of a typical Chicago summer season, was recorded in our meteorological midst yesterday.

Heading the receiving line and in that genial, jocund humor that has always characterized his appearance here, was the host, O. Sol, capably assisted by gentle Eolus, Zephyr, and the weather man.

The guests, Mr. and Mrs. Chicago and the kiddies and the stranger within our gates, reported as usual that a most pleasant time was had by all.

An Outdoor Function.

As is customary, the function was held outdoors, the guests indulging in various diversions, such as beach bathing, motoring, golfing, walking, visiting the parks or attending baseball jousts. The sunlight and the aforementioned east wind combined to make it a great day.

The felicity of the occasion was furthered by the many favors, past and present, conferred by the host and future ones promised the guests by him and the weather man. Among the many sweet remembrances was a loving cup from California, bearing the state's great seal and the inscription, "To Miss Chicago, the sun-kist orange of the world, which leads the world in weather styles."

Swell Night, Too.

Just before the vespertine hour had marked the conclusion of the main function, the weather man announced that the maximum temperature for the day was 68, from 1 to 4 p. m., and the minimum 64, and that today it would be fair and warmer. Then there was an evening weather performance that was on a par with the daytime affair—a perfect night.

"And I am going to continue to send you some gentle north to northeast winds," added Eolus, after which the happy occasion declared adjourned until today.

Lump of Sugar Costs $5 in Petrograd; Dysentery Rages

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 9.—Famine in Petrograd has attained terrifying proportions and an epidemic of dysentery is raging throughout the city, according to messages received here. Food prices became fantastic when the rations were reduced recently, the dispatches say, a small lump of sugar costing from $5 to $6 and a pound of white bread selling at $60.

'NO NEW SHOES IN TWO YEARS'—ROGER SULLIVAN

Santa Barbara, Cal., Aug. 9.—Roger Sullivan of Chicago, who came here in the private car of Cornelius K. G. Billings for a stay at Montecito, declared today that neither he nor Billings has bought a new pair of shoes for two years.

"We are wearing old ones because during the war it was patriotic to do so and since the armistice we feel prices are too high."

Sullivan says continued demand for more money by unions and profiteering charges against manufacturers are due to "a diseased collective mind."

Since the war, he declares, manufacturers have ceased to protect the public from demands of unions and not only grant raises asked without fighting to lower them but add another profit of their own, which the public must pay.

H. C. FRICK PAYS $1,500,000 FOR ART ENAMELS

New York, Aug. 9.—Henry C. Frick has added to the art collection in his Fifth avenue home, at a reported cost of $1,500,000, the famous Limoges enamels included in the collection of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, according to an announcement today.

There are about forty bronzes and tryptychs. Notable among the enamels are portraits by Leonard Limousin and earlier artists, such as Monyaerni, Nardon, and the Penicauds. The Penicauds are represented by the three members of the family, Jean first, second, and third.

In 1915 Mr. Frick bought for more than $1,000,000 some of the rare Morgan porcelain. Previously he had acquired the famous Fragonard paintings.

SUSIE ENDS WILD CAREER BY NOOSE

Susie was a naughty bear, and came a naughty—and knotty—end. The end of a rope, my dear. Susie had been sent to Great Lakes, and the agent at North Chicago left her sealed in a nice crate.

But Susie didn't like the crate and broke out of it. She didn't like the freight car, either. So she broke out of that. She scared a woman most to death and then she went for a walk.

But the agent got a rope and walked after Susie, put a noose around her neck, and left her tied up. Susie didn't like that at all. She sulked and wouldn't let any one come near. The noose became tighter; but Susie would not let anybody help her. So she choked to death. And she might have had such a good time eating peanuts, if she had only been nice!

FATHER ACCUSES HIS DAUGHTER AS HUSBAND SLAYER

She, with Doctor, Held to Grand Jury at Macomb, Ill.

Macomb, Ill., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Dr. C. W. Alverson and Mrs. Lawrence Clugston were arrested today, charged with the poisoning of the woman's husband, who died on July 20 after he had been treated by Dr. Alverson for typhoid fever.

The arrests were ordered by the coroner's jury, and the couple were remanded pending action by the September grand jury.

Shortly before Mr. Clugston died another physician was called in, but he said he could find no trace of typhoid fever. At the death of Clugston there was no suspicion that there had been any foul play.

Woman's Father the Accuser.

Developments in what the prosecution claims is a love triangle came rapidly before the funeral, however, when S. J. Bagley, father of Mrs. Clugston became inquisitive and carried his suspicions to the coroner. The latter immediately ordered a post-mortem examination.

Dr. William D. McNally, chemist to Coroner Hoffman of Cook county, was called into the case and after an examination declared he was unable to find any symptoms of typhoid fever, but that he did find 4.27 grains of arsenic. When his report was received the arrest of the couple was ordered.

Boarded at Farmer's Home.

Clugston was a farmer and some time ago Dr. Alverson, who is 51 years old, sought board at the Clugston home. He was taken in and it is believed that his acquaintance with Mrs. Clugston ripened as his stay lengthened. He formerly practiced in Chicago, it is said.

Germans Take First Step to Negotiate Reparations

VERSAILLES, Aug. 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—Baron Kurt von Lersner, head of the German peace delegation, today notified the secretariat of the peace conference that a commission, headed by Director Bergmann of the Deutsche bank, and including representatives of several governmental departments, had been formed to negotiate with the interallied commission on reparations.

Girl Friends See Murder in City Park

Robert Charles Wilson, a student of Northwestern university, was murdered shortly before midnight last night while taking an auto ride with a young friend and two girls in Marquette park.

The murder was committed by two young holdup men, who escaped.

The police of the Englewood station and detectives from the bureau are searching the south side for the murderers but at an early hour this morning no trace of them had been found.

Girls Witness Tragedy.

Young Wilson, who was 21 years old and lived at 6807 Union avenue, was a junior at Northwestern. He was accompanied by Frederick White, an accountant of the International Harvester company, living at 6422 Yale avenue. The young men had been driving with two girls, Miss Edna McAver, aged 22, of 7011 South Wabash avenue, and Miss Marie Kaluk, aged 21, of 7341 Union avenue.

As they were going along the main road in Marquette park, at what would be Sixty-ninth street, just east of Kedzie avenue, the two holdups jumped from the bushes. Aiming their revolvers at the driver they halted the automobile.

Relieved of Valuables.

"Get out, all of you."

The young men and women complied. The robbers lined them up along the side of the auto and went through their clothes for their valuables. When they had completed relieving them of their money and jewels, the bandits commanded:

"Now, turn your backs and don't move for five minutes or we shoot to kill."

Rebels; Pays with Life.

At this command young Wilson rebelled. He made a leap at one of the bandits. As he did so the other fired.

One bullet lodged in Wilson's spine, another in his lungs. Wilson fell in a welter of blood.

The murderers, frightened at their deed, jumped into the bushes at the side of the road and disappeared.

Girls Scream; Call Help.

When the slayers and Wilson began their struggle which ended in the murder, the girls started to scream. Their cries and the shots which immediately followed, were heard by passing autoists and one of these stopped and assisted in placing the victim in his car, which then hurried to the Englewood hospital. But before they arrived young Wilson had died.

The party which preceded the fatal occurrence had been held at the home of Miss McAver, who is the daughter of Fred McAver, and with Miss Klauk, is a comptometer operator at Carson, Pierie, Scott & Company's store. Wilson had long been a friend of Miss McAver, but there was no engagement between them, it was said last night.

Wilson was the son of George Graham Wilson, a real estate dealer who for a long time was connected with John M. Smyth & Co.

Climax of Six Holdups.

The murder was the climax to a series of six or more holdups which occurred in various parts of the city last night.

Lieut. Michael Crane of the Englewood station and a squad of his men, as well as the bandit squad of the detective bureau, are among the police who are hunting for the murderers of young Wilson.

POLICE LEAVE STOCKYARDS; STRIKE ENDS

Withdrawal of Cops Brings Order to Resume Work.

The stockyards strike is over. The announcement followed a decision of Chief Garrity to order the removal of all deputy sheriffs and police reserves from the stockyards district. Fifteen thousand strikers, members of all unions involved in the walkout which threatened to tie up Chicago's packing industry, who had assembled in a massmeting at Fiftieth street and Oakley avenue yesterday afternoon, heard the news and were told by their union officials to report for work at the yards Monday morning.

Chief Garrity's decision came after a conference with city and state officials, it is said. Earlier in the day he had refused the union's request for withdrawal of the guards, but following a conference with Federal Judge Alschuler the labor leaders again approached the chief and received the reply that the police and duepty sheriffs would be withdrawn at once.

Unions Claim Victory.

J. W. Johnstone, secretary of the Stockyards Labor council, announced the "victory" of the unions to the crowds which had assembled "as a protest against police and military protection in the yards."

He advised all the workers to return to their jobs Monday morning, but to continue their campaign to "make the yards 100 per cent union." He appealed for cool headedness and unity among the workers, white and black, and reviewed the history of the walkout and its result, declaring it "one of the greatest victories ever won by union labor in the last decade." Secretary Johnstone spoke in English.

John Kikulski, organizer of the A. F. of L., explained the truce in Polish to those not speaking the English language.

Only when touching upon the packers and the inauguration of military guards did Secretary Johnstone become bitter in his speech.

Assails the Packers.

"We sent our boys overseas to fight against Germany, to die in battle," he declared. "They fought for democracy—that the world might live in peace and harmony. And America is a part of the world. We want a little of that democracy ourselves. The packers want their own democracy, their kind of democracy, which means, 'We do as we damn please!'

"I have no fight against the militia. They are just a bunch of kids, most of them. Really, they're boy scouts with men's weapons in their hands. But the deputy sheriffs—they're nothing but a bunch of ——

"The day when the laboring man could be treated as a workhorse is gone. The real day of labor is at hand! And the victory of labor can only come through the laboring men's organizations, the labor unions!"

The crowd cheered, and after listening a few moments to Kikulski, broke up in little groups to go home. Little excitement was manifested.

Following the main meeting of the workers, the engineers, who had threatened a walkout, had a short conference, at which they decided to go back to work. "Everything is settled," announced M. F. Weggener of the stockyards council. "We will not strike on this question. Wait until the wage issue comes up."

Wage Issue up Tuesday.

The decision to remove the police came as a relief to the union leaders, for on Tuesday morning the ever-present wage dispute comes up in a new form before Federal Judge Alschuler, mediator between the packers and the employés. Hints of a general strike if the judge's award should be unsatisfactory were plentiful at the meeting yesterday afternoon.

Nearly 500 policemen and 250 deputy sheriffs were withdrawn from the yards district, only about 100 remaining in the boundaries. These, with the exception of the men stationed on regular patrol duty, will be taken out before Monday morning.

Figures on the number of men on strike varied widely again yesterday, the packers and police maintaining the union claim of more than 32,000 was exaggerated. The packers, in a stat ment shortly after noon, admitted 10,604 men were out in the Swift, Armour, Wilson, Libby, McNeil & Libby, and Hammond plants. No mention was made of the smaller institutions.

Claim Two Shutdowns.

The unions claimed the Omaha and independent companies were so demoralized by the walkout they were forced to shut down. According to Deputy Alcock, who toured the yards, visiting every plant, both the Omaha and independent companies were managing to operate.

Fortunately for the packers, the strike occurred Friday and extended into Saturday, a day on which no killing is done at the yards. Had the walkout occurred earlier in the week, the handicap would have been much more serious, it is said.

Everett C. Brown, president of the live stock exchange, yesterday announced Armour & Co. were operating on an 80 per cent basis, Morris & Co. on a 60 per cent basis, and the smaller concerns on a slighlty lower basis. The normal killing per day for the entire stockyards was set by Mr. Brown at 15,000 hogs and 12,000 cattle.

STEEL MEN TO VOTE

Approximately 40,000 iron and steel workers in the South Chicago, Indiana Harbor and Gary districts are expected to vote on a strike for higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions next Thursday. The vote will be held at Lincoln hall, Ninety-first and Calumet streets, South Chicago, under the auspices of the Allied Iron and Steel council.

According to Frank Doyle, general secretary of the council, the union leaders have been organizing the district for the last nine months, and now claim over 90 per cent of all employés in iron and steel plants. Yesterday the following letter was sent to each member of the organization:

"The union committees of the Allied Iron and Steel council are now seeking to secure higher wages, shorter hours and better working conditions from the steel corporations. Are you willing to back us up to the extent of stopping work should the companies refuse to consent to your demands? Vote yes or no."

Among the plants concerned are the Illinois Steel plant, better known as the South Works, in South Chicago, with a pay roll of 11,000 men; the International Harvester company, subsidiary plant, known as the Wisconsin Steel company, South Chicago, with 4,500 men; the Iroquois Iron company, 3,000; the Interstate Iron and Steel company, 2,500; the Western Steel Tire and Foundry company, 4,000, and other smaller plants in South Chicago; the United States Steel corporation, Gary, Ind., 11,000; the Inland Steel company, Indiana Harbor, 4,000; the Marks Steel company, Indiana Harbor, 3,000, and various other plants in the Whiting and Hammond districts.

DISCUSS CHURCH UNITY PROGRAM

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The world inter-church movement was among the important subjects considered at the closing sessions of the Christian Endeavor world conference here today.

"The basic foundation of this movement does not rest upon an organic unit, but rather on spiritual unity," said the secretary, the Rev. J. Campbell White.

"We are not arguing for church unity—let that take care of itself. The movement is a serious effort on the part of Protestant churches and agencies to work together to map out a world program for the spread of the gospel."

He was brought back from France under guard and his trial, which lasted but two days, was the speedy ending of the most sensational criminal trial in the history of Camp Grant.

Within a few days the findings of the army court will be forwarded to Washington for final review by President Wilson.

MEAT PRICES SOAR IN YARDS H. C. L. PUZZLE

Packers Deny Increase, but Buyers' Bills Show Contrary.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

The old cow is jumping over the moon again at the stockyards. Wholesale prices of meats have shot up. Purchasers report their bills for last Friday were between 14 and 36 per cent higher than their Thursday bills for the same grade and quality of supplies.

Right here a little element of mystery enters. The packers deny any advance has been made. The government bureau of markets, too, says that during the week ending Friday beef did not go up, although pork went up about 1 or 1½ cents a pound.

The purchasers, however, refuse to be convinced. They exhibit actual bills, which they pay by checks, meaning so much cold hard cash.

Here Are the Figures.

Here are the figures taken from bills for foodstuffs bought on Thursday and Friday, indicating increases in meat prices per pound:

WHOLESALE MEATS AT YARDS.

	Aug. 7.	Aug. 8.	Pct. advance.
Beef loins	.36	.45	25
Beef loins and ribs	.35	.40	14.3
Chucks of beef	.16	.20	25
Pork loins	.35	.40	14.3
Veal [saddles]	.22	.30	36.3
Lambs	.28	.32	14.3
Sausage	.27	.35	30

Buyers who reported the advance and displayed their bills as "Exhibit A" said when they asked the reason they were told it was the industrial situation. The railroad strike and the embargoes were slowing up shipments; cattle were not coming in; hence production was falling off and markets were running down. Hand in hand with the transportation difficulty traveled the troubles at the yards and the walkouts, all meaning diminished production, even if the railroads were at normal.

Armour Denies Raise.

"It was explained," said one buyer, "that stocks were down and demand was heavy, and whenever that comes to pass it means a squeeze play that always shoots prices higher and beans the public."

Denial that meat prices soared on Friday was made by Armour & Co. in an "authorized statement."

"There has been no appreciable advance in meat prices, despite reports to that effect," it read. "It can also be said that the strike has not affected and probably will not affect the price of meat."

Dealers reported a scarcity of beef, veal, and pork, especially in the cheaper cuts.

"You simply can't buy what you want at the yards," said one. "I went out there with a pocketful of dough and had to skirmish around for hours before I could get satisfactory cuts at any price."

How the System Works.

While Sherlock fills up the old black briar and discovers which is right, the denials of the packers or the bills the purchasers, the public can see in it all an illustration, anyhow, of the spiral jumping contest between wages and prices.

Here's the way they are booting each other up the incline:

High cost, due measurably to an overloaded system of distribution, helps to start off a demand for higher wages. From this issue the strikes and walkouts.

These, in turn, cut down production or the transportation of goods, which means markets are depleted and high cost of living gets another boost.

Even casual observers say that, although food profiteers are slaughtered, the cost of living problem will not approach a real solution unless at the same time production is put back to normal and then increased.

Tension Is Lowered.

Three important pieces of news last night indicated a lowering of the industrial tension and a prospect that the cost of living question, which is at the basis of the unrest, may be attacked simultaneously from the angles of production and distribution. They were:

Ending of the stockyards strike.

Indications that the railroad shopmen in the Chicago district will follow the lead of their fellow workmen and go back to their jobs Monday, removing the transportation menace which threatened Chicago industries and markets.

Announcement from Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois Mine Workers, that 90 per cent of the striking miners in the Belleville district returned to work yesterday. Some mines had been considering shutting down—the troubles would have tended toward reduction of coal supplies, which with railroad troubles might have meant a fuel famine in certain Illinois communities next winter.

Thinks Crisis Is Past.

"It looks as if the crest has been passed in certain groups," said one well informed labor leader last night. "There is plenty of unrest still, but these are all evidences that more stable conditions are approaching.

"Soak the profiteer—that's the place to start, because quickest results can be got at that link in the endless chain.

"And as soon as the workers get the idea that living costs are coming down, they'll get after the production end, and first think we know the country will be booming.

"But it's time for fossilized employers, who think we are going back to 1914 conditions, to get it into their heads that the world has traveled fifty years or a century in the last five years. I believe the bulk of the employers realize this, but the quicker everybody gets up to date the faster will the industrial situation become more settled."

H. C. L. Worse in Other Lands.

After looking over his meat and grocery bills, the ordinary householder may get a grain of comfort out of the fact that cost of living in many other countries has advanced much greater than in America. The British ministry of labor has just issued the following table showing the percentage increase in retail food prices since July, 1914—copies reached Chicago a day or so ago:

Industrial Peace Big Need.

"Without industrial peace the cost of living can never be reduced," said Stephen A. Day, president of the League for Industrial Justice. "We must restore the rhythm and continuity of production and eliminate the waste before we can begin to discuss economy in industry.

"It is axiomatic that the true interest of both employers and employés rests in relations of harmony and mutual understanding. Selfish groups in both of the great industrial elements are striving for mastery and are equally unmindful of the injury they are doing to this great land of ours.

"Close, personal contact between employer and employé and full and free discussion of the other's attitude with reference to wages, hours, and working conditions will accomplish much in the obtaining of industrial peace, provided it is agreed that such peace will be founded upon justice and a square deal to all of the elements involved. It must be generally recognized that all men who work together are in a real sense partners."

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 9.

PRESIDENT WILSON's appeal to labor, particularly the railroad workers, to be calm in the post-war industrial crisis and to act like true Americans brought a reply from heads of the fifteen railway organizations assembled here on wage problems and in the interest of nationalizing the roads.

In response to the president's dictum that "there must be no threats," the labor leaders said that they have no desire to impress upon the public "by violence or threat" the proposal that the railroads be nationalized, but they frankly stated if the railroad administration or the president cannot meet the request of the workers for increased wages, "we shall have to try to find another solution."

LEADERS in both branches of congress prepared today to take up for consideration next week the legislative recommendations proposed by the president to aid the government in its crusade against profiteers, hoarding and the high cost of living. The first bill to be taken up by the house agricultural committee will be a measure to regulate cold storage.

THE National Association Opposed to Prohibition has made report on an investigation into increased hotel rates all over the country, which says that the rates have been raised from $1 to $7 a day per guest and that prohibition is the cause. Deficiencies in hotel earnings laid at the door of prohibition, the report says, will cost the public $500,000,000 during the next year.

UNWARRANTED STAIN WIPED OFF A. E. F. SOLDIERS

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Aug. 9.—General headquarters, A. E. F., wishes to correct the widespread and false impression in the United States that all the American soldiers still in France have been kept here because of their misconduct in contracting venereal disease which is a court martial offense.

Hundreds of soldiers still in France have received letters from wives, sweethearts, and mothers intimating that the reason they are not home is because they have contracted disease. These letters have caused a great deal of unwarranted grief.

Maj. Gen. J. G. Harbord, chief of staff, today authorized the cabling to the United States of the following official statement:

"It is unjust for people at home to accuse soldiers of the A. E. F. still in France of misconduct, unless they know whereof they speak. It should be known that only a very small percentage of the enlisted men still here are being retained on overseas duty because they contracted disease. Combat units have to be sent home. Affairs of the A. E. F. have to be cleaned up. Some one has to remain here to do the work. I hope this will correct any walse impressions in the States."

200,000 BUSHELS OF GRAIN BURN.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 9.—More than 200,000 bushels of grain, mostly oats, valued at about $170,000, were destroyed by fire today at the plant of the Keystone Elevator and Warehouse company in this city.

RIOT TROOPS MARCH THROUGH LOOP TO HOMES

11th I. N. G. and 1st Reserve Militia Are Reviewed.

The riot district's "army of occupation" has started its march back to civil life.

Every regiment has been withdrawn; city and military officials have pronounced the rioting at an end. Chief of Police Garrity said that his policemen would be able to handle the situation from now on.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning Col. Lorenzen and Col. James E. Stuart brought their 1st and 11th regiments, respectively, into formation at Michigan boulevard and Roosevelt road. A march through the loop followed. They stepped to a martial tune with the neatness of overseas "vets" and drew round after round of handclapping and cheers from the hurrying loopers.

Scatter to Homes.

At Madison and La Salle streets the 11th regiment, I. N. G., branched off and marched to Madison and Market streets, where they boarded army trucks and were whisked to their armory, 2656 West Madison street. Then they gathered carfare and scattered to their homes.

At State street and Jackson boulevard the 1st regiment boarded trucks and went to the 7th Regiment armory. There they were dismissed.

Only one casualty marked the movement. Private Ferdinand Cooney of Company H, 1st regiment, bruised his hip while leaping onto a truck at Sixty-third and Halsted streets. He was checked off as unfit to march and sent to his residence. The injury was not serious.

Before the demobilization the men of the 1st regiment presented a wrist watch to their commander, Col. A. F. Lorenzen.

Third Escapes Hike.

The 3d regiment under Col. Anson Bolte did not parade. They were demobilized at their armory after the 1st regiment set out for the loop.

The dismissal of the 1st, 3d, and 11th regiments marked the exit of the last of the state troops that had been called to preserve order. The 2d, 4th, 9th, and 10th regiments were ordered to their homes late on Friday.

Although satisfied that the rioting is at an end, Adj. Gen. Dickson will maintain the army "G. H. Q." at the Congress hotel until next week. A report of the activities of the men by the commanding officers will be made out within a few days.

Lowden Goes Home.

Gov. Frank O. Lowden stated that the necessity for troops on the south side was at an end and left for his Sinissippi home yesterday.

"I need a rest and I hope they'll let me take it. I am satisfied that the situation was well handled and desire to compliment the men on their efficient work."

CHIEF'S STAFF FIRE STAR OWNER CALLED FIREBUG

"Squirrel" to Face Arson Charges Before the Grand Jury.

Carl Johnson, 6120 St. Lawrence avenue, the holder of a "chief's staff" fire star recently given him by Fire Chief O'Connor at the recommendation of a deputy state fire marshal, will be arraigned before the grand jury Monday on charges of arson in connection with the recent race rioting.

Johnson is the son of P. A. Johnson, who for years has been the proprietor of a large clothing store at Fifty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue. He is 22 years old and known on the south side as "Squirrel" Johnson.

The allegations to be presented to the grand jury is that, together with Harry Sherlock, proprietor of a cigar store at 5454 Wentworth avenue, and others, Johnson threw some gasoline on a house owned by Jane Honeywell, white, at 5432 South La Salle street, in which a Negro family had been living. According to Morris Wilson, chief investigator for the state's attorney, Fred Brissa, 16, and William Geary, 17, were induced to throw lighted matches on the gasoline by the older men, among whom were Johnson and Sherlock, who is 31 years old.

Three Attempts Made.

Three attempts, at half hour intervals, were made to light the house, and on the third the man succeeded, according to Wilson, in burning the house pretty effectively.

Other arson charges will be presented against Henry Rathmann, 6720 South Ellis avenue; George Francis Gallagher, 1333 West Seventy-second place; Owen McCabe, 1304 Seventy-third street, and Emmet Darcy, 6919 South May street, all white.

The two former will be charged, according to Wilson, with burning a shoe shining parlor owned by William Dennis, colored, at 1236 West Sixty-ninth street. They denied the burning, but Gallagher admitted he put a sign in the place, which stated, "This Place Is Going to Be Run by White Men."

McCabe and Darcy, 16 and 17 years old, admitted they "chipped in" for gasoline, which was used to burn the barn of Gene Harris, at Sixty-ninth and Elizabeth street.

Highwayman Beats Negro.

Another case which is to go to the grand jury is that of Joseph Kondracki, a highwayman who vented his hatred upon a Negro in the midst of a holdup. It is charged Kondracki with two other men, whom he refuses to name, went to the garage of Charles F. Meyer on the west side at 2 o'clock on the morning of July 31. They tied Harold Wilson, colored, of 2924 Calumet avenue, who was in charge, to a chair.

Kondracki then picked up a hammer. "Well," he said, "I'll show you how the white men treat a nigger these days," and he beat Wilson, despite the fact that he was tied to a chair, over the head and body with the hammer.

BUGLE CALL HATH CHARMS TO STIR A GENTLE BREAST

U. S. Training Camp for Women Makes Life Snappy.

BY FRED D. PASLEY.

Grim-visag'd war hath smoothed his wrinkled front, and yet——

A bugle, shrilling a ram's horn blast that would have toppled old Jericho's walls instanter, startled our nautical Jehu into spinning the wheel hard aport just as we had rounded another beetling cliff and recalled to us that we were nearing human habitation.

For an eternity, it seemed, our doughty barque had sailed on and on, over a boundless main bluer than the water of the springs of Thermopylæ; on and on, past the pillars of Hercules, far beyond the sunset and the baths of western stars; into an enchanted world, a legendary world of ancient Greece.

Hark to the Bugle!

Ta-a-a-a, ta—ta, ta, ta, ta—again that weird, yet witching, high-piping Pehlevi; a melodic incantation as alluring as any that greeted Ulysses from the sirens' isle. We landed and our barque departed, leaving us, two argonauts, upon an alien shore.

A sylvan, woodland scene it was—high arching ash and oak and hemlock trees, and meads of phlox and black-eyed susans. We made our way through many a tangled brake, expecting momentarily to encounter some panting Daphne in mad flight from a love-smitten Apollo; or an Arcadian Pan, with reeling satyr rout, pursuing a trembling Syrinx; or even a languishing Narcissus——

"Hep, hep—hep, hep, hep; column right, column left; dress up in the rear there; make it snappy; one, two, three, four——"

And Here They Are.

"Gosh," ejaculated Mr. Douglass, our photographer Achates, "gosh, that's what I call going some. They're there, ain't they?"

They were there, all right—a cohort of Amazons, embattled Hippolytes and Penthesileas, marching as to war; doing their squads right and squads left with a zip and a zest that would have boded ill for the myrmdons of any indiscreet Achilles or ambitious Alexander.

Exemplars of a new twentieth century experiment in femininity, an experiment that may cause mere man to be hoist, as it were, by his own Nietzschean petard—we are evolving the superwoman up at Kaye's park, Lake Geneva, the camp of the United States Training Corps for Women.

"We're a couple of journalists from Chicago," we ventured to one of the privates, "and would like to see the lady—or—the commanding officer."

On to the General.

"You wish to see Gen. Cocroft," Private Dash informed us with military brevity. "Follow that path to your left, turn to your right at the big tree, ask for the chief of staff's tent, and I think you will find her there."

Reaching the chief of staff's tent, that officer being Mrs. George W. Plummer of Chicago, we encountered, near the entrance of the khaki brown pyramidal structure, the general, who in civilian life is Miss Susanna Cocroft, exponent of the physique beautiful cult for women.

Erect, square shouldered, garbed in the uniform of brown cotton gaberdine and black sailor straw hat, surmounted with officer's cord and silver star, the general greeted us kindly when we had disclosed our mission.

She'd Tell the Nation.

"I am glad you have come," she said. "I want the nation to know what we are doing. We are trying to inaugurate a movement for the general upbuilding of women's health. Whatever builds up the health of our womanhood builds up the strength of our nation. The war demonstrated to us that we were woefully unprepared in this respect. A bill is now pending in congress to make these camps permanent."

"Ta-a-a-a—" it was the ubiquitous bugle.

"First call for drill," explained Gen. Cocroft, and a few minutes later cotton gaberdined figures began trooping from the pyramidal tents and into the company streets. A couple of regular army lieutenants appeared as if by magic—Myles W. Ward and George Butterfield, we learned later. They supervise the drills.

Quite Rough About It.

"Fall in!"

A very curt command it was, uttered by a feminine voice, and we looked about quickly to discover the owner, which brings us to Corporal Helen Ballack of Madison. Corporal Ballack, it may be explained, is really an acting captain, but so far no rank higher than that of corporal has been conferred among the training corps soldierettes.

"Don't fuss about that dress; leave that hair ribbon alone, and close up on the extreme right; hey, you in the middle, ease back there. You'll do this right or you'll get no mess."

Corporal Ballack speaking—a superwoman at 21; a feminine Volsung, or what you will, to the manner born. If Pershing had discovered Helen, the war in Europe would have been ended before breakfast at Chateau Thierry.

"Forward, harch!" (note the "harch," always the proof positive of your veteran fighting man, the M, no doubt, being sacrificed in the interests of military euphony).

"Forward, harch!" and Corporal Ballack's company and the company commanded by Corporal Sewell Truax of Highland Park filed out of the tent streets and moved toward the east.

It's a Long, Long Way.

"We'll follow them," said Gen. Cocroft, and Mr. Douglas and the war correspondent started harching. We were informed by the general that the distance to the objective was short, but to our hitherto cloistered dogs it seemed longer than the road to Tipperary.

It led out of the woodland and over hill and heath to a large clearing under a blazing sun. How the soldierettes endured the hike we know not, but to us long before the objective was obtained it had become a sort of bunion pilgrim's progress.

Posting ourselves under a sheltering oak we began a mental inventory of Gen. Crocroft's forces. They numbered about 100. Types varied. One private was pointed out to us as the mother of eleven children. Corporal Truax possesses two. Of the 100 about fifty were single.

Friend Husband would have thrilled with pardonable pride could he have spared sufficient time from his housewifely duties to witness the martial spectacle. With the ease of a Blue Devil, Friend Wife was executing squads right and left; to the rear, march; mark time and other military maneuvers, with apparently not a thought of the blistering sun.

The marched them up and they marched them down, across and back and then around, with but one diversion. That was when Mr. Douglass, peerless, paramount, faced the embattled host, master of all he surveyed, and with puissant digit signaled them to "see the birdie," while he clicked the camera.

A Busy Program.

From reveille, at 6:50 in the morning, until taps, at 10 at night, they are in constant training, the daily program including, in addition to the drills, swimming, walking, calesthenics, and lectures by various government experts on household economics, nursing, social hygiene, child welfare work. Then there are lessons in singing and interpretative and folk dancing.

Physical perfection is the cardinal point of their camp creed, the camp shibboleth being "the fat shall be thin and the thin shall be fat."

A cuboid Venus, say, arrives in camp. Lo! through the magic of the test poise and correct posturing—we borrow Gen. Cocroft's technology—she is soon reduced to Hogarthian lines of beauty.

As for the skinny, be they as lean as Paraoh's kine, it is guaranteed they shall eftsoons face any one piece bathing suit without a qualm.

Contraband of War.

All this was disclosed after the reportorial eye had observed the utter absence of artificial pigmentation and but few powder puffs. The corset, the devil curl, that decoy of credulous man, and the old fashioned bustle are contraband of war at Lake Geneva.

They have pushed back the hands of the style clock a thousand years.

Even the modified French heel, so dear to womankind, has been banned. The dictum of Napoleon that an army travels on its stomach has been set aside. An army travels on its feet and the dogs of war must be conserved.

They gathered round the camp fire after mess and regaled us with songs and stunts and yells. Particularly we remembered "Hullabaloo, hooray, hooray; hullabaloo, hooray, hooray; women's training corps; U. S. A.; ray!"

Who said, "Frailty, thy name is woman"?

Tramp, tramp, tramp, the girls are HARCHING.

PACIFIC FLEET AT LOS ANGELES

On Board the Flagship New Mexico Off the Port of Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Pacific fleet came today to make its bow to Los Angeles. Six dreadnaughts and two older class battleships dropped their mudhooks this afternoon at the San Pedro breakwater while twenty-three destroyers, with the mother ship, the cruiser Birmingham, and the tender Prairie came up into the inner harbor for anchorage.

The flagship New Mexico, with the secretary of the navy's flag—four white stars and an anchor on blue—flying from the main truck took up anchorage outside the harbor.

On board the New Mexico with Secretary Daniels and family, making the trip from San Diego to San Pedro, were Gov. Stephens, California; Gov. Larrazolo, New Mexico, and a welcoming committee from Los Angeles.

STREET GAMING AGAIN REVIVED BY BERLINERS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Street gambling is seen in Berlin once more. Late last evening the dice tables appeared on Friedrichstrasse, the famous all-night street of the German capital, and the "Come on, boys" chatter of the operators was heard above the talk of the crowds.

The reappearance of these street games, so numerous in the wild days following the second revolution, is taken as proof that Berlin again is slipping.

As gambling goes, the individual losses and winnings are not large, but these pikers are wagering their food and lodging. When they swarm in thousands around the tables it is believed to indicate a sort of hopelessness which causes them to throw all caution to the winds.

ENEMY SEIZES CADETS' CAMP

Camp Roosevelt, Mich., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Camp Roosevelt is tonight in the hands of the enemy.

Following a battle of two hours today the small force of defenders of the camp were overpowered and forced to surrender to the invading army. It was the first battle staged at the camp and the student soldiers won the praise of the officers.

Although the decision went to the attacking army, the invading forces suffered "great loss of life," and for more than an hour the defenders held the pass leading from the hills into camp. It was not until two other forces of the attacking army had entered the camp from other sides that the small camp force surrendered. The armored car and tank played an important part in the engagement. The sham battle delighted the cadets. . . .

TWO LAY CLAIM TO $150,000,000 TRACT IN "STREETERVILLE"

THE Potter Palmer estate, "Captain" George Wellington Streeter, the Shaw Taxicab company, the Blue Valley Creamery company and 336 other persons and companies are made defendants in a suit filed in the federal court yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Elizabeth Schmidt and Herman Krueding.

They allege the defendants are illegally occupying the land between the Chicago river on the south, North avenue on the north, St. Clair street on the west, and the lake on the east, declaring the property rightfully belongs to them. As evidence they cite documents lost in the Chicago fire and declare land east of the original tract, which has been reclaimed from the lake, also belongs to them.

The claim dates back to at least 1889, when Peter T. Johnson sold a bathing beach he had conducted on the river at St. Clair street to Barbara Schmidt. Johnson obtained the land in 1863. At that time it consisted of seventy acres, but since it has been expanded by reclamations until it now consists of 200 acres, valued at $150,000,000, according to the complainants.

The claimants find justification for their claims in the burned records act of Illinois, asserting their titles were destroyed in the Chicago fire. They ask an injunction restraining the present occupants from remaining on the land. Attorneys C. E. Milroy and Frank H. Novak represent the complainants.

ILLNESS DRIVES MAN TO SUICIDE

William Scanlan, 36 years old, 1545 West Seventy-first street, an electrician, committed suicide last night by shooting himself. His wife heard the shot and found him lying on the floor. The police found a note addressed to his wife. It read:

"Dear Birdie: Please do not worry. You will find everything in my old vest pocket. Well goodby. WILL."

"P. S.: I am awful sick, this will end it all."

KANSAS WIFE CRIES TO EUROPE: "COME OVER AND HELP US"

HERE'S a plaintive cry from Kansas for help. Mrs. E. D. Wilson of Strong City, Kas., has reached the point of desperation and wants to import a maid "who would stay more than two months." She wrote to the "Fatherless Children of France" in Chicago, and offered to pay the way across the ocean of a French, Belgian, or even German woman who would come and help her.

She says she has a strictly modern house, electric washing machine nad vacuum cleaner, that she can pay $6 a week, and that the maid will have a good room to herself. There are five children, but the mother takes care of them herself.

"My idea was to get a woman that wanted a home," she wrote, "and was competent to take full charge of the house. If you cannot help us do you know any one that can? If so, pass my letter on. We do not care whether the girl or woman is from France, Belgium, or Germany, or any place over there. We will pay her fare if she is competent and what we want."

PERSHING'S TRIP TO BELGIAN KING NOT ABANDONED

PARIS, Aug. 9.—A report was current in Paris this afternoon that Gen. Pershing had been recalled suddenly to the United States and would abandon his visit to King Albert of Belgium, planned for Sunday. It was stated at the general's office that no one there was aware of any change in his plans. Gen. Pershing's special train, in fact, was at Lille this evening, taking him on his way to Belgium for his visit.

Pershing Not Called Home.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—It was said that so far as the war department was concerned there was no immediate reason for ordering the return of Gen. Pershing. Such an order would come from the president as commander in chief of the army.

RECEIVER GETS THIRD RAIL AS STRIKERS VOTE

Offer of 5 Cents Increase Is Turned Down by the Men.

Aurora, Ill., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Employés of the Aurora, Elgin and Chicago railroad, who have been on strike since July 30 for an increase in wages of 21 cents an hour, this afternoon almost unanimously voted down an offer of the company to raise their wages 5 cents an hour and to pay them time and a half for overtime. The vote was taken at a special meeting in Aurora, Elgin, Wheaton, and Batavia, and out of 511 votes there were only 82 who favored the company's proposition.

While the men were voting announcement was made that Judge Evans, in the United States Circuit court in Chicago, had appointed Joseph K. Choate receiver for the railroad following the filing of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy by attorneys representing the General Electric company of Chicago.

See Hope of Settlement.

The men see in the appointment of the receiver a chance of settlement of the strike at an early date by the granting of their demands.

Edward McMorrow of Chicago, member of the executive committee of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railroad Employés, addressed all four meetings this afternoon. He advised the men to "sit tight."

In the offer of a 5 cent increase to the men Mr. Faber said that the company figured on increasing the fares on the Aurora and Elgin city lines from 6 to 8 cents. With a 5 cent increase the wages of conductors and motormen on the Aurora and Elgin city lines would be 38½, 39½, and 461½ cents per hour; on the Aurora-Elgin branch, 45 cents; on the Aurora-Yorkville, 43 cents, and on the Third Rail, 43, 45, and 51 cents.

Will Retain Faber.

Mr. Choate is vice president of the J. G. White Management corporation of New York. He has had forty years of experience in railroad direction and at present has charge of seven steam and electric lines in the United States, Central America, and the Philippines.

Mr. Choate has announced he will retain Mr. Faber as his representative and general manager.

NO PLAN FOR TRAIN SERVICE

Receiver Choate was reached at the Blackstone hotel. He said that he had made no plans for resuming service on the lines of the company and added that the situation as regards the men is still in the hands of Mr. Faber.

DEATH CALL HEARD

RUGGIERO LEONCAVALLO.

ROME, Aug. 9.—Ruggiero Leoncavallo, the composer, is dead.

Ruggiero Leoncavallo was born in Naples in 1856. He received his musical education in the Conservatory at Naples and at the age of 16 made a tour as a pianist. Leoncavallo probably was best known for his opera "I Pagliacci," which he composed in 1892. He was a man of letters as well as a musician and was a Wagner enthusiast, having done much to make that composer's works popular in Italy.

Others of Leoncavallo's operas were "Medici," "Savonarola," "Trilby," "Cesare Borgia," and "Zaza." He first visited the United States in 1906.

Central Taxing Power Favored for Germany

WEIMAR, Aug. 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Association of States, as the old imperial council is now called, has voted to present to the national assembly the imperial impost tax proposed by Minister of Finance Erzberger.

This decision approves the Erzberger plan of unified imperial taxes, which abolishes the right of states to impose such taxes, and was bitterly contested.

This is regarded as a great personal victory for Erzberger. The Association of States must approve every bill before it goes to the assembly, and its approval often assures the passage of a bill.

6 CENT TICKETS SCORNED, BUYER SEEKS 'L' RULING

Appeals to Utility Body, Citing "Good for One Fare" Clause.

The Circuit court of Sangamon county may be asked to solve the troubles of the forehanded folk who, suspecting a raise in fares would be granted the elevated lines, supplied themselves with a reserve stock of tickets while they could be purchased for 6 cents.

Julius Bauer, 1729 North Francisco avenue, already has appealed to the public utilities commission, complaining that, although the tickets he purchased while the rate was 6 cents, read "good for one fare," the elevated railroad agents now refuse to accept the tickets without payment of an additional 2 cents.

His Ticket Scorned.

In his letter to the utilities commission Mr. Bauer states:

"I presented ticket No. 909759 to the agent of the Metropolitan West Side Elevated railway at the California avenue station of the Humboldt Park branch, and he refused to recognize it as 'good for one fare' without the payment of an additional 2 cents.

"I bought this ticket and some others at the same station on the 6th of August, and paid for this ticket and for the others the prevailing rate of 6 cents. The agent stated she had instructions not to honor this ticket at its face value, which reads 'good for one fare.'"

Mr. Bauer points out that thousands of others have the "good for one fare" tickets, which they cannot use except by paying an additional 2 cents.

Says Contract Exists.

The commission has authorized the railroad company to refuse to honor these tickets, but Bauer points out that the "good for one fare" notation on the ticket makes it a contract between himself and the railroad company, under which the railroad company is bound to allow him a ride in exchange for the ticket.

Germans Find Secret Plans for Big Strike

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—The government announces the discovery of an extensive secret strike movement, which, if successful, will lead to a general railroad strike in central and perhaps all of Germany on Sept. 1. Spartacan and communist agitators are charged with being the leaders of the movement, which the government is using every means to suppress.

TRACTION SYSTEM TO BE MODEL FOR WORLD — MAYOR

Thompson Says He Has Plan for Complete Reorganization.

Mayor William Hale Thompson took another step yesterday in his "fight to the last ditch" against the increase of surface and "L" fares to 7 and 8 cents.

In a signed statement the mayor announced that he will shortly present to the public a plan whereby the "arrogant and autocratic traction policy" of the companies must give way to "a management in the hands of men responsible to the people."

The increase in fares awarded by the public utilities commission, the mayor characterized as a "vicious public hold-up" and the fares are the result of "a long contemplated and adroitly executed plan of the traction bosses," according to the mayor.

Mayor Won't Give Details.

The mayor was not ready to give the details of his plan, which he said is designed to give Chicago "a transportation system which will be a model for the world." Whether it is to be an effort to cancel the 1907 ordinances, leaving the companies operating in the streets "at sufferance" in an attempt to force them into sharing with the public the management of the lines, or further legal steps to revoke the companies' charters, was left to conjecture.

The mayor's declaration of war against the "traction bosses" and the new fares is as follows:

"The decision of the state public utilities commission of Illinois, as it appears to me, is neither fair nor just to the people of Chicago. The imposition of increased street car fares upon the people without a full and complete hearing of the people's side of the case, and without a physical valuation of the companies' properties upon which to compute its earnings and base rates of fare to the public, is unfair and unjust.

"Conscienceless Plunderers."

"The decision serves as a standing reminder to the people of Chicago that they never have and never will receive justice or equity or the benefits of square dealing from the crew of conscienceless plunderers now owning and operating our local transportation lines. A square deal for the people is furthest from any thoughts controlling their profiteering designs. Their action in securing a raise of fares in the manner in which it has been done should wipe out any vestige that might remain of public confidence in the present traction management.

"They obtained the valuable franchises which they hold in the streets of Chicago from the people under a contract to maintain a 5 cent fare, with universal transfers, during the life of these franchises, which still have eight years to run. In the hearing just completed they have willfully ignored the rights of the people, who are the owners of the streets—the most valuable asset to the companies' business. This fully convinces me, and I believe convinces the people of Chicago, that the present traction management is entitled to no future consideration, because it recognizes responsibility only to the companies and none to the people.

Refers to Inaugural Message.

"In my second inaugural message, submitted to the city council on April 28 of this year, I called attention to the fact that the people by their votes in the mayoralty election favored the maintenance of the 5 cent fare, with universal transfers, upon our local transportation lines, and insisted that the terms of the 1907 contract ordinances be complied with until a new traction policy is approved through a referendum vote. Yet, in the face of this mandate, a long contemplated and adroitly executed plan of the traction bosses is consummated to thwart the will of the people.

"The increase in car fares awarded the companies is a vicious public holdup by the brazen and unscrupulous crowd representing the ownership and operation of our street railway systems, who have apparently perfected all the preliminary arrangements for an interminable scheme of wholesale and retail plunder.

"What do the people of Chicago think when they pay their added fares and realize that they are contributing to dividends on over $75,000,000 in watered stock, and to the upkeep of traction officials, drawing salaries of from $40,000 to $60,000 a year, and who hold utter disregard for the public welfare?

Fight to Go On.

"The fight for the 5 cent fare will go on by and with the aid of the people. The fight for better service will go on. The fight for honest traction management will go on. The city government will contest, with every resource at its command, the infliction of this added oppression upon an already overburdened constituency. We will fight the traction magnates now clutching at the public throat until their greed is conquered and their plans of extortion defeated, and until government irresponsive to the people becomes answerable and obedient to the people.

"There is hope for the future. The ultimate result of the present decision will be that the arrogant and autocratic traction policy with which Chicago is afflicted must give way to a management in the hands of men responsible to the people, who can be directed by the people and who will be concerned in the people's interest.

"I shall in the near future present a plan whereby such a situation can be brought about and whereby either the ownership or operation of our traction lines, or both, may be in accord with the reasonable desires of the public, and give Chicago a transportation system which will be a model for the world."

RELEASE SUGAR HOARDS AT ONCE, EDICT BY CLYNE

Links "Price Plot" with Canned Food "Trust"; Goes to Capital.

Linking the "sugar conspiracy" to the $100,000,000 canned food "monopoly" and connecting the two with the prosecution of th epackers, United Staets District Attorney Charles F. Clyne is returning to Washington, D. C., today to make new disclosures as a result of conferences yesterday with his assistants and with Edward J. Brennan, superinetndent of investigation for the department of justice.

A million and a half pounds of sugar stored in one warehouse in Chicago and other vast hoarded stocks must be released at once, declared the district attorney, instructing Mr. Brennan to summon prominent wholesale and retail dealers and deliver the ultimatum. Warrants are being prepared for hoarders on evidence obtained by agents of the department of justice. Mr. Clyne said even the smallest grocer will be prosecuted if caught profiteering.

"Sugar Plot" to Jury.

The assistant district attorney assigned to the prosecution of the "sugar conspirators" Col. H. R. Harris Jr., is in charge of the federal grand jury called for Sept. 1, indicating the first work of the jury will be the sugar case.

"People who have sugar not on the market, whether twenty barrels or twenty thousand barrels, must get it moving," said Mr. Clyne. "Sugar sold in various parts of Chicago today at 10 cents a pound."

The connection of the "sugar price conspiracy" with the canned food monopoly was seen in the fact that at the present time—the canning season—sugar is being withheld and at its highest price so the housewife is unable to do the annual canning of vegetables and fruit. This is a direct play into the hands of the canned food combine, it is declared. The canned food is controlled by three men in Chicago, according to Mr. Clyne. Whether these men are packers he did not state.

May Ask Packers Action Here.

At a conference Monday with Attorney General Palmer it is expected Mr. Clyne will urge that the indictment of the packers be asked of a grand jury in Chicago instead of in Texas, Missouri, Kansas, Ohio, or New York.

"Chicago is no place for the food profiteer, and I am going to see that every individual or clique of men banded together for the purpose of robbing the public is sent to the penitentiary," said Mr. Clyne in a statement early yesterday. "I have a mass of evidence gathered by the federal trade commission and the department of justice and every gouging profiteer or food hoarder will be prosecuted to the limit."

Mr. Clyne returned only last Friday from Washington, where he had been in conference with the attorney general's office as to the method of going about the prosecution of the food hoarders.

He said Assistant United States Attorney General Oliver E. Pagan, indictment expert, would arrive in Chicago some time early next week and go about the preparations for the indicting of the alleged profiteers and hoarders.

Mr. Clyne immediately went into conference with his assistant, R. A. Milroy, Mr. Brennan, and Master in Chancery C. B. Morrison, the last named of whom assisted in the prosecution of the "beef trust" in 1905.

Sheehan Denies Charges.

Charges of profiteering and conspiracy, which have been brought in Pittsburgh against the Central Sugar company of Chicago, are denied by George W. Sheehan, president and owner of the company.

"We are accused of having sold sugar at 15 cents," he said. "The fact was I was selling sugar that cost me from 12.75 cents to 13 cents and took nothing but a legitimate profit. There was no conspiracy; my salesmen simply did as I told them to do."

HARLEQUIN AND COLUMBINE

Circus Folks Who Make the Old Feel Young and the Young Feel Gay.

HURRY! YOU'LL HAVE TO HURRY! CIRCUS PA-RADE!

Ji-gantic Elephunts; Ji-raffes; Taggers; It's All Free.

Over the Van Buren street bridge in Grant Park there is a tented joyland that keeps the kids and the grownups as well sitting on the edges of their seats through about as speedy a hair raising, humorous and neck twisting three hour period as has come to Chicago in a long time in the form of a circus.

And every little kiddie in town is going to have a chance to see it, elephants, lions and all, for the management announced last night they have obtained the permission of the city authorities to have a street parade tomorrow morning. It's going to leave Grant Park at 10:30 o'clock and move through the principal streets. It's all going to be there—1,200 riders and marchers in costume, forty-one elephants and 700 horses—three miles of it, with all the cages of the rolling menagerie open.

Types of All Times.

From the moment the "grand introductory pageant," a flaming, spangled procession of all periods and all nations, moves around the track, until the Roman lady in white tights wins the two horse standing race, there is not a moment when the tension is allowed to relax.

There is a nimble little man named Mons de Long who slides down a rope from the top of the tent to the ground on his head and, not satisfied with that, straps roller skates where his hat ought to be and leaps the gap. There is little Miss Tiny Kline, announced as "the girl who keeps you guessing," and, O yes, there's something brand new at the circus this year—the ringmaster, in stentorian tones, invites all to "kindly" remove their hats.

Death of Barleycorn.

The death of John Barleycorn is mourned by clowndom. You see him carried to his last resting place followed by his family of rednosed mourners and one in particular who bears a large placard: "See America thirst." And there is the 6 months' old eugenics baby that has whiskers and knotty muscles that outdo the men who chop trees down in three minutes.

While one man rushes by in a motorcycle side car labeled "Rushin' bath," waving his Turkish towel and soap on high, there comes whizzing from the other direction a bucking flivver that leaps and snorts and spits until the fat policeman is compelled to dive for safety under the carpet in the center ring. And then comes the kaiser in a barrel, in the garb of Adam save for a large iron cross, moaning "All I've got left is von headache."

The Peanut Butcher.

And one man, with three front teeth missing, who had stood in front of the dollar seats for about five minutes with a large basket of peanuts, finally set the basket down in disgust and bellowed: "Hey! Don't forget! You eat peanuts at a circus!" A shower of nickels came his way. The dollar sitters had thought he was one of the clowns.

But there is one person the reporter failed to see. He feared he might not be equal to the strain. Her picture is splashed in seven colors in front of the sideshow. She is Mme. Suritha, "paragon of panoramic pulchritude, acme of animate art." The reporter is going back to see her. He has until next Sunday afternoon, the closing performance, to brace himself for the ordeal.

NEW POLISH ENVOY IN PARIS.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—Count Maurice Zaoyski. Polish minister to France, presented his credentials to President Poincare this morning.

QUIGLEY TAKEN AS MURDERER OF BANK CASHIER

State's Attorney Hoyne yesterday received word from New York of the arrest there of Frank Quigley, alias Frank Hudson, wanted here for the murder of William Biegel, cashier of the Metropolitan State bank, Thirty-sixth place and Halsted street, who was shot and killed March 13 while resisting an attempted holdup.

The arrest of Quigley, who is charged with having fired the fatal shot, places under arrest the last of the three men who are said to have participated in the holdup.

The prisoner, according to the New York police, denied ever having been implicated in any holdup in Chicago.

The others are William P. Brady and William Fox, who are now in the county jail here charged with murder.

The jealousy of a jilted sweetheart is said to have led to the capturing of Quigley. According to Mr. Hoyne, a woman, who said she was an old sweetheart of Quigley's, came to him Thursday morning and told him that Quigley was in New York, registered at the Hotel Monterey, Ninety-fourth street and Broadway, under the name of Frank Hudson. She said he was living there with another woman for whom she, the informer, had been cast aside.

The New York police were notified and the arrest followed. Because of Quigley's athletic build—he is over 6 feet tall—Sergeants Kane and Brennan, the largest men on the Chicago force, will be sent east today to guard him on the way back.

Brady and Fox were taken into custody soon after the shooting, and both are said to have confessed.

Biegel was shot and died six weeks later in a hospital.

CALLS RAISE IN RENT 'WORTHY OF A STICKUP MAN'

Tenant Says Wm. Mason Jumps Rate from $35 to $55.

Rent increases of William Mason, 2033 Birchwood avenue, are "worthy of a stick-up man," according to J. C. London, 2043 Birchwood avenue, who, with two other tenants, laid their complaints against Mr. Mason before Commissioner of Public Service Reid yesterday.

The number of complaints now in the hands of the commissioner, who is to turn them over to the council investigating committee this week, reached 150 yesterday. The increase in numbers is showing that the complaints tend to group themselves around certain landlords and it is into these increases that the investigating committee will go at its next session.

Jump from $35 to $55.

"While looking for rent hogs kindly investigate W. Mason, 2033 Birchwood avenue," reads Mr. London's letter. "He owns the buildings on Birchwood avenue between Robey street and the Ridge. He has notified his tenants that apartments will be increased Oct. 1 from $35 per month to $55 and $60 per month. The nearest store to these buildings is a mile away and the nearest transportation is on Clark street, a half mile away. Such an increase in this case is worthy of a stickup man."

Says Landlord Adds $16,560.

In a letter to THE TRIBUNE H. E. Green, 4237 Broadway, totals the rent increases of his landlord, William Pickel, with interesting results. The advances on Mr. Pickel's apartments, which go into effect Oct. 1, according to Mr. Green, are as follows:

Seventy-two four room apartments from $35 to $50.

Twelve three room apartments from $22.50 to $45.

Twelve two room apartments, from $32.50 to $45.

"The total rental for the year of these flats is $39,240," writes Mr. Green. "The increase in rent is $16,560 a year, and it does not seem possible that the increased taxes amount to this sum over what the landlord paid last year."

G. W. Lester headed a list of eighteen tenants of the Ferguson court apartments, 4710-4716 North Bernard street, who protested yesterday against rent increases varying from 25 to 33 1-3 per cent, effective Oct. 1.

Complaints of a Day.

Other complaints received yesterday were:

Miss Mae Smith, 3629 Maple Square avenue, $37.50 to $45.

E. H. Levenstein, 1331 South Avers avenue, $45 to $65.

Miss Loeb, 2269 North Kedzie avenue, $40 to $60.

Bernard McMahon, 4232 South Michigan avenue, employed in the city collector's office, an increase of 33 1-3 per cent.

Franklin T. Rinder, 3944 Rokeby street, $35 to $45.

J. L. Johnstone, 5190 Oakdale avenue, $55 to $70.

Three clerks are kept busy in the office of the commissioner of public service compiling the complaints.

312 WOUNDED MEN IN DAY RECEIVE VICTORY BUTTONS

WOUNDED veterans were in evidence in greater numbers than usual yesterday in the long queue of men that lined up at the central recruiting station, 526 South State street, to get their victory buttons. A tabulation by Capt. C. W. Burkett at the close of the day showed of the 1,892 men who appeared for buttons 312 who had been wounded or gassed during their army careers.

The greatest rush began at noon, when the workers were released for the half holiday. Field clerks and army nurses began to appear in greater numbers. A dozen record men and four army nurses brought their discharge certificates and received their buttons.

An announcement from the war department contains the information that additional certificates of merit are to be granted men who were wounded. The certificates bear the name, rank and organization of the recipient, a statement he was wounded in action at such and such a place and the signature of the president. The certificates are to be awarded in the next thirty days to men in the service as well as to those who have been discharged. The latter will receive their certificates through the mail.

A résumé of the last three days at the bureau for returning soldiers, shows that of 929 men who applied for positions, 962 were referred to opening and 615 obtained jobs.

BRITISH LABOR SHIRKED, DIDN'T EARN PAY, CHARGE

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Sir John Hunter, director of factory construction and iron and steel production under the ministry of munitions, today said that in the erection of works for the air ministry no man employed had earned the money he received.

These men numbered 70,000, Sir John declared, and in some cases wages were drawn regularly and charged to the government for men who did not exist.

Sir John added that he had found a conspiracy of government men and contractors, saying some of them were arrested, but the crown declined to prosecute them.

Woman, 76, Burns to Death Warming Her Feet in Oven

After her son John left for work yesterday Mrs. Marie Grimes, 76, thought to warm herself at the kitchen stove in their home at 11830 Harvard avenue. She drew up a chair, opened the oven door, and, seating herself, placed her feet in the oven. Twenty minutes later firemen of engine company 75, called by an alarm turned in by a family living above the Grimes home, found the aged woman burned to death.

Sergt. W. J. Prindiville Marks 30 Years in Service

Several bouquets of American Beauty roses graced the desk of Sergt. W. J. Prindiville at the Gresham station yesterday. A card on the largest read: "Thirty years on active duty today."

Sergt. Prindiville, a practical joker himself, thought he was being made the butt of one by the patrolmen until he looked at the calendar.

GROCER CARLILE KNOWS NOT WHEN TO OPEN "STORE"

Sale of Army Food to Chicago So Far Is Only Fiction.

Inquiries are unanswered and orders unfilled, canned meat and vegetables valued at $1,000,000 remain locked in government warehouses, and the sale of army food to the people of Chicago is apparently only a pleasing fiction.

Postmaster William B. Carlile, the United States grocer, doesn't know when he will open for business. In fact, he stated yesterday, that after days of waiting for instructions from Washington he is without information of the sale other than that carried in the press dispatches.

Nothing Doing.

"There is nothing doing yet," John McGrath, secretary to the postmaster, announced. "The postmaster has not received instructions about the sale, nor the blanks to order from the quartermaster."

At the quartermaster's headquarters a clerk in charge said something about Aug. 18, but he wasn't sure whether that was the date the sale would start or not. But he was positive it hadn't begun. It was up to the postmaster, anyway.

The passing of the buck starts at Washington and ends there.

What They Say in Capitol.

According to the department at the capitol the purchase of army food in Chicago must be through the zone supply office by orders through the postmaster. The details of how the distribution is to be made are up to local officials, Washington states. It may be by parcel post, through the social and playground centers, or the school buildings.

The quartermaster's department in Chicago in turn refers inquiry to the postmaster and the postmaster admits he doesn't know.

"I have wired Washington for information, and I can make no announcement until I receive an answer," Mr. Carlile stated. "I know nothing about the sale except what I see in the newspapers. I cannot understand why I have not been notified. There must be some mistake."

She Just Ran Into His Flat to Take a Bath

It was almost midnight when he found his wife Rose in the apartment of Alexander Pirie, Harry Hanson, 679 North Deafborn street, testified before Judge John M. O'Connor in the Superior court. She gave the explanation that she "had just run in there to take a bath," Hanson said.

"I just went over to see Pirie to make a friendly call," Hanson said, "and when I got there I found my wife in his apartment. She said she just went in to take a bath and get cleaned up a little. In a few minutes Pirie came in and admitted that he had been intimate with her."

Judge O'Connor granted the divorce.

CULVER HONORS CHICAGOANS.

LABOR FIDDLES AS TRADE FALLS, WARNS WORKERS

J. P. Hovland Tells Garment Makers That High Prices Peril Industry.

Likening the makers of women's apparel to Belshazzar feasting while the walls of Babylon were being surrounded, J. P. Hovland at a banquet of the Chicago Designers' association, held at the Auditorium hotel last night, bade labor read the handwriting on the wall and be careful.

"The question of today seems to be, 'How little can we do and how much can we get?'" he said. "Labor's eternal demands for higher wages will result not only in stopping the wages which they are trying to raise but stopping industries themselves.

Fears Loss of Market.

"Women made their own garments before the growth of the industry made it practicable to buy ready made clothing, and they will do it again. Labor must not make the price of ready made garments so high that the great garment buying public will quit buying. The entire future of the industry in Chicago rests with the makers of the garments."

Following the speeches, models clad in the styles of the coming fall and winter promenaded along the runway.

Items on Style.

Milady may take interest in the following schedule drawn up by the dictators of fashion:

W. H. Malone Asks Tax Raise from $150 to $4,500

W. H. Malone, candidate for delegate to the constitutional convention appeared before Edward R. Litzinger of the board of review yesterday requesting him to increase his personal property tax assessment from $150 to $4,500, characterizing the tax lists sent to him as "ridiculous." "I want to see other people pay their taxes," Mr. Malone said, "but before I criticize any tax dodgers I want to be sure I've paid my own just taxes."

DISARM HUNGARY, THEN WE'LL QUIT, SAYS ROUMANIAN

Fought to Save Selves; Budapest Is Under Martial Law.

BULLETIN.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—A dispatch from Budapest says that the new ministry, at its first meeting yesterday, resolved to recognize Archduke Joseph as regent until a national assembly is elected, "so that in these unsettled times there may be one firm center in the country."

PARIS, Aug. 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—"We are at a loss to understand why the allies, and the Americans above all, should criticize Roumania for its action in defeating the bolsheviki in Hungary," said Nicholas Misu of the Roumanian peace delegation today.

"We feel that we have done the entire world a service by giving the Hungarians an opportunity to set up representative government. Furthermore, we were forced to march against Budapest in self-defense. Hungary attacked us and the bolsheviki threatened to overwhelm us from two sides."

Give Time of Removal.

"When other armies refused to move against the Hungarian bolsheviki we moved alone. We shall move our troops from Budapest when the Hungarians have been thoroughly disarmed and no longer threaten our very existence.

"Meantime, we hope the whole world will take pains to learn the truth about the peril which forced us to fight for our lives. We have never left the peace conference and shall obey its orders, but we cannot sign the Austrian treaty if it contains the provisions for the protection of minorities. We believe it is wrong for the big powers to force such conditions on the small powers.

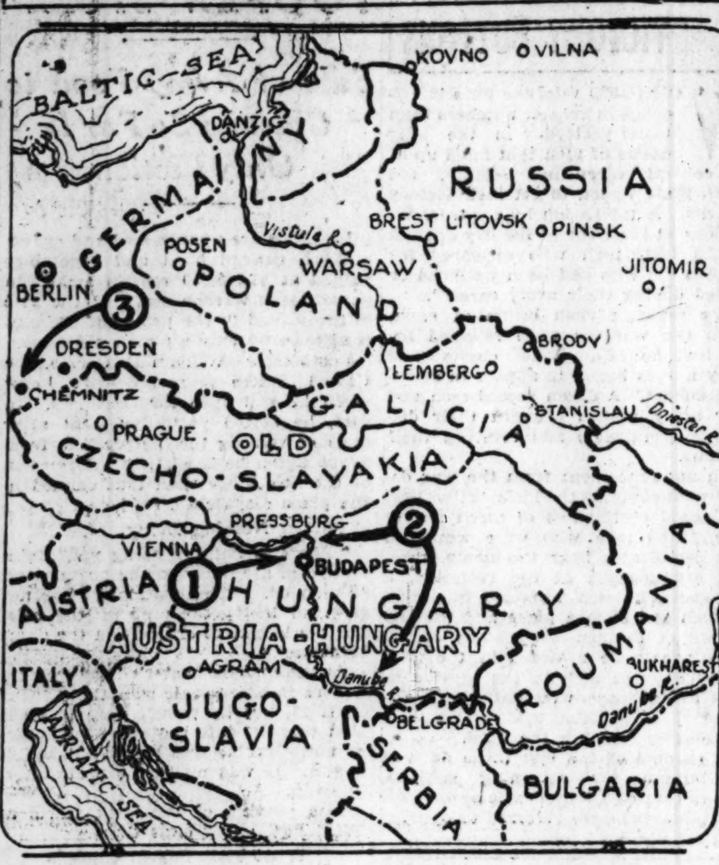
Favored Equal Rights.

"We favored a clause proposed for the league of nations which would have guaranteed the rights of all persons, regardless of race or religion and believe that such action should be taken by all the nations acting together and imposed upon all alike rather than upon a few small powers by the great powers."

M. Misu said that the central powers took 2,000 locomotives from the Roumanians, leaving them only 200, of which eighty were really in good repair.

Roumania probably will get back about 1,000 locomotives under the armistice terms it is enforcing against Hungary, M. Misu declared. These are necessary for reconstruction and work and the fedding of Roumania, he added.

RIOTS IN HUNGARY AND GERMANY



1—Vienna reports that a state of siege has been proclaimed in Budapest. Drastic action has been taken to check threatened pogroms against the Jews. Members of the deposed Peidll ministry have been interned.

2—Dispatches to Paris from American relief officers in Hungary state all transportation, including that on the Danube, has been held up. This has increased danger of famine, and the allied representatives at Budapest have asked the supreme council to force the Roumanians to lift the embargo they have placed on food distribution.

3—Berlin reports fifty persons were killed in rioting at Chemnitz, thirty-eight miles southwest of Dresden, Friday. Troops were overpowered. Reënforcements are being rushed to the affected district.

ASKS RECOGNITION

BY FARMER MURPHY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BUDAPEST, via Paris, Aug. 9.—The new provisional government headed by Archduke Joseph sent a telegram today to Premier Clemenceau of France asking recognition by the allies. He says the new government will convene the national assembly as soon as possible. He guarantees full execution of the terms of the armistice and the reëstablishment of productive work.

"We demand your benevolent support and, in the interest of success of our efforts, recognition of our government," is the way the message concludes. The message was signed by Archduke Joseph, Field Marshal.

The archduke, his prime minister, Friedrich, and other ministers called on the allied representatives today to complain of the action of Roumania who had seized all the stores and provisions and refused to let the already starving city have any. They complained particularly about the appropriation of flour and the cutting off of bakeries from the quantities usually received.

Allies had already had occasion to protest to the Roumanian commander against the blowing up of railroad tracks entering the city, thus preventing the entry of food and coal.

IRON RULE IN BUDAPEST

VIENNA, Aug. 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—A state of siege has been proclaimed in Budapest, Hungary's capital, according to dispatches received here.

It is reported that in view of pogroms which had been threatened in Hungary, menacing the Jews, the commander of the Roumanian troops has issued an order that any crime against Jews will be punished immediately by death.

The Roumanian troops have interned the members of the deposed Peidll ministry, a dispatch from Budapest says.

Allies Back Archduke.

GENEVA, Aug. 9.—[By the Associated Press.]—The allies' mission at Budapest, Hungary, after a conference with Archduke Joseph and Premier Friedrich, has, according to a Vienna dispatch received here, sent to M. Clemenceau, president of the peace conference, a report to the effect that the entente representatives are in full accord with the new Hungarian government, recently established under the presidency of the relative of former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary.

May Vote on Monarchy.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—Delayed.—The Tageblatt's Vienna correspondent says it is believed that the elections for the Hungarian national assembly will give a large majority in favor of the reëstablishment of the monarchy, with Archduke Joseph as king.

SPEED PROGRAM OF LEGISLATION TO SLICE PRICES

had sent word to all absent Democrats to return at once and get to work and Republican leaders recognized the futility of further efforts toward a vacation and made preparations to buckle down to consideration of President Wilson's recommendations next week and to continue work on other pending legislation.

"There always will be bills on the calendar," Mr. Mann said. "If I thought that by staying here for several days, twenty-four hours a day, that we could wind up all legislation for all time, I'd gladly stay. But I'm in favor of congress taking a recess, and whether it does or not, I intend to leave here, and only the designation of a sergeant at arms to keep me here could prevent my going. These bills on the calendar are nothing but chicken feed, anyway."

Clark Urges Quick Action.

"We had better be recognizing conditions as they are," said former Speaker Clark. "We are stuck. We are going to be here until this time next year except perhaps for a week's recess in December. Far from indorsing the idea of a recess as proposed by the gentleman from Illinois, I am going to notify every Democratic member by telegraph to come back here. I think we ought to go on with business."

Representative Green of Iowa, Republican member of the ways and means committee, reminded the house that there are a number of tariff bills on the calendar awaiting consideration.

"The longer they are put off the better it would be for the country," replied Mr. Clark.

Take up Cold Storage Bill.

Representative Haugen of Iowa, chairman of the committee on agriculture, announced that his committee would meet on Monday to consider the cold storage bill introduced recently by Representative Hutchinson of New Jersey.

This bill embodies provisions of the New Jersey law to which President Wilson referred in his address to congress. It provides for the stamping of dates on which food commodities are placed in storage and taken out and limits periods in which different classes of food may be stored without restriction.

The bill does not include any provision for marking the producer's price of commodities upon packages, as recommended by the president. This probably will be provided in a different bill.

Committee Work Tomorrow.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, chairman of the interstate commerce commission, announced tonight that he would call a meeting of his committee Monday to take up those of the president's suggestions with which it will have to deal.

This committee probably will be called upon to consider the president's suggestion for legislation to regulate all corporations engaged in interstate commerce by means of the license system. It also will be required to give its attention to the proposal to stamp the manufacturer's price on all goods carried in interstate commerce.

The federal licensing system already forms the basis of the Kenyon bill to regulate the packing industry. Senator Moses of New Hampshire, Republican, has introduced an amendment to this bill proposing to apply the licensing system to all industries on the theory that it is unfair to single out the packers for special treatment. The Kenyon bill and the Moses amendment probably will be used as the framework in the construction of legislation to carry out the president's suggestions.

Hard Fight in Sight.

That the plan is certain to encounter stubborn opposition has already been made plain by statements and speeches in the senate. Some of the conservative Republicans have lined up against the measure as constituting an unwise and illegal venture into the field of governmental interference in private industry. It will require a coalition of the progressive Republicans and the Democrats to put the licensing plan through, and some of the progressive Republicans are manifesting no great enthusiasm for adoption of the licensing scheme in such a far reaching degree as proposed by the president.

In the opinion of some of the progressives, President Wilson is advocating exactly what the Moses amendment proposes, and they regard the Moses amendment merely as a move to block the packers' legislation.

It is expected that the senate interstate commerce commission will appoint a subcommittee to give detailed consideration to the president's recommendations and make a report as to whether legislation should be drafted to carry them into effect.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

P. M. Holmes was referred to on Aug. 8 as representative of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen and Oilers. Mr. Holmes writes he represented local 402, International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers.

On July 17 a story appeared in THE TRIBUNE regarding a loaded dice expert named Frank Fremont. The police gave his address as 4466 Lake Park avenue. An occupant of this building says no such person has lived there. Her name is similar to Fremont and she says she has been bothered since by stares.

In the item yesterday morning concerning the arrest of Frances Mawson THE TRIBUNE gave her address as 8 East Chestnut street. George L. Meyer, owner of the building, says the girl never lived there.

Three Taken After Chase as Auto Tire Thieves

Three young men, suspected by the police of being tire thieves, were taken into custody after a short chase last night at Franklin and Kinzie streets. They had four new automobile tires in the car. They gave their names as Harold Carr, 175 West Division street; Benjamin Mastrossky, 672 North Clark street, and Robert Dolan, 1712 Crilly court. Mastrossky's father, Samuel, runs a second hand shop at the North Clark street address. When the police went there they found a dozen new automobile tires marked below the wholesale price. They were seized.

ANIMALS ONCE SKINNED, BUT PEOPLE ARE NOW

So Hints Shoe Manufacturer, Explaining the High Prices.

"Formerly the hide dealers and leather men contented themselves with skinning the animals. I've a suspicion they've broadened out of late. It looks to me as if the American people are being skinned a little."

A. M. Legg, president of the A. M. Legg Shoe company, shoe manufacturers of Pontiac, thus replied yesterday when asked:

"Why are shoes so high?"

"You'd learn a lot about who's making money if you'd look up the quotations of some of the big hide and leather corporation stocks, today and back in 1914 or 1915," he added. "Take a slant at the stock, common and preferred of the American Hide and Leather company and see what you find out."

The Stock Market Story.

On Aug. 6, 1915, American Hide and Leather common stock was quoted at 7¾; preferred was quoted at 35 on the New York Stock Exchange. It varied only a few points up and down for a period of several months.

Yesterday American Hide and Leather common closed at 32; preferred at 113. So much for the story of the stock market.

Mr. Legg gave some figures on the prices he is paying for leather, which will be used to make the shoes Chicago folk will buy this winter and next spring.

"I was just down to a leather house," he said, "and bought some black calfskin. I paid $1.30 a square foot for it. That is double what was asked ninety days ago. It is three times what I paid before the war—yes, more than three times. It takes three and three-quarter feet of this to make the uppers for one pair of woman's shoes. It costs as much more to put on the soles, the insoles, the linings and the trimmings. Can you figure what those shoes will cost when I get a fair profit and the retailer gets a fair profit—allowing us the smallest fair margin?

Going Higher.

"Here's another leather—a kid—I use a great deal of. It formerly went into a pair of shoes that retailed for about $4.50. Last November, after the armistice was signed I paid 36 cents a square foot for it—three and three-quarters square feet to a pair of uppers, remember—and in January it went to 39; then it went up as follows: February, 44 cents; March, 55 cents; April, 74 cents; today, 98 cents. Before the war I could buy a pair of good six inch soles for 18 cents a pair—have bought them as low as 16 cents.

"Now they cost 75 cents and are going higher. I know the retailers are now selling shoes for prices at which they will not be able to replace them, for the latest increase in leather has not yet been passed on to the public."

Mr. Legg said the "novelties" in women's footwear were in a measure responsible for some of the high prices.

"Many women buy shoes for style," he said, "not as a commodity they have to have. If we could eliminate the novelties—the changes in styles—there would be some cut in the cost of women's shoes.

"You see the odd colors and novel shapes come and go and the person who buys them while they are in style must pay for the unsold shoes that go on the bargain counter below cost after the fad has passed."

All Higher Now.

With this explanation of the high cost of women's shoes Phil Selzer, buyer for the Boston Store, agreed. He said, however, that no retail shoe dealer could replace his present stock of shoes at the price he was now retailing them.

"The shoes we are buying today," he said, "which will go on sale in winter are from $1 to $5 a pair higher than was the same quality when last we bought. Yet the public seems to want only the highest priced goods.

"In the cheap grades of working men's shoes the advance has been as marked as in the higher grades. Take boys' shoes—split leather frequently—shoes I bought six months ago for $1.58 now cost me $2.20. And that's the kind of shoe we retailed for about a dollar before the war."

Brogans Up 100 Per Cent.

Archer G. Wormley, who acts as manufacturer's agent and sells in big lots to construction company commissaries in the west and southwest, declared the cheap, heavy, working shoe, which was worn by men on rough construction work, had advanced in price some 100 per cent in the last six months.

"A shoe we priced to a track worker or tunnel driver at $2 to $3, now costs us from $3 to $4 in big lots," he declared.

W. J. Gibbs, general manager of the shoe departments of Marshall Field & Co., declared the grade of shoes now being sold for $10 would retail for from $16 to $18 in the spring.

"We can't replace our present stock at the price for which we are retailing it," he declared. "My only hope is that leather has reached its peak, but, of course, the present leather prices have not yet reached the consumer.

"I feel an embargo on leather is the only way to save the situation. All the world wants leather and the American manufacturer is forced to bid against the world to get leather. An embargo would soon place an accumulation in the hands of the leather men and they would be required to move some of it at lower prices. An embargo is the only solution I see."

READY

Marine Who Prepares Clubrooms to Welcome Belleau Wood "Buddies."

William M. E. Hess

William M. E. Hess, who was with the 80th company of the 6th marines at Belleau Wood, is getting the clubrooms of the United States Marine Corps league at 17 North Wabash avenue in tiptop shape to welcome several hundred "buddies" expected to reach Chicago soon.

Hess, who enlisted in the marine corps in April, 1914, and was present at the Vera Cruz occupation, was wounded at Belleau Wood and received a divisional citation and Croix de Guerre.

He was recommended for superintendent of the Chicago clubrooms by Maj. Gen. George Barnett. Samuel P. Thrasher, president of the league, has appealed to the public for subscriptions to meet the expenses of welcoming home the boys.

500 MILLION DRY HOTEL DEFICIT TO BE PAID IN RENTS

Loss of Liquor Revenues Means Big Boost in the Charge for Rooms.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Nation-wide hotel rate increases to cover deficiencies in earnings caused by prohibition will cost the public approximately $500,000,000 during the next year, according to the Association Opposed to National Prohibition, which has investigated the hotel phase of the high cost of living.

Other results of the investigation show there is hardly a section, large and small cities included, whether in former "wet" or "dry" territory, that rate advances have not taken effect. In some cities hotels contemplate additional increased rates.

Up to the Little Old Public.

"The public," says Edward Tierney of the Biltmore, New York, "will have to make up the deficit caused by prohibition. The hotel business is like any other business. If a part of its revenue is cut off it must be made up some other way. Nearly every large hotel in New York has advanced rates from 5 to 20 per cent. A $7,500,000 hotel project on Seventh avenue has been abandoned."

Raises Justified, Says Hicks.

Leonard H. Hicks of Chicago, president of the Greeters of America, justifies the raises by declaring the average hotel has not made more than 6 to 10 per cent gross income for a long time.

The net income of from 3 to 6 per cent has been so severely reduced by prohibition that the Chicago raises are from 50 cents to $3 and $4 a day in the Blackstone, La Salle, Stratford, Auditorium, Planters, Atlantic, and Brevoort hotels, and further advances in Chicago may come if wartime prohibition doesn't end soon and the high cost of commodities and labor keeps up."

U. S. to Act on Barring of Abyssinian Prince

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 9.—Gen. H. H. Hopakyan, consul general for Persia at New York, who arrived here yesterday, announced that the state department at Washington had assured him that it would investigate the action of the National Democratic club of New York barring from its rooms Prince Dedajazmatch of Abyssinia. He also said that the state department had sent a wireless to the prince, who is now on his way home, expressing the regret of the United States government that he had met with any discourtesies while in this country.

Joliet Car Men Reject 10 Cent Wage Increase

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 9.—Although street car company officials announced today that an offer of a wage increase of ten cents an hour would be renewed to striking employés of the Joliet Electric railway, union leaders stated that the offer would be rejected. The men are asking from 2 to 4 cents higher than the offer. Street car service has been tied up since Tuesday. It was intimated that efforts would be made to arbitrate the trouble.

Britain Will Supervise Price of Ham, Lard, Bacon

LONDON, Aug. 9.—George H. Roberts, food controller, announced the government had decided to resume control of the supply and distribution of imports of bacon, ham, and lard and that the prices to be charged would also be under supervision.

BROOKLYN CARS WILL RUN TODAY; STRIKE SETTLED

Men to Go Back to Work as Conferees Discuss Pay.

New York, Aug. 9.—The strike which for four days has paralyzed traffic on the surface, subway, and elevated lines of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company was called off tonight after an agreement had been reached between representatives of the strikers and Lindley M. Garrison, receiver for the company.

Won't Debate on Union.

The men insist, however, that the question of recognition of the union is not open to debate.

Mr. Garrison practically has agreed to recognize the union if it can be shown that 50 per cent of the men were members of the union at midnight Aug. 8.

If that is shown conferences will follow and what cannot be settled there will go to a board of arbitration. Service will be resumed tomorrow morning.

The three demands which the strikers are willing to leave to arbitration are an eight hour day, an increase in pay to 75 cents an hour, and reinstatement of men dismissed from the service for union activities.

More Car Men Make Demands.

Employés of the New York and Queens county railway, which operates surface lines in the borough of Queens, presented demands to the company today with a request for an answer by next Tuesday.

Three questions are asked: First, if the company objects to organization of the employés; second, when the women conductors employed during the war are to be dismissed; third, whether wages will be paid similar to those given corresponding employés in Manhattan.

Butcher's Wired Scales Cheated Patrons, Charge

Unabashed by the cries of his fellows in the throes of the H. C. L., Frank Bielawski, whose meat market is at 1647 Keenan street, is charged by inspectors from the city sealers' office with having increased his daily receipts by attaching a wire to the bottom of his scales. The wire is alleged to have cut down the weight of the meats Bielawski sold and increased the receipts of his shop at the expense of his patrons. He was given a summons to appear in the Municipal court.

ACCIDENTAL SHOT KILLS BOY.

Martin Mollema, 16 years, 55 West One Hundred and Third street, died yesterday as the result of a bullet wound inflicted accidentally by Arie Craaybeck, 147 West One Hundred and Third street, when the young men were playing with a revolver in the latter's home. Craaybeck is being held.

BUILDING STRIKE TO BE EXTENDED OVER MIDWEST

Unions Order Wide Action Against the Chicago Contractors.

Building throughout the middle west is scheduled by union leaders to slump tomorrow morning, in varying degree in different cities. Chicago's labor troubles are to be spread to various cities as the result of the action of the local building trades council in ordering out workmen employed by Chicago contractors in other cities, even in other states.

"Detroit, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Milwaukee—practically every large city of the middle west—will be affected," declared William Brims, president of the carpenters' district council of Chicago, yesterday. He refused to estimate the number of men involved and said he could not name definitely all cities where they would walk out.

"Wherever a Chicago contractor has a job on which union men are employed, whether it is in Butte, Toledo, or Jersey City, work will stop," he said.

O'Donnell Repeats Statement.

Simon O'Donnell, president of the building trades council, reiterated his statement of Friday that union men in other towns employed by Chicago contractors would be called out. "This is their last day at work," he said.

Building would not get under full headway at once with the breaking of the deadlock between contractors and workers; the longer it takes to break the deadlock the slower will be the resumption of activity, according to Mr. O'Donnell.

About 6,000 skilled workmen—carpenters and bricklayers principally—have left Chicago, he declares, and are working in other cities. "Let the lockout continue another week or so and they will be well established in their jobs," he said. "Their families will be with them and they will be reluctant to move again. Now they look forward to returning to Chicago when the lockout ends. But let it continue too long and they will prefer to stay where they are."

Seeks Federal Action.

With representatives of each of the unions making up the council Mr. O'Donnell will leave for Washington on Tuesday in an effort to induce the federal department of labor to step in and end the deadlock, and to present a demand that measures be taken by the government to lower the high cost of living.

A conference between workers and contractors will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, but no results are looked for. "We are deadlocked," Mr. O'Donnell said. "Our only hope is federal intervention."

Lake County to Prosecute.

State's Attorney James G. Welch of Lake county joined yesterday with Cook county in an effort to break the lockout of building trades workers brought on by the strike of carpenters.

State's Attorney Welch, who says the Lake county situation is dominated by the Chicago contractors and building material men, told the construction material dealers in his territory that they must open their shops within ten days or face conspiracy prosecutions.

According to Attorney Hope Thompson, who represents the carpenters' unions, State's Attorney Welch has the admission of several of the Lake county dealers that they were ordered to close their plants and refuse to sell material, or even to deliver material sold or contracted for, by the Chicago association.

PEORIA SHERIFF ASKS STATE AID TO CURB STRIKE

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 9.—Sheriff Clay of Tazewell county today appealed for state assistance in quelling violence in the strike zone at East Peoria.

The principal disorders have occurred near the plant of the Altorfer Bros. company, where 500 employés have been on strike for two weeks. There is imminent danger of an outbreak in the industrial zone, which may develop into serious proportions, the sheriff believes.

Strikers attacked a truck driver yesterday, and today prevented removal of the machinery in one of the Altorfer plants to the Bartholomew plant in Peoria.

Gen. Dickson after investigating the situation decided that troops were not needed at Peoria.

Students of Vocal Music Unpopular in Evanston

Irving Hamlin, secretary of the school of music at Northwestern university, is experiencing great difficulty this season in obtaining boarding places for the co-eds, who heretofore have found no trouble in obtaining lodging in Evanston homes. The enrollment is something like 210 students, as compared with the usual 150.

"It's because music students, especially the vocal ones, make such a dickens of a noise practicing," explained one Evanstonian.

WRECK KILLS EIGHT, HURTS THIRTEEN.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 9.—Eight were killed and thirteen injured when a work train on the Mexican Central railroad crashed through a temporary bridge between Chihuahua City and Jimenez Wednesday, according to reports received here from Chihuahua City today. All the killed and injured were Mexicans.

U. S. IS LAND OF MILK AND HONEY TO GAUNT ALLIES

Vast Food Shipments and Financial Aid Held Vital to Europe.

ica. Canada can provide 2,000,000 tons, and the balance must come from Argentina and Australia, as India's crop probably will be used at home because of recent famines.

Both Australia and Argentina have huge supplies of grain, but through lack of shipping and because of inadequate port facilities in these two countries, Europe will obtain every kernel of grain she can get from the United States, even at higher prices, before sending ships on the longer haul to get Argentine and Australian cereals.

The American export of 10,000,000 tons of grain should not send prices at home any higher, as America can afford to ship that amount and does not need it at home. On the contrary, if Europe does not take that amount, America will suffer heavy losses, as it is all surplus grain.

Europe will not greatly increase its purchases of cold storage meat from America. In the first place, Europeans are not great meat eaters; secondly, too much machinery is involved in sending refrigerated meat. Refrigerated ships are necessary to haul the meat across the ocean; then cold storage depots are necessary on this side to keep the meat in; and, finally, refrigerated freight cars are needed to distribute it.

Cold Storage Facilities Few.

There are very few cold storage depots in European ports and mighty few refrigerated cars. Little increase in meat exports to Europe may, therefore, be looked for.

The grain situation is the principal problem, as the European menu consists of 40 per cent breadstuffs, and they can get along with almost anything else if they get thier bread ration. Hungary, Transylvania, and Banat Tamesvar form the European granary since Russia is outside of consideration.

Reports from these regions show the crop is very encouraging, save for a shortage of fertilizer. Instead of the normal crop of 800,000 tons, it is expected between 600,000 and 700,000 tons will be obtained; and this despite the fact that the farmers lacked seed and draft animals and the almost essential agricultural implements.

Everywhere, it is reported, the farmers are using what few milch cows remain as horses in their farm work.

Roumania's Harvest Short.

Northern Bulgaria and Roumania heretofore furnished a large part of the cereal crops, and the indications are they will reap nearly normal crops, although Roumania's corn crop will be about only half the usual amount, which was 90,000,000 bushels. The 45,000,000 bushels harvested will be due largely to Hoover's sending a shipload of seed corn and getting it there just in time for the planting.

Crops in Poland are good, although the Russians and Germans fought over the farm lands three or four times.

Every one agrees Germany's crops are above the average, particularly in wheat and rye.

Belgium is in good shape and will nearly attain pre-war crops; but northern France is not expected to produce anything at all, despite the fact that this region produced nearly normal amounts while the Germans occupied it. France normally produced 342,000,000 bushels of wheat, but will run several millions of tons short this year.

The beet crops are not expected to aid the sugar situation much, as not enough acreage was sown to bets, and a large part of the French sugar beet factories were destroyed; most of them were situated along the western front.

England must look to Cuba and America for sugar for another year, it is believed.

Italy needs 3,000,00 tons of breadstuffs during the ensuing crop year, but does not consume much sugar, being the lowest per capita sugar consumers in the world. She is independent regarding fats, though utilizing olive oil.

Plenty of Potatoes in Sight.

The potato situation will adjust itself, as they are usually grown in small patches and seldom are exported. Through proper seed distribution during the coming year it is expected potatoes will become about normal.

The live stock situation is more serious, as whatever countries German troops occupied were practically stripped clean of cows, hogs, sheep, and horses. Wherever possible, European nations are buying live stock from North and South America, and will make good the hog shortage through breeding. The lack of horses will be a serious factor through slowing up farming and because the animals fetch such high prices.

The financing and feeding of Europe present a difficult problem, as under the American appropriation Poland got $50,000,000; Czecho-Slovakia, $45,000,000; Roumania, $25,000,000, and Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Jugo-Slavia large sums also.

Germany Paid in Gold.

Germany and Bulgaria have paid gold for everything from the United States so far, and Turkey paid cash also, while Finland paid in American credits. Now that the credits are shut off, there is no way these small, newly created states can obtain funds except through private bankers in the United States, as England, France, Italy and Germany cannot make loans in their present financial conditions.

It is feared, however, that if the small states borrow from private American interests they may spend the money abroad, say, in Argentina, Brazil, Australia, Japan, and Germany.

With exchange fluctuating and every one seeking the cheapest market and holding off their buying until the last moment, shipping conditions are congested worse than they would be normally and the late purchaser runs a strong chance of not getting deliveries when promised.

Despite the acute shipping crisis, there are thousands of cases of boats being tied up at docks for days and weeks without discharge, and this aggravated now by strikes.

Railways in Bad Shape.

European railways are in bad condition everywhere, particularly in southeastern Europe; but if the locomotives can get coal they can distribute goods, even though slowly.

But regardless of how the European situation works out, it should not tend to increase prices in America, as the only commodities which would be exported, except pork, are commodities which are raised and prepared especially for export and which are not needed for home consumption.

French Expert Sees Error in U. S. Selling Wheat at Loss

BY WALTER DURANTY.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

PARIS, Aug. 9.—"The high cost of living in France is due, substantially, to the same causes as in America, but there are certain factors here and in the rest of Europe which make the situation more acute than it is in the United States," said one of the most competent authorities on the subject in Paris.

"In the United States, as in France, there is an abnormal currency inflation, transportation difficulties, profiteering, and an excess of demand over supply as a result of the narrow supplies pending the next harvest, but the French problem is greatly complicated by an unfavorable exchange, a vast decrease in home production as the result of the war, a lack of oversea transportation with high freight rates, and deteriorated rolling stock and roadbeds in France.

Amerca Has Advantage.

"In America food production has never been so abundant. Your exchange is the highest of all the nations that took part in the war, and your transportation, though temporarily somewhat disorganized by strikes, has not suffered in the war as in the case of France.

"The result is that though food prices have risen, they are relatively far lower than here—the average American cost figure standing at 209, as compared with the pre-war figure of a hundred, whereas the French average now reached 308.

Few Foods as Staples.

"As a matter of fact, I do not believe the people generally realize that a certain limited number of staples form in themselves over 90 per cent of the nation's food. Even in America bread takes up 20 per cent of the diet total, fats another 20, while beef, pork, and sugar account for most of the remainder.

"The people will make more fuss over a rise of 10 cents a dozen on eggs than a cent a pound on bread, yet eggs, fish, and poultry lumped together make up less than 2 per cent of the national food consumption.

"The system in vogue in the United States during the war of fixing a fair wholesale price by agreement between producers and food authorities, and then adding legitimate profits—by a similar agreement—for intermediaries and retailers, worked admirably."

BUILD 47 SHIPS FIRST YEAR AT EASTERN YARD

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 9.—A world's record for ship production was established at Hog Island the first year it was in operation, forty-seven steel cargo carriers, aggregating 367,775 deadweight tons, having been sent down the ways up to Aug. 5, its first launching anniversary.

Thirty-six of these vessels, with a total deadweight tonnage of 281,700 tons, have been delivered to the government, and several others are about ready for delivery.

In making this announcement tonight the American International Shipbuilding corporation said the present contract for 122 vessels will be completed about September, 1920.

T. R. HITS FAMILY FOE, DEMOCRATS, IN MAIDEN SPEECH

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 9.—In his first public speech in his campaign for nomination as one of Nassau county's Republican candidates for the assembly, Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt touched on national affairs and attacked the Democratic party.

The address was made at a clambake held here today by the Republican county organization. Introduced by Secretary of State Hugo as "the coming man," Col. Roosevelt said in part:

"The Democratic organization has done its utmost to upset the American idea of a representative government. The chief executive has become the whole show and congress and the senate merely a rubber stamp."

STRIKER IGNORES COURT ORDER.

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 9.—Ignoring the temporary restraining order against the Standard Steel Car company strikers, Frank Zinevich, one of the strikers picketing the plant, attacked an employé while the latter was on his way home and was arrested. He will face a court trial tomorrow.

More Power that Becomes Transportation
—More Transportation for Every Dollar Spent

Back of the designing of the Oakland Sensible Six is this engineering purpose: that it shall deliver high grade travel miles at minimum cost of ownership, operation and maintenance.

This purpose is realized in the experience of Oakland owners everywhere who describe the extraordinary ability of their cars, report unusual freedom from even minor troubles, and regularly send in records of 18 to 25 miles on a gallon of gasoline and 8,000 to 12,000 miles on a set of tires.

A basic reason for the efficiency and economy of the Oakland Sensible Six is found in its exceptionally high proportion of power to weight, meaning that a greater percentage of power is actually converted into transportation by the Sensible Six than by practically any other motor car.

Oakland Year 'Round Cars

The new Oakland Sensible Six Four-Door Sedan and the Coupe have roomy bodies in which rigid construction has been attained without the customary weight; consequently their ability and economy is quite as conspicuous as in the open models.

Both are motor carriages that evidence a value in materials and workmanship which positively could not be produced without the enormous resources and experience back of the Oakland Sensible Six.

SHOPMEN CHIEFS TO TAKE COUNCIL HEADS TO HINES

Surrender in Spite of Wilson's Backing; Maher Flees Hall.

Forty thousand striking railroad shopmen of the Chicago district council won the first victory yesterday over their international officers despite the influence President Wilson has thrown behind the union's recognized chiefs.

They compelled M. A. Maher, vice president of the boilermakers, and four other car and shopmen's principal executives to consent to accompany three representatives of the council to Washington today that the strikers' grievances may be presented personally to Director General of Railroads Walker D. Hines.

Meet Hines Tomorrow.

It was announced Maher had consented to use his influence to obtain the interview, notwithstanding the president announced on Thursday the strikers' demands would not be considered until they had returned to their posts.

The meeting with Mr. Hines will be held tomorrow afternoon, and meanwhile the strike will continue.

Men Threaten Maher.

Maher left a meeting of the men at Ryan's hall, Sixty-fifth street and Cottage Grove avenue, in great haste last night after threats of personal violence was made. He was chased half way down the stairs which lead from the hall to the street; but at that juncture his pursuers decided to send a committee to find out what they wished to know.

The vice president of the boilermakers had declined either to affirm or deny he had been responsible for a statement in an afternoon newspaper branding the strikers as "anti-administration."

125 vs. 300 Pounds.

Maher weighs nearly 300 pounds.

J. J. Collins, who undertook to interrogate Maher in his capacity as the meeting's chairman, tips the scale at 125.

"The stone age is past," Collins declared, "and we don't like to use force. But you've got to answer that question."

Whereupon Maher glanced over the assemblage and started for the door.

At the Strand hotel, Sixty-third street and Cottage Grove avenue, where he and the other international officers have apartments, he admitted to the committee he had made the statement, but said he regretted it. A retraction was promised when he "got around to it."

Two Trunks of Evidence.

Collins said he and the council's other representatives would carry to Washington two trunks full of evidence to show Mr. Hines the international officers had been guilty of misrepresenting their constituents. The men accuse particularly John Anderson, another vice president of the boilermakers, of holding up their demands.

Former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, who telegraphed to the president yesterday requesting an audience with Mr. Hines for four members of the local council, probably will accompany the party.

Men Return Slowly.

The traffic situation on lines in the middle west showed little change yesterday.

R. H. Aishton, Northwestern regional director, named twenty-four shops at which men were beginning to return to work, the largest number at Como on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul. Telegraphic advices reported similar action at Macon and Savannah, Ga., and Nashville, Tenn.

At Springfield and Joliet, Ill.; Atlanta and Birmingham, Ga.; Boston; Memphis, Tenn.; Logansport, Ind.; Butte, Mont.; Port Huron, Mich., and Cincinnati, however, the men voted to resist the president's appeal.

900 Quit at Hammond.

The council announced 900 Monon shopmen had quit at Hammond, Ind., and further complication is promised tomorrow when Pullman car shop employés will walk out.

Virtually no freight was moved by any railroad except foodstuffs, milk, and ice. All except a few of the lines refused to accept nonperishable products.

The Chesapeake and Ohio was the only road to revise its passenger schedule. It restored two trains cancelled Friday and suspended two others—locals between Chicago and Cincinnati.

No. 2 leaving Chicago for Cincinnati at 11:20 p. m., and No. 3, leaving Cincinnati for Chicago at 5:30 p. m., were withdrawn.

The trains restored were Nos. 7 and 8, which make corresponding runs in the morning.

Chicago Worst Sufferer.

"Chicago has suffered most heavily from the walkout as far as impared man power is concerned," said Mr. Aishton, "but it has felt the effect of it the least.

"It is safe to say that through passenger service and the transportation of food, milk and ice may be maintained indefinitely."

It is estimated the daily cost of the strike to shopmen in Chicago alone is $240,000, and in the entire middle western territory probably in excess of $500,000.

The international officers arrived here Friday to attempt to settle the walkout.

Hold Secret Meetings.

They began their negotiations with the men at a massmeeting in Ryan's hall during the morning. A committee of fourteen was named to attempt to agree upon a plan.

Secret conferences ensued at the Strand hotel, which resulted in the report to the massmeeting at night that the international chiefs had consented to the Washington pilgrimage.

Southern Workers to Go Back.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 9.—Although union railway shopmen in Atlanta and Birmingham continued to remain away from their work today, the promised return Monday of 4,000 striking shopmen at Macon, Ga., and Albany, Ala., appreciably improves the situation in the southeast. At Columbus, Ga., 500 more strikers voted to return.

4,500 Vote to Stay Out.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 9.—By virtually a unanimous vote the 4,500 railway shopmen on strike here tonight voted to remain out.

RAIL LAWYER DENIES THREAT OF VIOLENCE

Plumb Continues to Hold His Plan Is Not Socialistic.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—Organized labor will not attempt to impose the Plumb plan for railroad control on other industries unless employés and the public desire it, and its fight for public ownership of utilities will not stop until it has reached that point where "grant and privilege cease."

This was the message delivered today by Glenn E. Plumb, speaking as labor's representative, to the house interstate commerce committee, which for three days has been holding hearings on tripartite control of the transportation systems.

It was spoken calmly, after the witness, worn out by the long ordeal on the witness stand, but still smiling, had denied that the plan was socialistic.

Denies Threats of Violence.

Again today Plumb pounded the table and denied in terms calculated, he said, to brook no repetition of the charge that the railroad brotherhoods had attempted by threats of violence or strikes to force congress to adopt his plan for control of the railroads by the public, operating officials and employés.

The denial was made first in a statement from Plumb's office and signed by the heads of fifteen brotherhoods and later while Plumb was answering a hot fire of questions from Representative Dewalt, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, who wanted to know where the new idea would stop.

Statement by Rail Men.

"We unite in a definite assertion that we have no desire and have had none," said the statement, and also Plumb, who paraphrased it, "to impress upon the public, by violence, or by threat, our proposal that the railroads be nationalized under 'tripartite' control.

"Two distinctly separate considerations now confront the people, the wage requirements of the railroad employés and the Sims bill [embodying the railway employés' plan for reorganization of the railroads].

"We do hold to our conviction that the railroad employés are in no mood to consign themselves finally to the autocratic control of financial dictators, but in proposing the elimination of capital and the tripartite directorate we have no purpose of intimidation.

"We appeal to the statesmanship of America and to the common sense of American manhood and womanhood. We believe in the native ability of American labor. What we ask is the Americanization of the railroads."

Labor would be blind to its own interests, Plumb added with emphasis, if it attempted violence.

Heartily Backs His Plan.

Plumb stood his ground while Representatives Dewalt, Montague, Democrat, Virginia; Merritt, Republican, Connecticut, and others, asked questions which they intimated were intended to point out defects in the Plumb plan.

Representative Montague particularly wanted to know, if, in buying the railroads, the government would pay for tracks and lines built out of profits. Plumb said it would not.

Representative Dewalt inquired if the Plumb plan was leading to Socialism. Plumb said it was not.

Representative Merritt wanted to know if the plan would be extended to gas plants, trolley lines and the like, and Plumb said it would—that he had in mind all corporations doing business on privileges which the individual could not enjoy.

Would Help P. O. Department?

Plumb cited the case of the postoffice department, "the only great industry politically managed," and said its efficiency would be greatly increased if the employés had a voice in its management, "or if it were operated under the democratic principles of this bill."

Citing the case of railway executives who had advanced from the ranks, Representative Montague asked Plumb if he had found evidence of undue repression which would halt the upward march of the under man. Plumb quite agreed that a majority of the highest paid railroad men today went up from the bottom, but insisted that they were not advanced through vote or voice of employés. He wanted employés to pass on a man's right to go higher.

Need Voice in Army.

Carrying out the same line of thought, Plumb said in the army there were many able officers, but there would have been a larger number of good ones had the privates been given a voice in their selection.

When Plumb left the committee room during the afternoon to return again Monday he went into conference on railroad control. Later, he announced, information would be put before the committee in support of his charge that there had been systematic plundering of the great railway systems of the country.

Senator Hitchcock [Dem.], Nebraska, the White House spokesman in the senate, announced today that he was opposed to the plan of the railroad brotherhoods for reorganization of the railroads. Replying to an inquiry from brotherhood officials in Nebraska, Senator Hitchcock said:

"In my opinion, congress would not be justified in enacting such radical legislation without a mandate from the people. The railroad organizations have raised a very large question—one that should not be passed upon by congress without becoming the issue in a general election. I am opposed to the bill."

Germany Broken Nation, Declare British Scientists

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Germany is a broken nation, both in body and spirit, and a long time will elapse before the efficiency of its people is restored. This is the statement in a report by British scientists who investigated food conditions in Germany. The report is issued in the form of "white papers" today.

GIVE CONGRESS 7 RAIL PLANS TO CONSIDER

See Opposition Brewing to Plumb Proposal of Employes.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—The railroad brotherhoods have encountered stiffer opposition in congress than they anticipated to their demand that the government buy and nationalize the railroads of the country on a profit sharing basis with the workers.

But opposition in congress has only stirred the leaders in this revolutionary economic movement to greater activity and they have set out with the approval and assistance of the American Federation of Labor on a systematic campaign of education of the public, with a view to bringing such enormous public pressure on congress that members will yield to the demand from home that the railroads be turned over to the government under the proposed "tripartite" plan, with the government, general public, and railroad workers in the copartnership.

Will Raise $3,000,000.

To do this the brotherhoods propose to raise at least $3,000,000 by Labor day, the money to be procured at the rate of $1 per head from memberships solicited to the "Plumb plan league," the organization formed to conduct labor's fight to take the railroads from private ownership for all time. This money will be used to defray the expense of a nation-wide campaign.

Leaders in both houses of congress insist that they are not going to be frightened or stampeded by the brotherhoods as they were when the threat of a general strike in 1917 put over the Adamson law which gave the workers increased wages aggregating $60,000,000.

Consider Other Plans.

Other plans of settling the railroad problem are to be given consideration, they declare, and several are now being studied seriously by the committees in charge of such legislation. Among plans submitted are these:

1. The railway executives, represented by A. P. Thom, want the railroad properties back under exclusive government regulation and with federal financial assistance; their plan would eliminate regulatory laws of the various states exercised before the government took over the roads as a war emergency.

2. The railroad security holders, represented by S. Davies Warfield, want government regulation with a fixed percentage rate of return on property investment in the railroads.

3. The state railroad commissions, represented by Charles E. Elmquist, have a plan which involves federal and state regulation, the states to retain certain jurisdiction over the carriers.

4. Representative Esch, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, has still another plan embodying benefits of government operation with enlarged powers for regulation by the interstate commerce commission.

5. Representative Sims proposed government ownership of fixed railroad property, real estate, terminals, etc., the roads to pay rental to the government therefor.

Lenroot Has Measure.

In addition to these proposals the senate committee on interstate commerce is wrestling with the problem and Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin is preparing a measure to be introduced soon which embodies features of nearly all other proposals, including participation of labor in the profits. The Lenroot bill would provide:

A corporation to be created with authorized capital sufficient to acquire all of the railways of the country, a temporary organization, to consist of the interstate commerce commission, acting as a temporary body of directors, pending permanent organization.

A corporation is to be authorized to acquire railway properties upon the basis of compensation to be fixed in the law, the capital stock of the corporation to be sold to the public at not less than par or issued to the owners of the railroads in exchange for their properties. All stock issued to have a guaranteed return by the United States of 3½ per cent per annum.

President Appoints Six.

The permanent organization is to be effected by the creation of a board of directors consisting of eleven members, six of whom shall be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, three of the directors to be selected by the stockholders of the corporation and two by the employés.

The terms of the board of directors shall be ten years, except as to the first appointments.

State railway commissions shall be preserved with provisions for their coöperation with the interstate commerce commission.

Provision shall be made that the net income of the corporation in excess of 6 per cent per annum upon the capital stock shall be divided between the stockholders, the government, and the employés.

Which will you have, a pile of rent receipts or a home in Westwood ?

This property is in the very center of the home section of Chicago's Southwest Side. It is high, level, wooded property that is being developed exclusively for people who want to build homes surrounded by refinement and value making influences. Two blocks away is beautiful Marquette Park. The Northern boundary of the property is Marquette Road—an important link of the South Side boulevard system. It has fine transportation on Western Ave. and on Sixty-ninth Street and is improved with sewer, water, gas, and cement sidewalks, all included in the price of each lot.

Westwood Is Southwest Side Restricted Home Property

The demand today for restricted residential property in Chicago is greater than it has been in the last twenty years. When people build a home or a flat building in which they intend to live, they want to know that in the future development of their neighborhood there will be no unsightly shacks, no unkept streets, no wooden buildings, and that within a term of years the development of the neighborhood will make all of the property in that section worth more per front foot than they paid for it.

Westwood Protected in Its Development and Future Values.

Westwood is protected with restrictions which include a fifteen foot building line on residence streets, no frame dwellings, and no building costing less than $3,500.00. The districts surrounding it have similar restrictions, and by visiting Westwood and examining the development of these districts you will know exactly how Westwood will improve in value as it is built up.

Here Is a Solution of Your High Rent Cost Problem.

Buy a lot in Westwood today. By taking this action you will save from 15% to 50% on what you will pay for property in this section a year from today. As soon as you have completed the purchase of the lot you can go to any reliable loan man and borrow within $500.00 or $1,000.00 of the cost of a bungalow or a two-flat building. By using the same amount which you would be obliged to pay for rent plus a small weekly saving out of your earnings, you can entirely pay this mortgage in from five to seven years.

Westwood Has Big Lots, Fine Air, Good Schools and Neighborhood Facilities.

Residence lots at Westwood are all 30 feet wide by 125 feet deep. Here you have fertile soil and plenty of shade. In the neighborhood are public and denominational schools and churches, stores, shops, banks, garages and every requirement of the man who desires to build his home at once in this beautiful restricted neighborhood, with every city advantage. Westwood fulfills a great demand by the people who work on the Southwest Side for a home district with good neighbors that will be built up by their kind of people. In Westwood you will be near your work and can bring up your family in a neighborhood of open spaces, parks with playgrounds, tennis courts and golf links, a district with good transportation, schools, stores and other institutions necessary or advantageous to community life.

Instead of having a pile of rent receipts at the end of that time you will have a permanent asset which will fix your standing in the community and give you something on which you could borrow money if necessity should force you to do so. We are all realizing today that high wages and good salaries alone cannot provide for the family in a big city a comfortable house, a wholesome neighborhood, adequate schooling for the children and protection against the growing disadvantages of closely built up neighborhoods.

Telephone Randolph 7400 and ask for the Sales Manager, who will direct you to the property or send an automobile to take you to Westwood. If you desire to drive out yourself, take the boulevard system going west on Marquette Boulevard to Western Avenue, where our office is located. If you desire to come out by street car, take the 69th street car line or any east or west line and transfer to Western Avenue. Our offices on the property are at 67th Street and Western Avenue and at 70th and Western Avenue.

Come Out Today Sure!!

Good Chicago real estate will never be cheaper than it is today. As the city expands and as new population comes, real estate is bound to rise according to the law of supply and demand. Buy today and save money.

FRENCH PCLICE HALT ROW OVER U. S. DANCE HALL

Closing Ends Dispute Between Army and Navy Men.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Aug. 9.—The meteoric career of Gerald (Jed) Kiley, two years ago a newspaper reporter in Chicago, in the amusement life of Paris, is at an end.

Kiley's dance hall in the rehearsal rooms of the Champs Elysee theater on the Avenue Montaigne, about half way between the Champs and the Seine, last night was closed by the orders of the French police. A squad of French gendarmes was stationed at the door to prevent any one entering, and even civilians were served notice that no further dancing would be permitted there. This action by the French police ends a clash between the American military police and the American naval police.

Late Wednesday night the "Foxtrot club" was declared "out of bounds" by the military police, and all officers and soldiers were forbidden to enter. According to information at th eAmerican provost marshal's office, this action was not due to the clamoring of French rivals, but to the findings of a staff officer of general headquarters of the A. E. F. This officer reported many Americans were drunk and fighting in the hall and that it was the resort of A. W. O. L. doughboys.

Clash with Navy.

American military police immediately were stationed at the door of the dance hall. But they had not been there long when they attempted to stop American sailors from entering the place. The sailors insisted the military police had no authority over men of the navy. Other sailors and other military police arrived on the scene, and a pitched battle roared out over the Avenue Montaigne to the accompaniment of jazz music inkling from the open windows six floors up.

During the fray a well known naval officer arrived. The fray ceased. The officer ordered the military police to keep their hands off.

"Navy police will be stationed at this door tonight," the naval officer said, "to insure that there will be no interference by the army authorities with sailors who want to enter."

But last nights order by the French police stopped the dispute.

Object of French Wrath.

For some months proprietors of night life resorts, particularly on the Montmartre, have been storming at the Kiley dance hall. The hall was opened soon after the signing of the armistice by Kiley and Gus Ferrier of New Orleans.

Now it is closed, but Kiley has fared well. He is credited with having made $100,000 since the armistice.

Magnate in Fields.

Leon Volterra, French proprietor of several theaters in Paris, recently converted the Apollo theater in the Montmartre into a dance hall, hiring Harry Pilcer with Gaby Deslys as partner, as master of ceremonies. The Montmartre restaurants were remaining open until 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning and were permitting dancing. Volterra sought the same privilege from the police. He was refused, however, and Pilcer's dance at the Apollo closes promptly at 11:30 every night.

Then Volterra heard about Kiley's place being open. He threatened to close it if it was the last thing he ever did.

PANAMA FEARS U. S. WILL FAIL TO PROTECT IT

PANAMA, Aug. 9.—President Porras of Panama expresses anxiety over the attitude of the United States senate toward the first article of the treaty guaranteeing Panama's independence, as shown by the objections senators nave voiced to article X. of the league of nations covenant, which is similar.

"As the objections in the senate to the league of nations," said Dr. Porras, "are mainly by Republican senators, and as the Republican party was mainly responsible for the approval of the treaty with Panama, a certain anxiety is felt here in regard to the attitude of those Republican senators because of the influence they may exercise in determining whether or not the first article of the Panama treaty is binding on the United States.

"In view of the debate in the American senate about the league of nations covenant, and especially about article X., Panamans wish to know if the senators opposing the covenant hold beliefs that justify feass entertained by the Panamans regarding the ultimate fate of the United States' obligation to maintain our independence."

A. E. F. Damage to France Said to Total $2,000,000

New York, Aug. 9.—Claims paid to France for damages to property or injuries to civilians by the American army will not exceed $2,000,000, or about $1 a man for all the soldiers in the American expeditionary force.

This estimate was made by Lieut. Col. Robert E. Burkham of St. Louis, chief claims officer, who recently returned from abroad.

The sum represents 50,000 separate claims, ranging from broken windows to a charge of 3,000,000 francs for destruction of forests and forest lands through American artillery practice at Souge, near Bordeaux.

776 APPLICANTS BRAVE POLICE TESTS WITH GRIN

Overseas Veterans Are Eager for Action on the Force.

"School days, school days, back again to school days;
Tryin' to remember our 'rithmetic
To get a job swingin' a hick'ry stick."

The parody on the old song sounded through the corridors of the Robert Waller High school, Orchard and Center streets, yesterday as Herbert H. Burns wended his way to a classroom with a couple of pals to take the mental test for a job on the Chicago police force. Herbert was with the tank corps in the recent unpleasantness overseas. His pals were with other overseas outfits.

An old policeman—veteran of many a campaign against crime—nudged another policeman who stood beside him watching the young enthusiasts enroll for their mental examinations for policemen's jobs.

Veteran Cop Is Cynical.

"Dunno as they need any mental tests on them birds. A guy that'd want to be a cop in these days o' murder, riot, an' holdups—with the pay they're givin' us—has got somethin' the matter with his head, that's sure. The poor lads are lettin' themselves in for a lotta trouble. 'Twas bad enough when I joined the force, but nothin' like now."

Corporal Gustav Anderson, late of Reilly's bucks, Battery B, heard.

"Oh, I'm not bothered about that," said the former Buck, "but what's bothering me is that when a thousand of us guys get on it'll be just my rotten luck to have everything quiet down. I want action."

Private John Nelson, late of the 131st infantry, was a bit dubious about the "mental test," but confident of his ability to deliver as a copper.

And so it went. At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon 776 men, many of whom already had been certified for duty, were taking the mental tests in the class rooms of the high school.

Tests Not Difficult.

Percy B. Coffin, president of the civil service comission, who was in charge of the examination, explained that the tests were not as rigorous as the men seemed to fear.

The applicant was first required to fill out an application blank, giving his age, occupation, employer, and general record.

Then on plain white paper he was required to answer questions, giving age, schooling, military record, if he had one, occupation for the last five years, and a general resume of his experience. The other test was under the head of police duties and consisted of four questions.

Four Questions.

Here are the questions:

"State very briefly the duties of a patrolman as you understand them.

"What restrictions are placed on members of the police department as to giving out information as to the business of the department?

"What are the instructions to all police officers regarding the suppression of riots and unlawful assemblies?

"What rule of courtesy should apply between members of the police department, and what rules between members of the department and the public?"

10 N. Y. THEATERS DARK; STARS QUIT ACTORS' UNION

Rivals Sanguine of Success in New York Strike.

New York, Aug. 9.—Ten New York theaters were "dark" tonight at the end of the third day of the actors' strike. To the nine which were closed last night was added this evening the Globe, where "She's a Good Fellow" is billed.

Members of the Actors' Equity association expressed confidence tonight that they would win the written equity contracts embodying the demands for which they went on strike.

They professed not to be disheartened by the fact that, following the resignation last night of E. H. Sothern, there were received tonight the resignations of William Collier, Holbrook Blinn, and Alan Rinehart.

In tendering his resignation Mr. Collier said he was "very much averse to the action of the Actors' Equity association in closing up theaters by ordering a so-called strike."

Managers Are Sanguine.

From the Producing Managers' Protective association tonight also came expressions of confidence and reports that casts depleted by strikers were being satisfactorily recruited "despite the extraordinary length to which the Actors' Equity association has gone in the intimidation and coercion of its people."

The managers' meeting today adopted a resolution offering financial aid to all "loyal" actors forced out of work by the strike.

Little Picketing Done.

There was little picketing by the strikers tonight. Instead actors gathered at Equity headquarters and staged an impromptu entertainment on the sidewalk without enlisting the services of ticket sellers or collectors. The public seemed to enjoy the free performances.

ACTORS' STRIKE IN EAST FAILS TO RUFFLE CHICAGO

Loop actors and actresses performed according to schedule last night and managers voiced the general opinion that they would continue to show—strike or no strike.

The majority of the managers stated that even if a strike is called, the members of the Actors' Equity association will refuse to walk out.

John J. Garrity, western representative of the Shuberts, had the following to say:

"Take my word for it that there will not be a strike. Of course, there is a slight possibility, but the members of the equity union will stick. New York is 1,000 miles away and that's where the majority of the stars receive their mail. I might add that the walking is bad these days."

Another loop theatrical manager who has been associated with the show business for fifteen years used practically the same words.

ABDUCTED OR ELOPING, GIRL VANISHES IN CAB

Delayed Wedding Plan Is Blamed by Friend in Affair.

F.DE OUT

Wedding Delayed, Girl Suddenly Vanishes; Youth Is Sought.

Rosie Luzzo and John Comford

Whether Rosie of the alluring features was kidnapped or merely eloped is more or less of a question, but it seems to be a well established fact that she disappeared hastily in a taxicab.

Rosie Luzzo, 18 years old, lived with her parents above their grocery and candy store at 547 West Oak street until last Thursday night. It is said, a young carpenter named John Comfori also lived there. According to Nick Terino, the husband of Rosie's sister, who was another tenant.

On Thursday John went out of town to earn some money for an outlay of the wedding cake, and other matrimonial paraphernalia. Rosie and her mother accompanied him to the train.

Little Girl Gives Clew.

The next time he was seen was about noon yesterday, when 9 year old Santa [illegible] swears she saw him sitting in a taxicab at the corner of Oak and Crosby streets.

"Mrs. Luzzo sent me across the street to call Rosie," she said. "She was up at her married sister's place and I stayed a minute after calling her before I went downstairs again. When I got on the sidewalk I saw Rosie in the arms of a man. He had one hand over her mouth and another man was holding the door of a taxicab open. John was sitting inside."

Santa says she ran across the street and told Rosie's parents what she had seen and they immediately called the police.

Friend Tells of Love Affair.

Nick Terino tells a different story. He says that Rosie and John have been engaged for almost six months, and that both were impatient for the ceremony. Rosie's mother wished the wedding postponed, however, because she had lost a son not more than six weeks ago. John didn't want to wait and there was a little quarrel.

So, says Nick, John came in a taxicab, gave Rosie the signal, and away they went in a cloud of exhaust smoke. He discounts the statement that there were three passengers in the car and expresses the belief that Rosie and John are married by this time.

"They love each other. Then why should he kidnap her?" Nick queried. "Just put it in the paper that they are forgiven. Only they had better not come back for a while because the folks are just a little mad yet."

The father believes that his daughter might have been abducted, as he says she is very pretty. She wore a dark blue dress, white shirtwaist, and black oxfords. Her hat fell to the sidewalk when she hurried—or was hurried—into the car. Detective Sergeants Egan and Clancy of the Chicago avenue station have been detailed to find her.

BUILDING EAST THE MISSISSIPPI SETS HIGH MARK

New York, Aug. 9.—In the face of the housing shortage which has brought despair to hundreds of thousands of homeseekers in New York and big cities of the east, figures were made public here today showing that all high records for building operations east of the Mississippi have been smashed during the last seven months.

The answer to the apparent contradiction, according to F. W. Dodge and company, who have been collecting data, is that, while building loans were fairly easy to get by builders of warehouses, factories, public buildings, hotels and skyscrapers, the man who wanted to construct residences or apartment houses usually found the money market closed.

The figures show the building boom is 20 per cent above the same period of 1918 and shows no signs of diminution. Since Jan. 1 contract and material supply men are said to be expecting a continuation of the abnormal activity for three to five years.

SENATORS SEEK TO CALL HOUSE FOR TESTIMONY

Demand All Details on League Idea from Leader.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Having failed to obtain from Secretary of State Lansing any satisfactory light on the mysteries of the peace treaty, the senate foreign relations committee plans next week to summon Col. E. M. House, President Wilson's closest adviser, to appear as a witness.

Col. House is now in England. Mr. Lansing told the committee it could get in touch with him by cable through the American embassy in London. Members believe Col. House would be able to appear before the committee within ten days.

The foreign relations committee has been unsuccessful in obtaining information which it regards as indispensable. The Republican members of the committee are becoming incensed at the apparent futility of trying to extract documents or papers from the administration.

What Lansing Will Disclose.

Mr. Lansing is going back on the stand Monday to submit in writing statements covering several phases of the treaty making. Among other things, he is expected to submit a copy of a resolution he drafted for the president, setting forth his idea of what the league of nations covenant should contain.

What the committee wants light on most of all is the negotiation of the league of nations covenant. Col. House had charge of America's part in this. The administration has taken the position that it would be most unwise to permit the senate to see the daily summaries of the proceedings in the meetings of the commission which drafted the league covenant. The committee feels that it ought to know something about the international conversations leading up to the definition of the Monroe doctrine as a "regional understanding," and the only way to get such information is by placing Col. House on the stand.

Soldiers Poll Against League.

If the 68th regiment of American engineers in France is a criterion of American army sentiment regarding the league of nations, the army does not want it. A poll of this regiment on the subject taken by Capt. O. E. McCabe of Chinook, Mont., shows the soldiers stood more than 4 to 1 against the covenant.

Those in favor of a league numbered 198; those opposed to any form of league numbered 809.

PONDER RESULT OF FORD-TRIBUNE BIG LIBEL SUIT

Opinions Differ on Decision of the Jury.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Mount Clemens, Mich., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—What will the verdict be? That is the chief topic of discussion in Mount Clemens as the day approaches when the final curtain will be rung down in the Ford-TRIBUNE libel suit, the longest, most expensive, most bitterly fought trial of the kind ever held in this country.

Henry Ford is asking for "heavy damages" in the case. Although he has sued for $1,000,000, this figure has not been mentioned in the arguments of his attorneys.

It is hard to find any one who thinks he has a chance of getting this, or any other substantial sum, at the hands of this jury. Some think he might get 6 cents or a nominal sum. Others think THE TRIBUNE will get a verdict completely vindicating its action in characterizing Ford's 1916 propaganda as anarchistic. The most commonly heard opinion around town is that the jury will not be able to agree.

Open Last Act Tomorrow.

When the case opens Monday morning for the last act Attorney Oscar Lungerhausen will speak for Ford. Attorney Elliott G. Stevenson will make the closing speech for THE TRIBUNE. The Ford people are depending largely on the arguments of Attorney Alfred G. Murphy and Alfred Lucking to swing the jury. Mr. Lucking will have the last word.

Judge James G. Tucker is hard at work today on the instructions to the jury. He has 168 requests to consider. He must sift this mass of material and out of it tell the jury the law in the case.

Judge Tucker must decide the status of the Solomon Bros. in the case. These Detroit news distributors are codefendants with THE TRIBUNE, and when the trial started withdrew all pleas for dismissal and based their defense on THE TRIBUNE defense, that of general justification.

Judge Tucker has indicated that he would direct a verdict in favor of the Solomon Brothers, and that he does not care what the effect is on THE TRIBUNE defense. This makes a fine legal point which may have to be decided by the upper courts.

Instructions on Wednesday?

The trial began May 17, and arguments probably will close Aug. 12. Instructions will not be given to the jury until Wednesday, in all probability. There have been 125 witnesses in the case and over 400 exhibits.

The stenographic work has been one of the remarkable features of the trial. It has been done under the direction of Albert Taylor, the county stenographer. The record now is nearly 9,000 pages, averaging 250 words to the page. The court reporters have worked in short relays.

The case has been in litigation for three years. It has cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, or will have done so when the final bills are in both sides. The money side of the verdict has been lost sight of. Both sides have fought for principle. The question is whether this jury of Michigan farmers will uphold Henry Ford's or THE TRIBUNE'S brand of Americanism.

SEEK TWO BOYS FOR MURDER OF AGED COBBLER

Three persons, it was announced last night, are being sought in connection with the murder of Fred Bender, the aged cobbler, whose niece, Alice Kennedy of 5449 South Morgan street, has vowed she "will avenge my uncle's death if it takes a lifetime."

Bender was beaten unconscious with a gaspipe. Two hours after his body was found he died at St. Luke's hospital. The police are seeking two boys who disappeared after running into the shoeshop of David Gold, 462 South State street, and telling him "the old shoemaker needs a doctor." Bender was robbed of $50.

Detective Sergeants Archie Kane and Charles Dudley, who are working on the case, also want to find a colored man, who, they say, was seen to leave the shop a few minutes before Bender was found unconscious. His identity is known to them, they say.

EUROPE SEES U. S. LABOR - CAPITAL AS TRADE RULER

Socialists Abroad Fear World Domination by Merger.

BY ARTHUR E. MANN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 9.—The leaders of the great mass of Labor-Socialists of continental Europe today believe American labor and American capital are moving toward a merger which will attempt to dominate the whole world of trade.

These leaders not only believe it—they fear it. This fear dictated that clause in the resolution passed by the international trade union congress at Amsterdam which demands changes in the covenant of the league of nations of such a nature that the league may deal with economic as well as political questions.

The continental leaders thought they saw their beliefs confirmed in what they called the American lack of international spirit and in the fierce denunciations by Samuel Gompers of the German and Dutch attacks on capitalism as the cause of the war.

At Odds with Europe.

Anyway, it seems American labor, with its present ideas and ideals, always will be in the minority in the international.

There are several reasons. First, with the exception of some British trade unionists, European and continental labor is socialistic—American labor today is not. Second, European labor, even trade unions, has a keen sense of a united political partnership—American labor has not, representing as it does the several American parties. European labor feels less regard for employing only constitutional methods in seeking labor reforms than American labor. The result of these differences is that European labor at least displays, if it does not really feel, more of what is called the spirit of international solidarity than American labor.

Question of Socialism.

A good many of the disagreements between American and European delegates arose over the question of Socialist principles. The issue came up at the first meeting of the congress when the Americans opposed Chairman Oudegeest's statement, applying the Socialist theory of the cause of the war to the conflict just over, and it ran right through every meeting, including the last, which perhaps was the best example, when Mr. Gompers voted the American delegation against the long resolutions favoring "socialization of the means of production."

FRENCH PEASANT BEGS US MAKE SHIRT TAIL LONG

U. S. Women Cut Too Short for Devastated Area.

BY SPEARMAN LEWIS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Aug. 9.—If American women now making shirts for the peasantry in devastated France will put long tails on the suits they will greatly increase the fervor of thanks from said peasantry. I've this from no less authority than Henri Congardel, commissioner general of the war devastated areas of France, and Georges Bardey, general secretary.

I had sought them out for authoritative statements on further coöperation of French and American war relief organizations as evidenced by the formation in New York of a central body to coördinate the present and future relief that America may extend to France.

Don't Laugh Now!

If you at home dismiss this with a laugh, you will put yourself in the same class as the American manufacturer who persists still in sending catalogs printed in English to South American countries or typewriters to Europe with American alphabetical arrangement on the keyboards and then wonder why his good efforts are not appreciated. Most of the shirts sent to France have had to be supplemented with ruffles to appease the Frenchmen on farms. I have not been able to learn the psychology of long tails any more than I have been able to learn why short tails are on shirts for Americans.

Seriously, France is particularly anxious for American organizations to avoid duplication of efforts and money and to work through existing organizations or from new ones only after careful investigation after liaison with French governmental departments without which absolutely no practical progress can be made.

This was made emphatic today in an hour's interview I had with these two men. Congardel is right hand man of M. Tardieu and adds the last word in authoritative announcements.

"It will take $20,000,000,000 to rehabilitate France," Congardel said. "France cannot meet this problem without outside assistance. We would prefer the entire amount be loaned, not given, by America. The simplest manner would be to form a number of loan companies which could finance the contractors and peasants in small amounts at 5 or 5½ per cent annual interest.

"A large percentage of the peasants own their land, and such security would be generally recognized as satisfactory, for the thrift of French peasants is conceded throughout the financial world.

Welcome Present Aid.

"Realizing France cannot wait for a complete subscription of such a tremendous sum, we welcome those philanthropic American organizations who now are in France or who are coming over. We are glad to hear from America the end of the war doesn't mean the end of American assistance. The organization of French-American relief societies with headquarters in New York pleases us and we will continue a similar organization in Paris."

It was there that Bardey cut in with the remark that a bolt of goods also permits the employment of a worker in France as well as assures clothing made to French patterns. This is illustrated by the tale of the shirttails. And the French peasant wants his trousers baggy and boots high. He is perfectly willing to pay for them, and many organizations now in France have won the respect of the peasants by putting clothing and household and kitchen supplies within their financial reach at the smallest possible cost—often at less rather than attempt a wholesale pauperization of the nation.

BAND CONCERT AT CLARENDON BEACH.

A concert will be given at Clarendon beach from 3 to 5 this afternoon by the Chicago band, William Weil, conductor. Leoncavallo's overture from "William Tell," Myddleton's "By the Swanee River," and Boccalari's "The Dance of the Serpent" are included in the program, as well as a suite from Safranek's "Atlantis" and excerpts from "The Fortune Teller," by Victor Herbert.

CHICAGO SMOKE FRETS, PLEASES, FAR EAST PARTY

Lady Thackersey Worried, but Husband Says It Means Industry.

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

The diamond imbedded in the left nostril of Lady Thackersey, the East Indian nabobess who, with her husband, Sir Vithaldas Thackersey, and several other East Indian men and women, is staying at the Blackstone for a few days, has a meaning. It signifies she has a husband, and, together with a round patch of red powder, made into a paste and worn on the forehead just between the eyes, and a glass bangle bracelet on the left wrist, takes the place of the wedding ring, which is not worn by East Indian women.

Sitting sedately on a Louis Quinze settee in her hotel drawing room, Lady Thackersey discussed the difference between American and East Indian social customs for women. She speaks good English, having had an English companion from childhood.

Like Nose Jewelry.

"Of course," she said, "American women may think it queer, but we like our nose jewelry and our bangles. The our nose jewelry and our bangles."

The East Indian party, which is touring the United States Lady Thackersey said "partly for business and partly for joy," wishes to visit the University of Chicago summer school. They had heard about it in India, they said—how all the students sit out in the sun to study, without any roof over their heads. Lady Thackersey was quite astounded when she learned such was not the method of conducting the summer school.

Worried by Smoke.

The snowy cotton "sari" or veil, which is the distinguishing feature of the East Indian woman's dress, was speckless yesterday, but Lady Thackersey shook her head sadly over the veil of smoke which Lady Chicago wears as her costume.

"It would not take long to get dirty here," she said ruefully.

"O, but that smoke is fine," broke in her husband, who put down his paper and joined in the conversation just then. "It means great industrial development."

Sir Vithaldas, a cotton manufacturer in Bombay, for fourteen years was in the service of the viceroy's office in Calcutta and Bombay. He and his wife are enjoying their visit to Chicago, seeing all the sights and going often to the "cinema." Monday the women will visit the department stores to see what American women buy.

Hyde Park post of the American legion will have a smoker Tuesday in the casino on the beach at the rear of the Chicago Beach hotel. This is not only for members, but for all ex-service men in the district who would like to join the post.

Friends with Private Gunnard Lundahl, Company L, 356th infantry, 89th division, when he was accidentally shot while with his company in the army of occupation in Germany May 7 or 8, are asked by his sister, Miss Eva Lundahl, 1140 Twelfth avenue, Moline, Ill., to communicate with her. MRS. HAYWARD'S LOST $250,000 ELUDES SEARCH

Attorney Offers New Theory Concerning the Estate.

The hunt for Mrs. Clara Hayward's vanishing riches yesterday reached a blind alley. Aside from the speculations of the eccentric widow's relatives and attorneys, no ray of light penetrated the mystery of the missing $250,000.

Relatives of Miss Eugenie Seip, the niece whom the eccentric widow loved, say she seldom mentioned her aunt's fortune. Miss Seip died Wednesday, before the search for Mrs. Hayward's estate began.

New Theory Offered.

A new theory of the mystery was offered last night by Attorney J. Warren Beckstrom, who represented Mrs. Hayward for two years before her death.

"She may not have had $250,000," said Mr. Beckstrom. "But she did have a comfortable fortune before various bleeding processes were started against her.

"A will drawn for her by a Boston attorney several years ago clearly excluded those who seem to take the most interest in her supposed fortune. A will drawn later in Chicago confirmed her intentions, but it seems that threats to begin a new series of houndings against her in Chicago forced her to sell her remaining property, and place all of her wealth in the hands of some one who had been her constant friend through all her troubles.

"Competent to Make Will."

"Although I have no positive evidence as to the identity of this friend, I have a well settled theory; and you may rest assured Mrs. Hayward was competent to dispose of her property as nearly according to justice as circumstances permitted. No one is inclined to make donations to his or her worst enemy."

BOX SYSTEM IN BUFFALO KEEPS 'COPS' ON JUMP

Chief of Police Tells Chicagoans City Is Kept Crime Clean.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Police Chief James Higgins told the Chicago council committee on police, today, that this city is unusually free from crime.

"We have less than any other city of Buffalo's size or other city within 100,000 of its population," he said.

He gave two principal reasons as follows:

"A Buffalo policeman is permitted to do his duty."

"Newspaper publicity is given every crime within twenty-four hours after it is committed. In most cases much sooner."

Publicity Doesn't Aid Criminal.

"Doesn't publicity interfere with the catching of the criminals," Ald. Steffen asked.

"The burglar or robber knows that he committed the crime and that we have been told about it before he reads it in the newspapers," the chief replied. "He knows that we are after him. The publication of the crime and how it was committed does not give the criminal any more information than he had in advance.

"We don't print the statements of witnesses and that sort of information, but the newspapers are daily given the running written record of the department. They can see that a certain policeman went to a funeral, that we responded to a false alarm or that the cat turned over a bottle of milk which caused Mrs. Jones to phone the police that burglars were breaking in and that six policemen went to the house. They can see that a certain man was held up, when it occurred, where, how and the circumstances surrounding it."

Keeps Police on Jump.

"Our policemen complain that publicity interferes with good work," said Ald. Byrne. "How does publicity help you?"

"The robbery must have occurred on some patrolman's beat," answered the chief. "It must have happened in some captain's precinct. It must have been in some lieutenant's division. It is to their discredit that the robbery occurred. Suppose another robbery happens, and then another near the same spot. The commission form of government in Buffalo permits the police to do their duty and they are not doing their duty if robberies get too frequent. If there were no publicity we could easily cover inefficiency, laziness and other defects.

"I can go out and arrest any man in town, if I believe that he has committed an offense, and tell all of his friends to go to h—l. Pull won't get him off. I don't jam one man for a minor offense and let another man commit with immunity. If one man can step over the line a little, every man in town can. We don't play favorites. I lived in Chicago for six months at one time, and there was considerable influence in the department then."

Signal System a Check.

"How do you make the policeman do his duty," Ald. Guernsey asked.

"Our signal system helps," the chief replied. "In three of the districts where it has been installed we can get any patrolman within three minutes. He cannot walk more than three minutes without being in sight of a flashlight.

"Suppose you did not get a reply in six minutes?" asked Harris Keeler of the Chicago bureau of public efficiency.

"If it was an emergency case, I would prefer charges against the officer whose duty it is to respond," said the chief.

Several tests were made of the signal system. The first man called responded in 20 seconds and all others inside of a minute.

"Under old system, as under yours, we would not find a man until he pulled the box," the chief explained. "That might be an hour. Under the flash and horn system we can check on every man in a precinct within an hour. Every desk sergeant is a telegrapher. He takes care of all complaints, sends the messages, and in some stations is also the turnkey. We have no patrol sergeants. The lieutenants do the patroling. We have no desk sergeants. By those means we eliminate overhead and put the cost into patrolmen."

"Why did you discontinue use of bells?" was asked.

"Temperature affected them," said the chief. "These horns make enough noise."

"Will they wake up a copper?"

"We turned a horn loose near the Lafayette hotel and the manager complained that 268 guests complained to him about being awakened," said the chief.

"Flash and Toot" Here?

The organization of the men and their distribution here are not applicable to Chicago. The general policy of administration and the signal system appealed to the aldermen. Ald. Steffen said he will attempt to get an appropriation for "a flash and toot" system in Chicago. He would also like to have a call system for houses, flats, and business places by which alarms might be sent to the police for a fee of $10 a year.

SAYS U. S. CONSUL STIRS TROUBLE IN COSTA RICA

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—George C. Hazelton, an attorney and former member of congress from Wisconsin, has sent a letter to Senator Lodge, chairman of the committee on foreign relations of the senate, defending the government of President Tinoco in Costa Rica and charging American Consul Benjamin F. Chase at San Jose, Costa Rica, with pernicious activities against the Costa Rican government. The letter charges that Chase attempted unjustly to get United States intervention in Costa Rica, but that other envoys stopped his efforts to have marines landed.

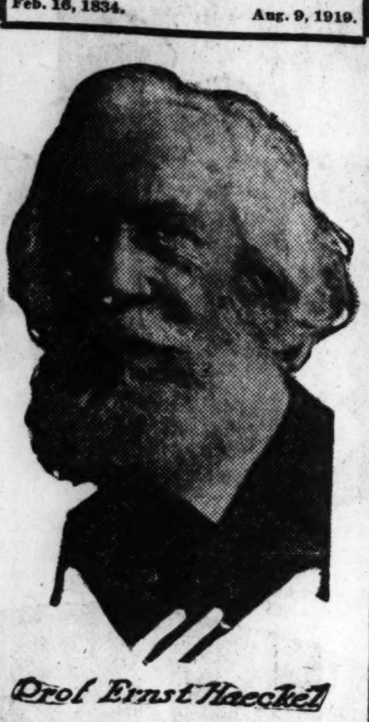
Ernst Heinrich Haeckel
Feb. 16, 1834. Aug. 9, 1919.



HAECKEL DIES; LEADER IS LOST TO THE SCIENCES

Famous Theorist Is at End of Labors in Germany.

JENA, Germany, Aug. 9.—Professor Ernst Heinrich Haeckel, professor of zoology at the University of Jena and famous throughout the world for his research work supporting the theory of evolution, died today.

Second Only to Darwin.

Present day theories of evolution along biological lines are largely indebted to scientific researches made by Prof. Haeckel. Excepting Darwin and Wallace, it was said that no one had done more to sustain, explain, and defend the doctrine of evolution than Haeckel, who, for nearly fifty years, was professor of zoölogy at the little University of Jena.

Some index to the influence which he had on the scientific world is furnished by the fact that his literary output amounted to some fifty scientific works, including 20,000 printed pages, and that the principal editions have been translated into fifteen different languages,

Given Praise of Darwin.

Darwin himself paid tribute to Haeckel's work by declaring, in his preface to "The Descent of Man," that Haeckel possessed on many points fuller knowledge of the doctrine of evolution than he.

Haeckel held that there was no creation other than casual, efficient, inevitable correlation. As a consequence of these views Haeckel was led to deny the immortality of the soul, the freedom of the will, and the existence of a personal God. His religion was "monism," a term he invented to cover his belief in the essential unity of organic and inorganic matter.

Skillful with olis and watercolors, Prof. Haeckel produced a great number of original plates with which his works were illustrated in color.

Defied the Junkers.

What has been heard of Prof. Haeckel during the war was marked by the same independence of spirit that characterized his life work. The publication of his work on "God and the Immortality of the Soul" in 1915 brought a recurrence of that vigorous criticism by opponents of his theories that has punctuated his long scientific career.

Prof. Haeckel was one of those who signed the circular demanding the retirement of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg of Germany in 1916. The circular arraigned the chancellor particularly for his attempts to reach an agreement with England at the beginning of the war, his early attitude on Belgian neutrality, and his submarine warfare policy.

"The false cosmopolitan idealism of the German people" was criticized by Prof. Haeckel in a contribution to war literature in 1918. This false idealism he termed "the greatest danger of its national existence."

FINED ON ASSAULT CHARGE.

A. J. Frost, 4846 North Hermitage avenue, was fined $25 and costs by Police Magistrate John F. Boyer of Evanston yesterday on a charge of assault and battery made by M. Meddabow, who has a tailor shop at 801 Chicago avenue, Evaston.

EIGHT KILLED BY EXPLOSION IN ELEVATOR

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Aug. 9.—Eight persons were killed and a score were injured, seven of them seriously, in an explosion which wrecked the large government grain elevator on the Welland canal this afternoon. The financial loss is estimated at $1,800,000. Spontaneous combustion is believed to have caused the explosion.

The concussion shook the whole town and windows in nearby buildings were smashed.

The barge Quebec, moored at the elevator, was smothered under a pile of wreckage as it heeled over and a huge rent was torn in the side by a block of concrete. The vessel was towed outside the breakwall and beached.

The elevator was built eight years ago at a cost of $2,000,000. It had a capacity of more than 2,000,000 bushels and the bins were said to be about one-third filled with grain, mostly wheat.

U. S. May Bring Bodies of Soldiers from France

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—Apparently there is no French law prohibiting the removal of the bodies of American soldier dead from French soil "for a period of three years from Jan. 1, 1919." The house foreign affairs committee had been informed that such a law existed, but Secretary Lansing wrote Chairman Porter today that while a bill along this line had been introduced in the French chamber of deputies, it had not yet been acted upon.

The committee has before it a resolution proposing the immediate return of the bodies of the American soldiers killed in the war.

PLANS FOR RECONSTRUCTION.

SAINT GERMAIN, Aug. 9.—[Havas.]—Louis Loucheur, minister of reconstruction in the French cabinet, conferred today with Austrian labor delegates concerning the reconstruction of devastated regions.

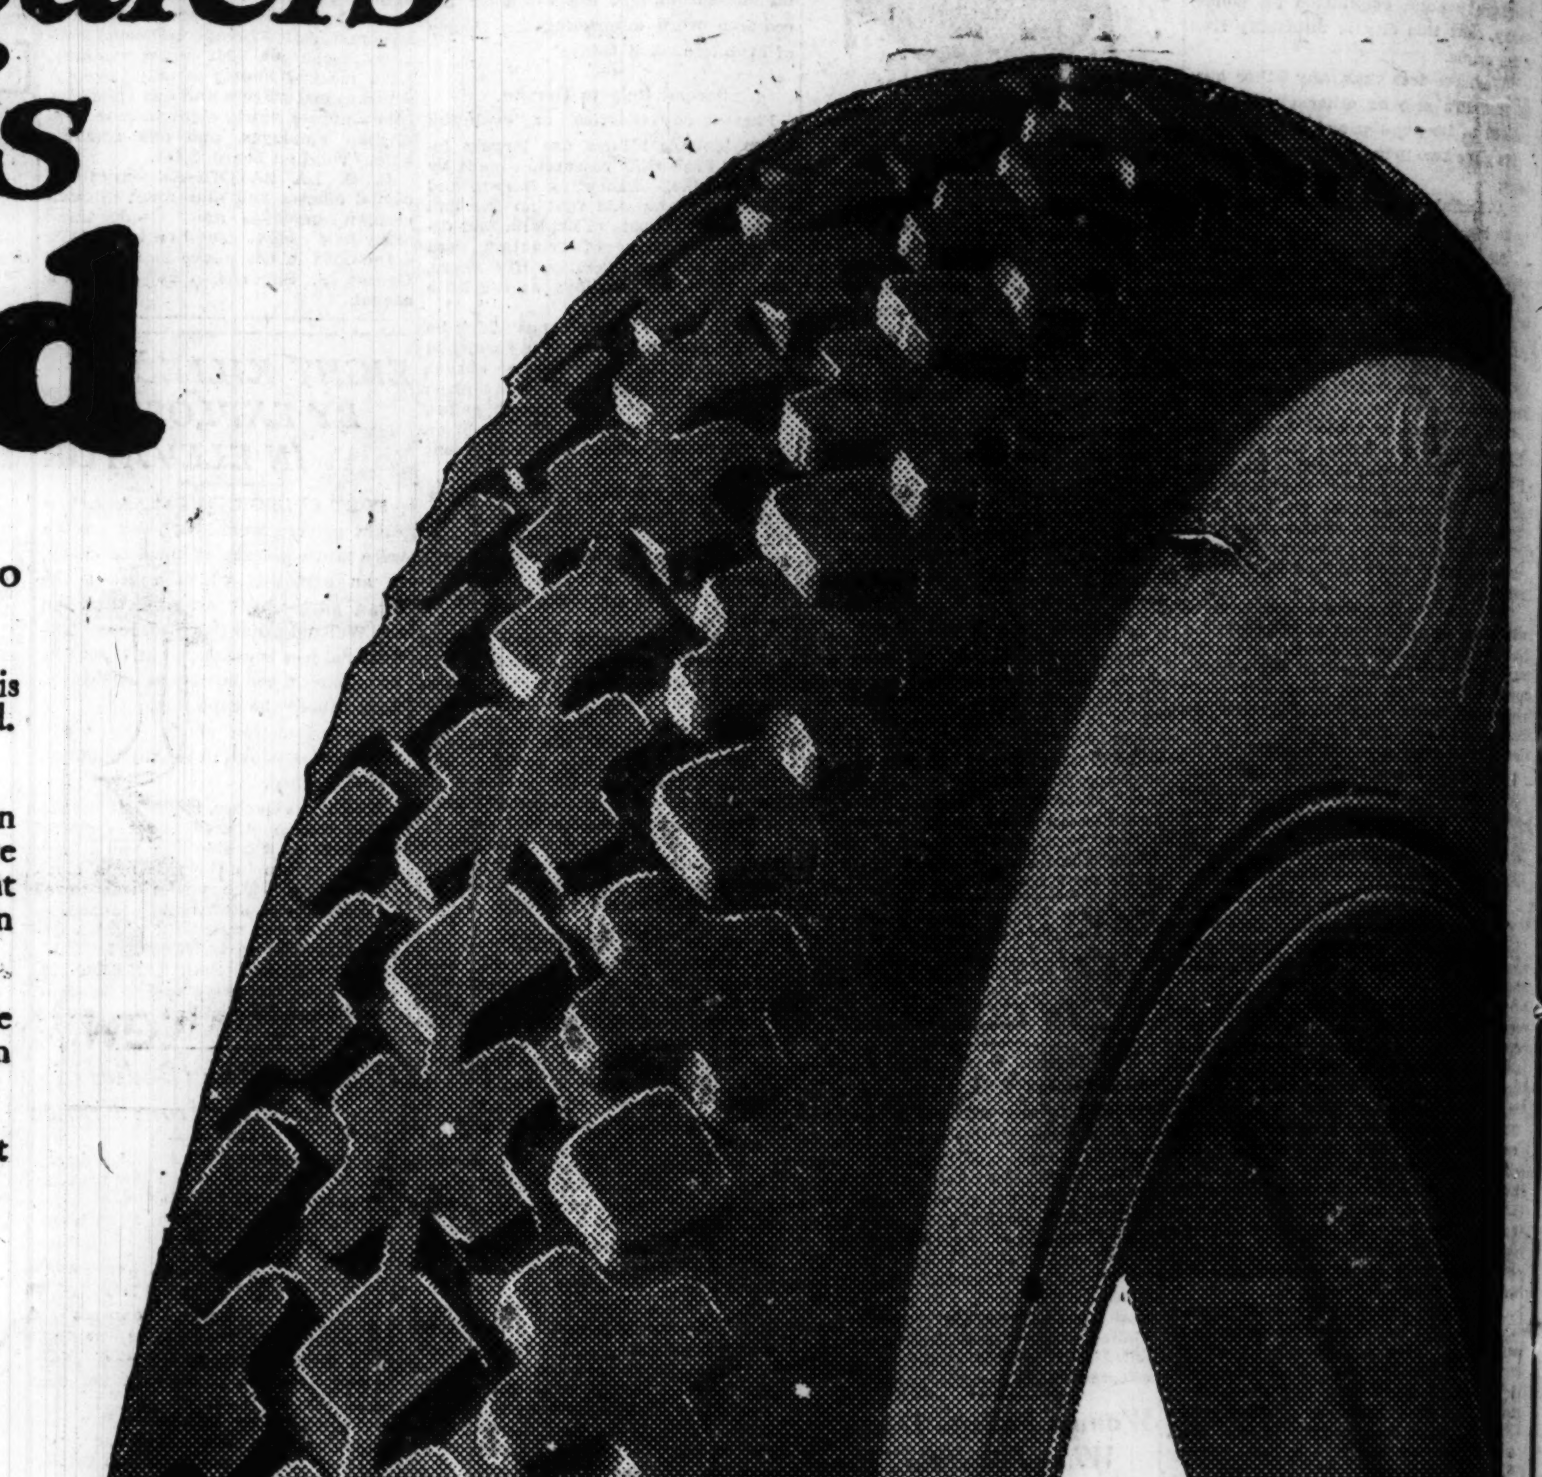
"Sells on Sight"

That's what Dealers say about this New Cord



BECAUSE—it's the first of the new standard oversize cords—so big that it leaves no room for comparison.

You get a lot more tire, which means much more mileage. The cross-section is wider, the air capacity is greater, there is much more material—rubber and cord. And all these extras don't appear in the price. See why below.

The new extra heavy non-skid tread is another feature that makes this tire "sell on sight." You can see and feel the extra volume of choice rubber. And if you are something of an engineer you can tell on sight that the tread angles will prevent skid, slide or spin. Whether you are an engineer or not, you will know as soon as you drive these tires that they have real traction, that they do hold the road.

And this cord is as much better inside as it is outside. Firestone builders soak the cords in rubber so they become saturated. Then they put an extra coat of gum between the layers of cord.

It not only "sells on sight" but it delivers mileage and the kind of service that wins permanent users.

How Can Firestone Give So Much More for the Money?

BECAUSE—Firestone is building more mileage per dollar into tires than other makers. And that is because Firestone has done big, practical things in the way of organizing man power and capital.

The 16,000 Firestone workers are doing more per man than the workers in any other organization, so far as we can determine. They are putting more into their work because they are getting more out of it—the things that make for happiness, efficiency.

Over 90% of them own stock in the company.

Thousands own their homes; Firestone Park is the "fireside" of Akron.

So, whether it is the Firestone man in Singapore buying rubber and shipping it direct, whether it is the tire builders in the great Firestone factories at Akron or the men in the field serving you through your dealer, you can count on it that they are giving car-owners most miles per dollar—bigger value this year than it has ever been possible to deliver before.

Let your dealer show you this Firestone Cord.

This is the Firestone year

DOUBLE STEAL, WITH VAUGHN SCORING, BEATS GIANTS BY 3-1

THOUSANDS SEE VISITING GIRLS CAPTURE SWIMS

Misses Durack and Wylie Refuse to Race; Miss Harrison Wins.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With thousands of persons lining the banks and viewing the contests from automobiles, out of town women swimmers carried off the lion's share of the honors in the first day's events of the second annual public water carnival of the Chicago Athletic association yesterday in the Lincoln park lagoon.

Miss Fanny Durack and Miss Wilhelmina Wylie, the Australian swimmers, refused to compete at the last minute. They asserted they had agreements with Fred W. Rubien, secretary of the National A. A. U., to swim in exhibition or handicap events only. This was contrary to the understanding which C. A. A. officials had with the Australians.

Trouble for Australians?

Miss Durack and Miss Wylie were at the lagoon. They were told they would have to swim in competition events today or the matter will be taken up with the national body of the A. A. U., which may cancel the remainder of the Australians' tour.

The large throng was keenly interested in the many events, competitive and novel. There was something going on in different parts of the lagoon at all times, while the crew races between expert oarsmen attracted a deal of attention and favorable comment from those who had never seen such events before.

Ten Eyck Is Cheered.

Jim Ten Eyck Sr., the veteran crew coach, was recognized as he rode to the starting point of the shell races to start the crews. The veteran sat in the bow of the launch with megaphone in hand and sent the shells away to perfect starts. Ten Eyck was cheered heartily by persons who have followed his success for years.

To Miss Essie Harrison of Canada, who swims under the colors of the Detroit A. C., went the honor of being the individual star. This promising swimmer won the fifty yard breast stroke and finished third in the 220 yard swim. To all appearances she is a more finished breast stroke than free style swimmer.

Using her familiar crawl stroke, Miss Thelma Darby of the Independent Athletic and Canoe club of Indianapolis won the 220 yard free style swim by five yards from her teammate, Miss Regina Ries, winner of the National A. A. U. junior women's 440 yard swim a week ago. Miss Darby did not exert herself and swam the distance in 3:23.

Milwaukee Girl Wins.

Miss Lois Barry of the Milwaukee A. C. won the 100 yard back stroke by a wider margin than any of the victors in the women's events. She stroked into the lead at the start and increased her advantage until she was about fifteen yards ahead of her nearest competitor at the finish. In the woman's event Miss Helen Fitzsimmons of the Detroit A. C. won the 100 yard free style swim.

V. Johnson and G. Hokanson, the doubles crew of the Duluth Boat club, who won the national championship at the regatta in Worcester, Mass., recently, gave a pretty exhibition in their race with two crews of the Lincoln Park Boat club. The visitors pulled a fast, steady stroke which carried them over the water at a remarkably fast clip. The Gellan brothers in a local shell hung to the fast pace for a short distance but were unable to stand the clip. They finished about two lengths behind the champions.

Carnival Continues Today.

Today's events will be featured by the four oared crew race between Lincoln Park and Duluth, swimming races between well known women experts, and another batch of contests for men.

MARK ARIE SETS TARGET RECORD WITH 195 SCORE

In a brilliant exhibition of trapshooting Mark Arie of Thomasboro, Ill., state champion at single targets and considered one of the best shots in the country, yesterday won permanent possession of the Hercules amateur all around trophy in the competition held in the presence of a large gallery of Grand American handicap shooters at the South Shore Country club. Frank Troeh of Vancouver, Wash., retained possession of the Hercules open trophy.

In winning the amateur trophy Arie registered a score of 195, the highest made in the history of the shoot. The best previous mark was by A. H. Winkler of Chicago and Bart Lewis of Auburn, Ill. Troeh, who was eligible to shoot for both trophies, turned in a total of 190, a score good enough to win nine times out of ten.

Conditions Are Difficult.

Arie's score may be all the more appreciated when the fact is taken into consideration that this shoot is the hardest test of a man's ability there is on the program. The conditions call for fifty targets from eighteen yards, fifty targets from twenty yards, fifty targets from twenty-two yards, and twenty-five pairs from sixteen yards.

The surprising fact of Arie's score is that he lost only one of his twenty-five double targets. Some of the spectators claimed he hit the target, but the judges ruled the bird was only "dusted" and did not count as a "kill." The Illinois shooter was off form in his first event. He lost three targets from the eighteen yard rise.

He settled down, however, in the second brace of fifty targets from twenty yards and registered a perfect score. He lost only one bird in his third fifty, which were shot at from twenty-two yards. He then finished with a 49 for the twenty-five doubles.

Straight Run to Troeh.

To Frank Troeh went the honor of having the highest straight run. He broke 110 straight targets, while Arie had a continuous run of 92. Jay Graham, the professional from Ingleside, Ill., was badly off form and broke only 173 out of his 200 targets. A. H. Winkler of Chicago also was off form and broke only 176.

The return match between teams representing the New York Athletic club and Chicago Athletic association will be held at the South Shore today. Shooting in this event will start at 9 o'clock. Each team will be composed of ten shooters, but only the scores of the five highest will count as team total. Each shooter will shoot at 100 targets, sixteen yards rise.

Scores in Hercules Shoot.

While this event is in progress a 200 bird sweepstakes will be held for shooters who have arrived to take part in the Grand American handicap, which opens tomorrow. Following are the scores of the Hercules shoot:

SUNDAY BALL FOR DOWNERS GROVE

In the Wake of the News
By JACK LAIT

HE'S IN AGAIN!

EVELYN, the Exquisite Checker, sat on her lofty throne between the kitchen exit and the café entrance. She was out of sorts. The peppery recording angel of the check and register chewed her very gum in vexation over the decadence of the industry in these irritating times when steaks at $9 the pound could not rise fast enough to stuff the void gouged out by the shrinkage in drinks.

Times were, and not so long since, when every dollar that left its bite on the hungry tape within her brass journal of gross receipts had run 40 cents solid sustenance to 60 cents liquid washdown. Now the stray goblets of watery sarsaparilla, flat ginger ale, vacuous near beer, and bloodless grapejuice gawped up at her from the destituted trays, fishy eyed and ghastly ghostly, as welcome as a sick uncle out of a job.

Loyalty was instinctive to the exquisite one. When those she served suffered, she suffered. The decimated daily takings twinged her as though the difference were out of her own purse. Liquor as liquor had no character to her—only as a medium of "change" did the alcoholic compounds appeal. She had taken as much pride and glee out of a "wine buyer" in the good days as had the waiter who saw his tip mount or the proprietor who saw his bank account swell. Unable to control the output or the income except for her ability to see that whatever came past her left its punch in the check, Evelyn nevertheless was in with the game from her grand stand seat, always "pulling" for the home team, always set against the guest and for the house.

And so, prohibition and search and seizure having fallen upon the trade like a vandalizing pestilence, she grouched charmingly though sincerely, and tried to equalize as far as she could the dropaway by scolding the waiters and regally paralyzing bus boys with her hauteur and petulance.

Shortly the Waiter, he of the broad back and bowed legs, the bald head but scantily camouflaged by the few skinny wisps of side hair shamelessly diverted and pasted on the shiny waste, shuffled toward the swinging green door and stopped to check in his load. Evelyn raised her eyes over his dome, then shot them down at an acute angle so that they hit the merchandise without resting for even a flash upon the menial's face.

"Four eighty," he murmured.

Her lips were murmuring over the items, adding as she went.

"Four what? Say—you got a head like a peanut. I count four ninety-five."

"Uh—well, the filley minion——"

"Sure. Didn't you know it's went up again? It cashes in at $1.80 beginnin' at midnight this mornin'. There's your check—do a fadeaway."

Shorty shambled off and beyond.

Evelyn returned to her calculations, biting the rubber on her pencil end, softly humming in jerks dismembered snatches of "High Brown Baby's Ball." Something broke her concentration. She looked up.

Before her, twirling an overseas cap sheepishly, stood a sturdy youth in khakis, with a sergeant's chevrons on his arm. His eyes flew downward as hers met them for an instant. The scarlet blood gushed to the cheeks of autumn oakleaf brown. For a second she sat rigid, then with a bound she came to the floor, semi-circled her desk, flung her plump white arms without restraint about the neck of the embarrassed youth, and cried:

"Gus! For the love o' Charlie Chaplin! Gus!"

"Uhu, I'm me," he tremblingly answered.

"And this is me," she answered with emphasis—and smacked upon his right cheek a kiss that rocked and reeled him dizzily upon his flat feet.

BENTON HARBOR BOUT BREAKS UP IN GENERAL ROW

"Tribune" Decisions

Decisions of The Tribune fight representative are:

At Benton Harbor—Richie Mitchell vs. Sailor Freedman, no decision [6]; Tommy Holderson beat Sammy Ford [8]; Walter Dolan knocked out Dick Jost [3]; Dummy Jordan beat Al Lance [4].

Benton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—A score of fists flying in all directions instead of the four scheduled to be propelled by Richie Mitchell of Milwaukee and Sailor Freedman of Chicago broke up the windup of Floyd Fitzsimmons' boxing show in a free for all fight. The roughhouse finish came at the end of the sixth round. It ended the bout, because John J. Sterling, prosecuting attorney of Berrien county, immediately ordered the boxers out of the ring.

Up to the time the ring became congested with Mitchell and Freedman followers it was a contest in which the Milwaukee boy gave every promise of winning. Mitchell's cleverness stood him in good stead, while Freedman fought in a way not at all creditable. He was warned several times for foul tactics for which he should have been disqualified. But he wasn't, and the result was the unfortunate ending of the show. After it was over the referee called it "no contest."

How Free for All Started.

The roughhouse work was precipitated at the close of the sixth session, when Mitchell, not hearing the bell, landed a punch on the Sailor's jaw. Freedman's followers, led by his manager, Davy Miller, left their seats for a drive on the ring. They climbed through the ropes and Miller dashed at Mitchell, swinging furiously at the Milwaukeean.

Mitchell clinched to escape damage, and his brothers, Pinkie and Billy, the latter his manager, joined the mêlée to help Richie.

Black Eye for Sport.

The climax of this bout was disgraceful and is a black eye to boxing, only recently legalized in Michigan. It was pulled before 3,000 people. Promoter Fitzsimmons stated tonight that the foul fighting of Freedman while the bout lasted and the actions of his followers after the sixth round would result in Freedman being barred for all time from Benton Harbor. The Chicago lightweight heeled, butted, and wrestled throughout the six rounds. Freedman's friends also constantly coached from all sides of the ring.

The bout started off with promise of being a great contest. Freedman sailed into Mitchell and more than held his own in the first round. He rushed Richie to the ropes and landed several good wallops in the second, one punch forcing Mitch to slip to his knee. When Mitch got up Freedman started the rough stuff and threw the Milwaukee boy to the canvas.

Richie Too Clever.

Mitchell's cleverness began to show in the third, and he scored telling points in the third, fourth, and fifth rounds. Richie seemed to have gauged Freedman in the sixth and caught the Sailor on the chin several times. The gong denoting the end of the session was not heard by Mitchell, and he punched Freedman after it had sounded. Then came the roughhouse finish.

Ike Bernstein uncovered a sensation in the semi-windup when he sent Tommy Holderson of Chicago against Sammy Ford, former Great Lakes champion. Holderson won every round of the eight. Walter Dolan of Englewood stopped Nick Frost in the third round, and Dummy Jordan shaded Al Lance in six rounds.

"NOBODY RUNS CLEVELAND CLUB BUT ME"—DUNN

Cleveland, O., Aug. 9.—President James C. Dunn of the Cleveland Indians, referring to the recent statement from the owners of the New York American league team that B. B. Johnson, president of the American league, was a stockholder in the Cleveland team, today issued the following statement:

"Since taking over the Cleveland baseball club in 1916, with my associates, I have been in complete control of the policies and business affairs of the club. At the time we made the purchase we assumed certain obligations, all of which have been met when due, or prior to maturity. I do not believe the people of Cleveland are much concerned in who holds the stock in the club, as long as I remain in complete control of the policies of the organization and continue my efforts to give Cleveland a winning club.

"However, those who are asserting that B. B. Johnson is interested in the Cleveland baseball club are treading on dangerous ground."

WOEFUL BAPTISM OF NEW HURLERS BEATS SOX, 11-6

Mayer, McGuire Treated Rough as Johnson Shows Old Stuff.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—While Walter Johnson was bending 'em over today for Washington, "Kid" Gleason staged a double debut of new pitchers on his staff and Washington treated 'em rough. Erskine Mayer made his American league bow, which lasted for five innings, after which came forth Tom McGuire. The final count was 11 to 6 in favor of the Senators and five of the Sox's six runs were made in the last two rounds when Walter saw the foolishness of exertion.

Possibly Mayer would have given Walter something like a battle if he hadn't had to suffer bad breaks in the first two innings of the game. Washington counted twice in the opener, being helped with a passed ball and a fly lost in the sun; then they counted twice in the second, an error after two were out making this possible. Another error opened the way for a cluster of three in the fifth and Mayer's debut came to an end.

McGuire Lacks Control.

McGuire lacked control and had to ease up to get the ball over. When he eased up the home boys took delight in fattening their swat averages, all of which made it a bum party for Tom. Both he and Mayer knew it would be tough business in this league, but they didn't expect such treatment as was given them by Griffith's men.

To make it worse, the big crowd of 10,000, which is a big crowd in this town, took delight in taunting the efforts of the two Chicago debutants. Fans were continually hollering at Gleason to "warm up another dummy," and when Walter fanned one of the Chicago batsmen with a buzzer over the plate, they implored him to ease up a bit and not be so unkind to the league leaders.

Walter Speedy as Ever.

But Walter didn't "ease up" until the eighth inning, when he had nothing to worry about. In the first seven rounds he looked to be as fast as he ever was. The Sox got four hits off him in that time, but got seven more in the final two rounds.

In the third inning the Sox really earned a run when, with one out, Liebold got a scratch hit, moved to second on Eddie Collins' out, and scored on Weaver's single. That one was earned when Walter was exerting himself, but it is doubtful if the Sox could have made another by sundown if Walter had continued at the same pace.

Once Shanks booted the ball on the first Chicago batter, after which Johnson grabbed the ball and fanned three in a row, leaving the first batter stranded on first base.

Bum Stuff at Start Beats Sox.

It was the bum stuff at the start that beat the Sox. Mayer began by passing Judge and Foster poked a single to left. Both advanced on Milan's bunt. A passed ball then let Judge get home, after which Rice drove a fly to left center which Liebold could have caught if he hadn't lost it in the sun. It went for a double.

In the next inning Mayer disposed of the first two, but Johnson singled. Judge hammered one at Eddie Collins and Eddie fumbled it and then Foster doubled, sending both mates home. With four runs in, the game was as good as won.

From then on nothing but messy things mixed up with plenty of hitting. No one cared what was happening on the ball field and the crowd enjoyed the balance of the matinée simply by joshing the Chicago players. Washington fans believe in joshing when there's a chance. There hasn't been much joshing this year, but they all go out when its Johnson's turn to pitch.

Thirty-one Boats Start Race for $5,000 Trophy

Cleveland, O., Aug. 9.—Thirty-one cabin cruisers, ranging in size from thirty to fifty feet, started tonight in the 112 mile handicap cruise from the Cleveland Yacht club to Put-in-Bay and return.

The cruisers are racing for the $5,000 Commodore W. E. Scripps Reliability trophy and a prize of $1,000 divided among the first ten. Five cities were represented in the entries, Cleveland heading the list with twenty-one cruisers.

POOR SPORTSMANSHIP, WIRES BROWNS' OWNER TO YANKEE PRESIDENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(Special.)—A real league war is likely to result from the Carl Mays case. The bitterness which the Ban Johnson faction holds against the New York Yankees was shown tonight in a telegram from Phil Ball, owner of the St. Louis Browns. Col. Ruppert said that he considered Ball's telegram an insult. It was as follows:

"Answering telegram, your business sagacity and acumen in Mays matter does not appeal to us. Your sportsmanship smells to heaven. We decline your invitation.

"Signed. P. D. C. BALL."

Col. Ruppert immediately sent Ball the following answer:

"Refusal not unacceptable in view of your gratuitous insult in reply to polite invitation."

The Cleveland, Washington, and Detroit clubs have not yet answered the invitation. Boston and Chicago have accepted and Philadelphia and St. Louis have declined.

Notes

New York once more today.

The gap between Reds and Giants now is four and one-half games.

Each time Zimmerman came to bat there was a chorus of "boos," but they were drowned each time by cheers from the more fair minded.

The fans overflowed the plant before the game began and ropes were extended from first to third base all the way around the outfield.

Burns reached second in the third on his single and Young's swinging bunt. Fletcher hoisted to Robertson and Vaughn tossed out Chase.

Phil Douglas' mother, who has never seen him pitch a game, was planning to attend yesterday's battle, but was taken ill at Phil's residence, which he still retains on the north side.

The Cubs haven't enough games left to play with New York to catch up with the Giants in their series. The count now is nine for them and three for us.

Dick Kinsella, who does some of the ivory hunting for the Giants, purchased his own son, Robert, from the Little Rock club yesterday. That, so far as known, is a pater-filius record in baseball.

Killefer tried to start something in the third with a single. Vaughn fanned trying to sacrifice, but Flack walked. Hollocher hit to Douglas, who tried to tag Holly himself but missed him. Phil then threw at short range to Chase, who made a good play to catch the ball. That put the Cubs on second and third and the fans cheered Herzog lustily, but Kauff went and got his fly.

NOTES

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Either Eddie Cicotte or Claude Williams will be on the slab tomorrow. Shaw is the probable hurler for Washington.

Incredible as it may seem, the weather was cool and delightful. One could sleep last night with a thin spread over him.

Johnson waved to Eddie Collins to go ahead and steal second in the ninth, making it known he would be unmolested. Eddie went and gets credit for a regular steal in the record book.

It wasn't pleasant for the Sox players to see the runs going up on the score board for Detroit while they themselves were taking such a beating. All on Gleason's squad figure the Tigers as the trouble makers in the race.

Ray Schalk got a foul tip on the wishbone or the Adam's apple in the fifth when Murphy was batting and nearly took the count. He was gasping for breath when Umpire Chill pounded him on the back. After the fifth Ray retired.

HIPPO ALLOWS M'GRAW BUNCH ONLY FIVE HITS

Error Gives the Visitors Their Tally Before Capacity Mob.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Our Cubs bit another chunk out of the Giants' pennant aspirations yesterday by winning the second game of the series, 3 to 1, before an overflow crowd, and in response to rooting that listened like the old days.

Hippo Vaughn's pitching and his fortuitous baserunning were the battle's most prominent features in addition to being the determining factors to a considerable extent. He let the Giants down with five hits and would have shut them out if Killefer had not dropped the ball after tagging Kauff out at the pan in the second inning. That gift run was enough to tie the one the Cubs made in their second and it was beginning to look like extra innings when the break came in the eighth. Then Vaughn scored the winning tally himself by drawing a pass, dashing from first to third on a short single, and finishing in a double steal with Flack. Herzog made it safe with a triple on which Flack rode in.

Game a Hurling Duel.

It was a pitchers' combat between Vaughn and Phil Douglas all the way and with the breaks eliminated might have been a long one. The hurling was so good it made the game comparatively featureless, although Hollocher had opportunity to make a dashing play or two and Burns pulled a circus feat by sliding on his tonneau after pinching a liner from Killefer's bat.

Each pitcher gave two passes, but one of Hippo's was intentional to keep Zimmerman from hitting with a couple of Giants waiting to score in the sixth.

Herzog made one-third of the swats off Douglas and drove in the final counter, but swats by Robertson and Barber were valuable, for they manufactured the run in the second chapter.

Herzog Wastes Hit in First.

Herzog's boot and his hit in the first inning were both wasted. His wide peg to first let Fletcher live with two out, but Chase skied. Herzog's single came after two were gone in the home first and he was flagged stealing second.

Kauff blazed the trail to the first run with a hit that scratched off Vaughn's glove far enough to let Ben beat it. Vaughn knocked down Zim's blow and retired him. Baird drove a single to right, on which Kauff went home. Flack's throw beat the runner to the plate by a couple of yards, but Kauff threw himself at Killefer so hard it jarred the ball out of his hands and Bill lost the out after making it. Baird reached second during the mix-up, but was left there.

Robertson broke open our half with a single and reached second on a passed ball. Merkle dumped a bunt to Chase and was out, putting David on third. Barber hit a slow bounder toward third that looked safe enough. Douglas made it doubly so by fumbling the ball and Robertson scored. Deal popped a foul to Gonzales, and Barber was caught thieving second.

Vaughn Has Big Job in Sixth.

They went from there to the eighth in a deadlock. Vaughn had to do some pitching in the sixth. Young scratched a roller toward first, and beat it out cleanly. Fletcher walked and Chase sacrificed them to third and second. Vaughn put something on the ball and struck out Kauff, then pitched four bad ones intentionally to Zim, filling the bags. Baird looked at a lot of stuff and struck out while doing it.

Killefer opened the lucky eighth with a drive, which Burns pinched sensationally. Vaughn then worked Mr. Phil for a pass. Flack pulled a single to right, and Vaughn went all the way to third on it, because Young had no idea he was going to try it, and threw the ball to second instead of third.

Double Steal a Success.

Hollocher popped to Kauff, in short center, so they tried the desperate double steal, and it was desperate the way Gonzales had been nailing every Cub who tried to steal. This time he tried to stop Flack at second, apparently thinking Vaughn would stay on third. But Hippo didn't stay there. Instead, he tore home, and had an easy finish, because Gonzales' throw was poor and went through Fletcher. Herzog sent a screamer to left center and made three corners on it, scoring Flack.

Zimmerman singled with one gone in the ninth, but that gave the Cubs a chance to wind it up with a fast double play on Baird's grounder to Vaughn.

RED SOX AND BROWNS SPLIT.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 9.—Leifield's pitching was the main factor in St. Louis' winning the first game, 5 to 3, from Boston today, but the Red Sox won the second, 4 to 3, on St. Louis' errors in the eleventh. Hoyt won his third straight for Boston, holding the invaders to six hits. The winning run came on Shannon's single, successive errors on thrown balls by Robertson, and Austin and Hooper's sacrifice fly to Jacobson. Newkirk, Rookie Hurler, to Go East with Cubs

Norris City, Ill., Aug. 8.—[Special.]—Joel Newkirk, who will leave with the Chicago Cubs Monday on their eastern trip, has played professional ball in the minor leagues and among the semipros for the last five years. He is 23 years old.

Newkirk has been playing here this season with the Norris City All-Stars, and has a remarkable record of victories. The team is captained by "King" Brockett, one time New York Giant pitcher, who accompanied Newkirk to Chicago to guide him in attaching his signature to a Cub contract. The prediction here is that Joel will make good in the majors.

PIG IRON, COKE

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 6, 1919.

Owen Tire & Rubber Co.,
Bedford, Ohio.

Gentlemen:

Your solid tires were placed on a number of our trucks early last spring. These trucks are going all the time and handle regularly five and six tons to the load.

Your tires under these trying conditions are giving entire satisfaction.

They are wearing exceptionally well and we would say that the resiliency saves upkeep on our trucks.

Yours very truly,
Bourne-Fuller Co.
Thos. Wm. Murray, Supt.

Owen Tires are heavy duty tires—made to give excessive service, no matter what the requirements. Owen specialists will study your haulage problems—heavy or light—and advise you what tire you need.

YOUNG HARTMAN WINS CITY TITLE AS GOLF LEADER

Nineteen Year Old Youth Beats Smith, 6 and 4, for the Honors.

BY JOE DAVIS.

George Hartman of the Marquette Park Golf club, 19 years old and a sophmore at the University of Chicago, is the new Chicago golf champion. In the thirty-six hole final over the Jackson park course he defeated Bradford Smith of the Jackson Park club and U. of C. graduate, 6 and 4, the victory giving him possession of the trophy donated by Lewy Bros. Smith, who played shortstop on the Maroon nine, took the runner up cup given by Mrs. L. Lehman.

Both contestants merited their place in the finals, as Hartman in the third round defeated C. Kinnucan, 3 and 1, and W. Nannery, 4 and 2, in the semi-finals. Smith defeated George West, 3 and 2, in the third round and Lee Thiltges, in the semi-finals.

W. Cody of Jackson Park won the Howard Casey cup in the second flight by defeating D. R. Hyde of Marquette Park, 1 up, the loser getting the Thomas E. Wilson cup.

Hartman Plays Steadier Game.

Hartman played the steadier golf, his comfortable margin being due mainly to a number of long putts and to the poor work of Smith on the greens.

Smith's long game in the afternoon was ragged in spots and at the seventh tee he sliced three balls out of bounds. Trying desperately to correct this fault, he topped and pulled his next shot, the ball hitting a spectator and stopping about fifty yards from the tee. Hartman told him to drive another from the tee. He drove another ball from the tee and this time he got it down the middle of the course. Hartman also had a slight attack of "slicitis" as he put his first ball into the trees, and eventually won 6—9.

Play Even for Three Holes.

They halved the first three holes, but Hartman was 1 up at the turn, and increased this to 2 at the eleventh, where Smith went into the bushes, and could not find the ball even with the assistance of the gallery. Smith won the twelfth with a par 4, but Hartman sank a ten foot putt on the fourteenth green and again was 2 up.

Smith missed four foot puts on the sixteenth and seventeenth greens, the first for a win and the second for a half. He was 3 down at the interval.

Smith Starts Poorly.

Smith's chance of winning faded early in the afternoon, when he lost the first two holes. He took three to reach the first green, and was trapped on his second shot at the second hole. Each took one of the next two holes, and at the fifth green Smith sunk a nine foot putt for a win, 4—5. This left him 4 down, and things looked a little better when he won the sixth hole, 4—5, Hartman overplaying an approach putt badly and taking two more putts.

Then came the tragedy at the seventh tee, where Smith played five shots before getting away. Both drove the short eighth green, but Smith pulled his approach putt four feet wide of the pin and eight feet by. Hartman hit the cup on his long putt and won, 3—4.

Sinks Eighteen Foot Putt.

Hartman spanked a long drive from the ninth tee, Smith pulling to the tenth fairway and hitting a tree on his second. Hartman ran down an eighteen foot putt for a birdie three, and was 6 up at the twenty-seventh hole.

Hartman rimmed the cup on a thirty foot putt at the tenth hole, and halved in 4. Smith looked to have a chance at the eleventh, but Hartman halved with an eighteen foot putt.

Hartman took three putts from the edge of the thirteenth green and lost, 4—3. He took the long fourteenth with a fine 4, and that settled the match.

New London, Conn., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow of Philadelphia won the Shenacossett championship today when she defeated Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Chicago in the final, 1 up.

In the early stages it looked as if the Chicago golfer was going to have things pretty much her own way. She started out by winning the first two holes, and after losing the third came back and resumed her lead at the fourth, when she made a fine two. Mrs. Barlow won the long fifth and then halves followed at the next two holes.

The match was squared at the eighth.

Miss Rosenthal won the ninth and Mrs. Barlow the tenth. The Philadelphia woman drove out of bounds on the short eleventh, but lost this one, but on the twelfth Miss Rosenthal knocked her opponent's ball into the hole. Pitch and Run Approach Shot Described by George O'Neil

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

The three standard types of approach shots are commonly known as the pitch and run shot, the chip shot, and the back-spin shot. They must be carefully distinguished from one another, because each is played in a different way and any mixture of styles is likely to result in failure. After they have been mastered, the player must in each case decide definitely and positively which he wishes to play and play it. To think of one style while trying to play another is fatal to success.

The pitch and run shot is intended to pitch through the air a certain distance and then run a certain distance more. This double object controls the character of back and forward swings the manner in which the club face meets the ball, and the management of the finish.

Directions for Stance.

For the stance, face slightly toward the hole, with the left foot further from the line of direction than the right. The feet should be about ten inches apart, and the ball should lie nearly opposite the left heel.

The club should be gripped firmly in the fingers, but in such a manner as to allow the wrists to move freely. This is important in all shots, but perhaps especially so in approach shots. The test of the grip is to swing the club gently once or twice above the ball. If any tension is felt in the wrists or if the weight of the club head is not distinctly felt, it is certain that the grip is either too much in the palms of the hands or too fiercely maintained.

Club Faced Toward Hole.

The club should be faced accurately toward the hole and the swing should be accurately in the line of direction. If the club is properly faced and the swing is accurate the ball must go in the right direction. If it does not, the remedy is, not to try to counter-balance an incorrect swing by an incorrect facing of the ball, but to look to both facing and swing and make both correct.

The sole of the club should be horizontal, and it will be if it is faced properly and if the player is standing neither too far from the ball nor too near to it.

Roll Wrists on Back Swing.

In beginning the back swing, the toe of the club should lead the movement, being carried backward and upward by the rolling of the wrists. The amount of the turn is graded by the length of the back swing. The left arm should be extended, but not stiff, throughout the swing.

The forward swing should be made with a throw of the club head—not with a push or a pull. The success of the stroke will depend upon this as much as upon any other one element. Let the club head lead and the hands and arms follow. As the forward swing begins, the reversal of the wrist roll begins, bringing the face of the club perpendicular to the line of direction at the moment of contact with the ball, and continuing with the result of turning the toe of the club forward and upward in the follow through.

Swing Smooth, Not Jerky.

The whole swing, though beginning with a throw, should be smooth and fluent, not jerky. The follow through should be the natural and unchecked result of the swing.

It is easily seen that if the stroke is properly made the club head should meet the ball at the bottom of the swing and take the ball as it rises. The turning of the club head will impart a forward spin. The two factors combined will result in the desired pitch, followed by a well proportioned run.

The pitch and run shot may be played either with a mashie or—still better, as many players think—with a jigger. The jigger has the same slope of blade as the mashie, but the blade is longer and narrower. As the weight is approximately the same, the center of balance of the club falls lower. As a result, the head is felt more distinctly and tends to carry through more positively than when thrown at the ball in the forward swing.

BETTING ON NAGS AN EASY MATTER AT AURORA TRACK

Arrest of Two "Bookies" Only Casualties on First Day.

Another attempt was made to revive running races in Illinois yesterday when Aurora started a thirteen day meeting of the "bang tails" and ran off a card of five events with two casualties, the latter being Chicago bookmakers who had visions of "another Hawthorne" until they ran afoul a picked squad of the sheriff's "finest" and were haled into court. The judge, evidently, was awaiting such a "coincidence," and Kane county was enriched to the extent of $75.60, each bookie being fined $32.80. They were back in time for the last race.

Thousand See Races.

About one thousand of the faithful viewed the sport, the majority being Chicagoans. The chief race was the Aurora derby, at a mile and an eighth, which fell to H. C. Basch, the favorite, after a stiff stretch drive with Hamilton A. The latter was taken off a railroad car from Cheyenne and led directly to the track for the race.

Little trouble was experienced by the Chicagoans desiring to make a wager. Several well known loop bookmakers took up stations behind the grand stand and allowed the bettor to slip his money in a program in the hands of his assistant. Among those present was Barney Schreiber, famous hereabouts in the palmy days of racing.

CHICAGO TENNIS CLUB ANNEXES ITS THIRD TITLE

Lands Flag by Defeating South Park Team by 5 to 4.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Chicago Tennis club yesterday added the Chicago Tennis association pennant of 1919 to its flags won in 1917 and 1918, defeating South Park in the final match of the season, 5 individual contests to 4. The match was played on the losers' courts at Calumet avenue and Sixty-second street.

Williams Plays Good Game.

In the absence of W. S. Miller in California, the sensational young player, Lucien E. Williams of Highland Park, led the Chicago team. His brush in the No. 1 match against Perry (Pat) Segal of the University of Chicago freshman team was a spirited duel of fast driving and volleying. Williams won, 6—4, 6—4. The most bitter singles match was the No. 4 event, in which Allen Wylie of South Park won from Maurice E. James, the former Northwestern varsity athlete, 1—6, 8—6, 6—4.

Even Break in Singles.

The club broke even in singles, then Chicago won the first doubles event to be finished, James and Don F. Wiley being the victors. This gave a lead of 4 to 3, and left the decision swaying to be determined by the other two doubles contests. Both were three set tussles, which finished about the same time, but Williams and John F. Kenfield clinched it for Chicago, defeating Segal and Wylie, 6—2, 2—6, 6—1. Summaries:

SINGLES—Lucien E. Williams, Chicago, defeated Perry Segal, South Park, 6—4, 6—4. Don F. Wiley, Chicago, defeated Harry Holbrook, South Park, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. Leigh R. Campbell, South Park, defeated John F. Kenfield, Chicago, 6—3, 6—3. Allen Wylie, South Park, defeated Maurice E. James, Chicago, 1—6, 8—6, 6—4. Harold Forster, South Park, defeated C. O. Carlstrom, Chicago, 9—7, 7—5. George K. Reeves, Chicago, defeated H. A. Pinney, South Park, 7—5, 2—6, 7—5.

DOUBLES—L. E. Williams and J. F. Kenfield, Chicago, defeated Perry Segal and Allen Wylie, South Park, 6—2, 2—6, 6—1. E. E. James and D. F. Wiley, Chicago, defeated Paul R. McCaskey and J. P. Benson, South Park, 6—2, 6—3. Harry Holbrook and Kinsey, South Park, defeated G. G. Grenz and C. O. Carlstrom, Chicago, 6—3, 3—6, 6—2.

Division B

CHAMPIONSHIP MATCH TODAY.

South Park, winner in the south section of Division B, and Lawchester, winner in the north section, will play the title match in their class this afternoon at the South Side club at 2:30 o'clock.

South Park was undefeated winner in its sectional schedule. Lawchester claimed a defaulted team victory from Chicago, after the latter club did not appear at Lawchester. The Chicago club decided not to dispute the claim.

Division C

OAK PARK [2] AT PHONE CO. [3].

A. Whitman of the Chicago Telephone company and F. M. Preucil, the veteran player of the North Oak Park Tennis club, decided team honors yesterday in Division C of the Chicago Tennis association. Whitman won. The match was played on the phone company's courts at Forty-fifth street and Cottage Grove. Summaries:

SINGLES—V. Darnell [O. P.] beat H. Dohm [C. T.], 2—6, 6—4, 6—3. W. Weston [C. T.] beat L. Bailey [O. P.], 6—2, 6—2. A. Whitman [C. T.] beat F. M. Preucil [O. P.], 13—11, 7—9, 6—4.

DOUBLES—H. Dohm and W. Weston [C. T.], beat V. French and N. Coombs [O. P.], 7—5, 6—3. G. Preucil and V. Darnell [O. P.] beat A. Whitman and R. Nehringer [C. T.], 6—4, 7—5.

Public Parks League

WASHINGTON [3] AT OGDEN [2].

The second team of Washington Park, playing in the Public Parks association, wrested a hard fought team decision from Ogden on the losers' courts. Summaries:

SINGLES—C. Walbert [W.] beat L. De Swarte [O.], 6—2, 0—6, 6—2. R. Billings [O.] beat Carl Cohn [W.], 6—2, 6—4. I. Ostberg [W.] beat H. Mueller [O.], 6—3, 6—2.

DOUBLES—R. Billings and Reimer [O.] beat L. B. Reedy and C. Cohn [W.], 7—5, 6—4. C. Walbert and I. Ostberg [W.] beat L. De Swarte and A. Brown [O.], 6—3, 6—4.

GARFIELD CLAIMS FORFEIT.

Garfield Park was scheduled to play Palmer at Garfield, and when none of the latter team showed up, put in a claim for five forfeited matches. These five matches would clinch the pennant, even in case Garfield should be soundly defeated by Washington next week.

HAYES CAPTURES 3 TENNIS TITLES

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Displaying a brand of tennis such as has perhaps never before been exhibited in these parts, Walter T. Hayes of Chicago wrested the Michigan state title from Walter K. Wesbrook in the finals of the Michigan tournament this afternoon, defeating the champion in straight sets, 6—0, 6—2, and 6—0. Coupled with Miss Carrie B. Neely of Chicago, Hayes defeated Miss Rask and H. Bartel of Cleveland in the mixed doubles in one set, 9—7, before darkness stopped the tournament. Hayes and Vincent Vernon of Cleveland won the men's doubles final from Henry Bartel and C. Hane of Cleveland, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3.

CATALINA FISHING.

> The accompanying story is a continuation of an article on Catalina fishing, the first part of which was published in last Sunday's Tribune. It is from the pen of a correspondent who signs himself "Sea Fisher."

"THE giant fishes of Catalina attract those of strenuous tastes, but in my opinion the smaller tuna on light tackle offer more sport and the yellow tail fishing is wonderful—that's the word to describe it.

"The yellow tail is a mackerel-like fish closely related to the amberjack of Florida and is what might be called 'a fightin' son of a gun.' The Light Tackle club, a branch of the Tuna club, offers a bronze button for any yellow tail of twenty pounds or more caught on light tackle; a thirty pounder gets a silver button, and a gold button goes to the lucky angler taking one of forty pounds or over.

"The yellow tail is entitled to all the praise he has received. They are beautiful to look at, trim as a yacht, beautifully colored, and the runs they make when hooked are truly thrilling, although when caught in deep water they have a tendency to sulk.

"The yellow tail is the game fish of the people in this region. It is not an uncommon sight to see men, women, and children catching them in Avalon bay from rowboats. The better way, however, is to troll for them from a launch, using either light or 6-6 tackle with a seven inch sardine for bait, although the larger ones will take a flying fish.

"Most of the fishing for yellow tail is done along shore and with blue sky above and blue water below; it is a game that one never tires of, for a yellow tail never acknowledges defeat—famous anglers say a yellow tail would drown a salmon of twice his weight.

"I have taken yellow tail by casting along the kelp beds, and that is quite some fishing. The element of uncertainty is here as in all fishing, but usually they can be taken any day from March to mid-December.

"The albacore or long finned tuna is another fish worth traveling across the continent to catch. The record fish weighed 65¼ pounds, caught by an Illinois angler, but 20, 35 and 50 pounders get buttons from the Light Tackle club.

"The albacore is a beautiful fish and a fighter but unfortunately those caught here in the summer run smaller, averaging around 16 pounds. On light tackle these are not to be sneezed at, as they put up a good scrap and are willing biters, the favorite summer lure being a piece of white cloth.

"The white sea bass is another top liner at Catalina, the Tuna club offering buttons for those over 20 pounds on the same scale as for yellow tail and albacore. They are usually more plentiful in the spring, but some years they stay all summer. Then there is the yellow fin tuna, a slashing fighter running up to 60 pounds, which bite best in August and September.

"Any one of the fishes mentioned so far would give a fishing region a reputation, but they do not cover the list of Catalina game fishes by a long shot. Barracuda—different from those of Florida and perhaps not quite as game—bonito, dolphin, seat trout, skip jack, rock bass, sheepshead, white fish, blue eyed perch, medialuna, are a few of the minor leaguers here. If one wanted to take the time he could start in and catch sardines on a fly rod and then go the whole route up to giant sharks.

"The tackle approved by the Tuna club is light and elegant and gives the fish a good fighting chance. In addition to the sixteen ounce rods mentioned last week, there are two other classes.

"The light tackle rod consists of a butt and tip made of bamboo or wood, not shorter than six feet over all. Handle or butt must not be over 14 inches long and tip must be at least five feet and weigh not more than six ounces. The line used with this rod must not be more than nine thread, testing two pounds to the thread.

"The three-six rod must not be shorter than six feet and the entire rod must not exceed six ounces in weight. Line must be standard six thread, testing not over twelve pounds. Fish of over forty-five pounds have been landed on three-six tackle, so you can see it is not frail in proper hands.

"While it is advisable, it is not necessary for the angler to own his tackle. Standard club tackle is furnished by the boatsmen at no extra charge, although if it is broken the angler must pay for it, which is fair enough.

"Two anglers can rent a launch for about $10 a day, which includes a boatsman, who acts as guide, skipper, engineer, and gaffer. Boats are spotlessly clean, and, as the angler does not touch his fish, it is not necessary to wear old clothes if he doesn't want to, and slickers are never used here, as it doesn't rain often enough in the fishing season to warrant carrying them. In fact, I know an angler who comes to Catalina every year, and all the equipment he brings is a pair of tennis slippers.

"If the angler has a family that doesn't like fishing as the old man does, Catalina is the place to bring them. Avalon has a summer population of over 5,000, with a big variety of wholesome amusements for ladies and children, and the big, modern city of Los Angeles is only a couple of hours away.

"The nonangling part of the family can play or shop while the mighty angler tries conclusions with the scrappiest fishes in the world—and lots of 'em."

Evanston Title Tennis Tourney Opens Aug. 16

IOWA GRID CAPTAIN ILL.

Iowa City, Ia., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Another Hawkeye football captain, Roland Reed, all Iowa and all conference end in 1918, has undergone an operation for appendicitis. The Iowa star has been engaged to coach Mason City, Ia., High school the coming season.

WHIST QUERY

Oak Park, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—In one of our Oak Park bridge clubs, whose ruling is that where the score exceeds 300 only 300 bonus plus honors may be counted, the question as to just what are the honors arose over the following hand:

Four hearts was bid, the bid was doubled and redoubled; the contract was fulfilled and a small slam was made. Now what would the honor score be? D. O.

Ans.—Your agreement would seem to mean that the declarer would lose the bonus for a small slam. In that case he could score in the honor column 300 plus his score for honors held. Your rule is very bad. With the intention, doubtless, of reducing losses incurred by large penalties, the result could only be to increase the number of losses. Such a rule makes for wild bidding and bad doubling.

ANTIPODES TEAM SCORES VICTORY IN NET DOUBLES

Brookes and Patterson by Great Play Beat Johnson and Richards.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 9—Norman E. Brookes and Gerald Patterson, the Australian tennis stars, won the doubles honors in the revival of the Casino club invitation tournament this afternoon, winning from Wallace F. Johnson, Cynwyd, Pa., and Vincent Richards, Yonkers, N. Y., 6-1, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5, 7-5, in a sensational final match.

In the invitation singles, William T. Tilden, Jr., the 6 foot 4 inch Philadelphian, by whirlwind tennis, evened up for his recent defeat at the hands of William M. Johnston, San Francisco, by defeating the latter, 7-5, 8-6, 6-1, in the finals.

Test of Well Matched Teams.

The doubles match was a test of two well matched teams. In the semi-finals in the morning Johnston and young Richards qualified to play their internationalist opponents by defeating R. V. Thomas and Randolph Lycett, the other Australian entry in the doubles play, 6—4, 6—4, 6—4. Johnston's chop shots bothered the men from the antipodes, and Richards drove along the alleys and between them.

Brookes and Patterson, playing machinelike tennis, outplayed R. Norris Williams Jr. of Philadelphia and Watson M. Washburn of New York in the other semi-final, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

Final Draws Gala Crowd.

The final doubles match drew a gala crowd which appreciated fully the marvelous team play of the Australians. Of the two Patterson played the more strenuous game and made a total of 31 placements—most of them by smashes. Brookes had some hard luck in having his strokes go out by inches. The teamwork was remarkable.

WYOMING CLUB TAKES FEATURE AT NAVY RANGE

Caldwell, N. J., Aug. 9.—The Civilian club match today at the United States navy reservation here was won by the Newcastle Rifle and Gun club of Wyoming with a score of 759 in 800. The championship company team match was captured by the Range company of Quantico, Va., by a score of 748. These matches were shot on 200 and 500 yard ranges.

C., won second place in the Civilian club match with a score of 735, and the Ordnance Rifle club of Washington, D. C., was third with 733. Utah Civilian teams Nos. 2 and 1 finished fourth and fifth with scores of 730 and 729.

'OUTSIDER' CAPTURES FEATURE $2,500 PACE IN CIRCUIT GETAWAY

Cleveland, O., Aug. 9.—The biggest upset of the Grand Circuit meeting came today when Russell Boy, an outsider, won the free-for-all pace for a purse of $2,500, feature of the getaway card at North Randall.

The contest was figured as a strictly two horse race between Miss Harris M. and Single G., but neither was able to get to the wire first. Russell Boy led all around in the first two heats, winning with plenty to spare. In the third heat, however, after leading most of the way, he succumbed to Directum J., about fifty feet from the finish and finished half a length back.

Neither Russell Boy nor Directum J. was given much consideration by the speculators. They sold at $20 in the auction pool, while Miss Harris M. brought $300 and Single G. $250.

Britton Forbes and Amardale were the only favorites to win.

Today's receipts, $4,300, were given to charity. Summaries:

Frank A. Martin, Central A. A. U. handicapper, last night released the list of handicaps for this afternoon's eight mile modified marathon of the Logan Square Athletic club, over Milwaukee, Logan, Campbell, and Diversey avenues, a two and a half mile loop, which will be traversed three times.

The event from the standpoint of entries is the biggest ever held locally by any club, 142 athletes of twenty-three organizations being listed. The event will start at 2 o'clock.

The scratch men, George Hankel of the Logan Square A. C. and Frank Gillespie of the Illinois A. C., will be watched with great interest, as both have shown that they possess national championship caliber in events held last spring in the east.

The handicaps are considered liberal and hopes of the scratch men in catching up with the limit allowance men are slim. Mitchell Baker, with nine minutes, is 55 years old. The entries:

ESSEX MOTOR CARS DETROIT USA
Join The Half Million
Used in 3000 Cities, Its Admirers Are Now Legion
Who Praise The Essex
The Essex is now known in more than three thousand towns and cities.
Deliveries of new cars approximate a hundred a day.
Thousands, through demonstrations made by dealers and rides with friends, are daily learning the qualities that account for Essex popularity.
Their knowledge, like those who have not yet ridden in the Essex, was limited to hearsay. But their impressions were most favorable because of what others had told them.
Won't You Too Join Its Army?
You, too, will volunteer your endorsement, we are sure, if you will but ride in the Essex.
It has never failed. Our estimate is that more than half a million have ridden in it and are telling their friends about the Essex.
Such praise is not misplaced. We don't believe it greater than the car deserves. But that you will be able to judge after you have ridden in the Essex.
Points Others Speak Of
Note how motor car talk quickly turns to the Essex.
When light, cheap cars are spoken of their qualities are usually compared to the Essex.
Then someone says, "But the Essex also has——" and from then on Essex qualities are compared to large costly cars.
It isn't likely that anyone will say any light similarly priced car approaches the value of the Essex.
In performance, for instance, you won't hear it classed with any but the most powerful.
And so with its riding qualities, which are invariably compared to high priced large cars.
So is the detail of finish and beauty judged by such standards.
Comparison with other light weight moderate priced cars can be made only with their respective first and operating costs.
Can You Resist the Invitation?
We hope you won't delay in accepting our invitation to ride in the Essex.
The result, we think, will be your leaving an order to be filled as soon as possible. We know you will help spread the news about the Essex, for it must inspire you with the same admiration others voice for it.

KARL "EXPOSES" TO AWED BERLIN HORRORS IN U. S.

Massacre of Interned Germans Vividly, Very Vividly Told.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Simple minded Americans who believed German civilians confined in internment camps in the United States received something like humane treatment are about to learn the truth concerning the shocking, terrible, awful conditions that existed there.

As a vanguard of the great exposé army several Germans who were shipped directly from those camps to the fatherland and who reached Berlin last week already have told horror stories which prove beyond doubt that the Americans still are savages. The chief chronicler of starvation, cruelty, and murder to date is Karl Hentschel, who was released from Fort Douglas, Utah, in the middle of June.

Records "Wholesale Shootings."

Hentschel has published a long account of his sufferings, which began with "confinement among the Negroes and rats for six months" and wound up in "wholesale shootings" of offending prisoners in order that the commanding officer of the camp "might win a speedy promotion." And apparently all Karl did was attempt to preach sedition wherever he went and to stir up Mexico against the United States!

Calls Photos Fakes.

Karl explains the photographs showing the prisoners taking siestas, playing tennis, attending concerts and engaging in athletic games, are all fakes and then launches into the "commandant lieutenant." "Every time he committed an outrage against the prisoners, and they complained, he was promoted another step. When I was arrested he was a major. He had all our personal belongings destroyed and was made a lieutenant colonel. As still there are prisoners there now he probably is a generalissimo."

Karl further states it was quite fashionable in American camps to shoot down prisoners without cause. Thus in 1918 a sentry whimsically fired five shots through the barb wire, wounded a young man named Braun now in Berlin, and shot the wooden leg off of an old man. The sentry was arrested but escaped. Two months later twelve prisoners were scattered along the barb wire one evening when they were suddenly fired upon, and seven fell.

BACK FROM WAR

BRIG. GEN. CHARLES G. DAWES.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago arrived in Washington last night from New York, having just returned from France, where he recently resigned from the United States liquidation commission.

Gen. Dawes has brought to Washington important records which will be turned over to the secretary of war tomorrow.

Mrs. Dawes accompanies her soldier husband. Gen. Dawes would not discuss his future plans tonight, but expects to go to Chicago within a few days to look after his private interests as president of the Central Trust company of Illinois, having been out of touch with them in army service since June, 1917, serving in France with Illinois national guard troops as major, lieutenant colonel, and colonel until appointed by Gen. Pershing to the administrative staff.

SPEEDER, BUT NO LIAR, ALDERMAN FORCES ARREST

Motorcycle Policeman Louis Windleborn of Evanston, culminating a mile chase of a speeding automobile, overtook the offender and began:

"You're under arrest. Whaddymean by exceeding—— O, I beg par——"

"That's all right," said the offender, Ald. Hiram McCullough of Evanston, "that's all right, officer."

"I beg pardon, Mr. Alderman. Kind of ease up on the throttle after this, please," and Mr. Windleborn started to chug away.

"Wait a minute!" yelled Ald. McCullough. "Come back here. I know I'm guilty. You can't let me get away that easy. Arrest me."

The motorcycle copper obeyed. The case will be heard today.

Simple Twist of Wrist Saves $900 from Robbers

A simple twist of the wrist saved $900 for Daniel Enright, owner of an ice cream parlor at 859 Polk street, Friday night, when two armed men entered the store. Enright was counting the cash and a roll containing $900 was under his hand. He tossed the bills into a corner and held up his hands. The robbers obtained $6.

EUROPEAN CHAOS LAID TO MINDS WARPED BY WAR

German Specialist Says Many Brains Have Been Jarred.

BY PARKE BROWN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—Impressions that among the agitators constantly trying to start a new revolution in Germany are an unusually large number of men and women afflicted mentally by the long strain of war and the violence of the riots which followed were verified in statements by several specialists who have given the subject close study.

According to Dr. Gottholdt Matlock, these disturbers are recruited from the weak minded, the undeveloped, the gifted but impractical intellectuals, and the weak willed and scatterbrained persons who have been jarred out of their ordinary calm by the successive mental shocks of the last five years so that their unsoundness become pronounced.

While possibly not exactly in line with this subject the latest agricultural strike in Pomerania discloses a strange mental process. Two farm hands caught stealing sheep were arrested. Thereupon all other workers struck until their two colleagues were released.

Great Lakes Pigeons to Fly Against 300 Others

Great Lakes gobs are betting on the prize pigeons of Chief Quartermaster R. McGowin, which are going to do a little fancy flying in competition with 300 other birds. Chief McGowin will ship his pets to Kenosha this week. They will fly from that city. Later they will fly over 300, 500, and 1,000 mile courses. They are all thoroughbred homing pigeons, raised by McGowin at the station. Some recently flew from Norfolk, Neb., to South Bend, Ind., in eight hours, covering 500 miles at 62½ miles an hour.

Young Woman Killed When Brother's Auto Skids

Aurora, Ill., Aug. 9.—[Special.]—Miss Anna Komes, 28 years old, was killed last night when an automobile driven by her brother, Harry Komes, a local merchant, skidded on the Lincoln highway, near Aurora, and crashed into a telephone pole. She came to her death on the way home from the cemetery, where she had decorated the grave of her mother.

GENEVA READY TO BE CAPITAL OF WORLD UNION

Visit to Proposed Site Shows Advantages.

BY G. H. PERRIS.

Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.
[Copyright: 1919.]

GENEVA, Aug. 9.—Where will the executive of the league of nations be housed? There is much more in this question than the choice between one site and another, between a suburb of Brussels and the little paradise on Lake Leman. Above all, it is a choice of moral and political atmosphere.

The Geneva site lies about eight miles outside the city between the villages of Genthod and Versoix and between the north bank of the lake and the French frontier. It includes the chateau of M. de Saussure, dating from 1723, and of M. de Pourtales, from 1750, another large house called the Château Rouge and lesser buildings with five or six square miles of grounds.

At Center of Europe.

The lakeside is eminently suitable for the establishment of aviation and wireless stations, and the city of Geneva, situated so near the center of Europe, offers many advantages for other means of communication.

In the quaint old buildings of state and municipality of Geneva State Chancellor Brete was good enough to show me a range of rooms that might serve for committee meetings of the league. They include the famous hall where the Geneva Red Cross convention of 1864 was negotiated, and where the Alabama arbitration in 1872 routed the last danger of conflict between England and America—doubly sacred ground.

To Stick to League.

There is little doubt the Swiss people will vote their adhesion to the league, for the federal council has given a clear lead in this sense and writers like Prof. Rappord and M. Schultheis have shown beyond mistake that the confederation has practically no choice.

MRS. C. C. MUDGE CALLS HUSBAND RUNAWAY; SUES

It's a wise wife who knows her own husband, and, according to a dispatch from Omaha, Neb., last night, Mrs. Clifford C. Mudge of Chicago has learned a few things about hers.

She filed suit for separate maintenance and a financial accounting in Omaha yesterday, charging that a man posing as Don Wallace is her husband and that he ran away from her two years ago. She also accuses him of posing as C. C. Murray to his employer, the Home Securities company of Sioux City, from which firm, she says, he draws $25,000 a year. She has asked for an injunction to prevent Mudge, or Wallace, or Murray, from checking against his bank account.

City Club Aid Gets $1,000 as 'Best Steward in U. S.'

Joseph W. Palise, manager of the City club, was awarded first prize of $1,000 as the best steward in the United States last night at a banquet of the International Stewards' association at the Morrison hotel. The selection was by vote of those present. Second prize, $500, was awarded Frank A. Knapp of Pittsburgh, and third and fourth prizes of $250 each went to W. P. Barry of Philadelphia and Jacob Miller of Chicago. The banquet marked the close of the hotel show held under the auspices of the association, at which goods valued at over $1,000,000 were sold. A. O. McCaffrey of Pittsburgh was elected president of the association.

Why Dr. Pinkston's Combination Last Shoes Are Better than the standard shoes is because they are two widths narrower in the heel, one width narrower in the arch and two widths wider through the ball of the foot than any shoe that has ever been made. The narrow heel prevents the shoe from slipping up and down. The narrow arch keeps the foot from sliding forward. The broad ball gives perfect freedom of the toes. The entire comfort and grace of walking depend upon the proper articulation of the ball of the foot.

Even after Five Thousand Miles, regardless of the past service rendered should a Kokomo tire prove defective, an adjustment satisfactory to the user will be made.

LONG-LIFE Kokomo TIRES AND TUBES
5000 MILE GUARANTEE

Because it is impossible, absolutely impossible, to build better tires than Kokomos, it is impossible to guarantee more than five thousand miles without adjustment. At this figure, Kokomos never fail and in most cases run ten thousand, or even fifteen thousand miles, giving perfect service.

But to our mind, it is better to guarantee five thousand miles and have all tires develop more, than to guarantee unreasonable mileage, build a cheaper tire and sell tires that "go bad" at four thousand miles. The Kokomo honest guarantee of 5,000 miles means a square deal until these perfect tires are worn out.

And it may be exactly the kind of proposition you've been looking for.

Many men have thought about going into business for themselves. They've simply been waiting for the right opportunity to come along.

We're in business to start the right kind of men in a very clean and profitable business for themselves; and it doesn't require a very large amount of capital either.

We supply the complete equipment for Innovation Daytime Bakeries. We sell you everything you need to start a baking establishment which will make fresh bread every hour.

Everybody who eats is your customer. Most people like fresh bread. Your first sale will usually make a permanent customer; and before you know it, you have developed a business which pays you a very handsome profit.

The bread is perfectly baked in a special oven which we have designed. The loaves are placed on slowly revolving drums, and baked in about 40 minutes. The machinery itself is interesting, and you usually have a crowd at your window. You can bake all kinds of bread or rolls.

All you supply are the energy and the location. Our plan furnishes you with the complete outfit, including ovens, bread mixer, cabinets for raising the bread, counters, cash registers, and the entire equipment for a business of 1,600 loaves a day.

If you are looking for a chance to get into a clean, modern business, where you will be your own boss, and where the profits will be just as big as your own enthusiasm can make them, we would like to hear from you. 53,200 JOHNSONS IN ARMY; SMITHS IN SECOND PLACE

War Risk Bureau Has a Puzzling Job with Duplicated Names.

BY CAPT. KENT A. HUNTER.

[Tribune reporter who saw service in France with Col. Foreman's artillery.]

Daily thousands of letters of inquiry pour into the bureau of war risk insurance in Washington containing anxious questions about allotments, government insurance, bonus payments, final discharge pay, and the thousand and one financial matters between the 5,000,000 men who were in service and their government.

As fast as the great stacks of correspondence can be taken up they are checked, filed, and answered, and the matters of difficulty straightened out. But no one, except those actually engaged in clearing away the trouble, can appreciate the obstacles that have to be overcome. Carelessness in giving addresses, or in giving notification of change of address, or by handwriting that cannot be easily deciphered, is responsible for three-fourths of the trouble.

Johnsons in Lead.

The bureau has compiled a statement showing that there were 53,200 Johnsons in the army, 51,950 Smiths, 49,000 Williams, 48,000 Browns, 28,000 Jones, 22,000 Andersons, and 18,500 Walkers. Of the Johnsons there were 2,138 with the first name John and 2,062 answering to William. Of the Smiths, 2,412 were Johns and 2,625 Williams, with 1,200 of them using the baffling title of "E. Smith."

The bureau points out the apparent hopelessness of locating the correct indices of the multitudinous name similes unless full information as to regiment at time of discharge, correct home address, full name, and if possible army serial number, the numbers of applications for allotments, bonds, insurance policies, and commutation allowances.

Were 50 Marys.

One communication is quoted as an example. A John J. O'Brien, writing about his insurance policy, stated he could be identified in lieu of his serial and certificate numbers by the fact that the beneficiary named was his wife, Mary A. The research workers of the bureau found that there were 175 John J. O'Briens and that fifty of them had wives whose names are Mary A.

To locate "J. A. Brown" would necessitate search through 2,000 index cards, the bureau points out; looking for "C. E. Johnson" would require search through 6,000 cards; "H. H. Miller" through 3,000 cards, and "J. W. Smith" through 14,000 cards.

In handling names of Americans of foreign extraction the greatest difficulty has been in deciphering the chirography of compound "o's" and "z's" and "y's" and "s's" and "f's." To straighten the matter out, as far as possible, the bureau has prepared a form, which they ask correspondents to fill out and inclose with the letters of inquiry. The form is intended to give the searchers in the bureau files data upon which to work. It is self-explanatory and is reproduced with this article.

Hundreds of Girls Used.

In tracing down the inquiries that flood the bureau each day hundreds of girls are used—all of them girls who have had experience in library or catalogue work. They are from every state in the union and inquiries from their state are always referred to them because of their knowledge of towns, counties, and postoffice addresses in their districts.

Some of the difficulties arise through adherence to old customs of the land of their fathers by young Americans who proved their loyalty by following the colors. One instance is that of a soldier by the name of Jose Colozan y Sepulveda. From the American view point this soldier's name is Colozan, but according to Spanish custom the Sepulveda, which was his mother's last name, is affixed to every official document. Where a name is recorded in this manner the mother of the boy, in writing to the bureau to inquire about his insurance, says his name is Sepulveda. If the father writes he informs the bureau his son's name is Colozan.

Seven First Names.

Localities sometimes run to similarity in names. There were 894 Porto Ricans in the army named Rodriguez. The serial number of each was in the 600,000 group. There were but seven first names—Domingo, Francisco, Jose, Juan, Ramon, Tomas, and Antonio. Fifty-one of the Jose Rodriguezes were in the 374th infantry. There were twenty-nine Francisco Rodriguezes in the 373d, 374th, and 375th infantries.

An old Scandinavian custom changes the name with each generation. For instance, the youth in Uncle Sam's army bears the name of John Thompson. His beneficiary is his father, in Christiania, Thomas Johnson. It is a time honored system, for the first name of the father to be adopted for the last name of the son, with the word "son" added. The father, therefore is Thomas Johnson, the son, John Thompson.

Different spellings of common names cause still further difficulties. One young woman searcher in the bureau found that Aloysius is spelled forty-nine different ways on applications that were given her to check. Another has specialized on the spelling of Ignatz, and found eighteen variations. Still another learned twenty-four ways to spell John.

One mystery of the bureau is the identity of Isaac Didnot Butcher. There are dozens of official papers inquiring for him, but none which give his serial number. Perhaps the most frequently scanned identification card is that of Bertholdt Otto Aabel of Minden, Neb. His card is the very first on record. Wladyslaus Charles Zyzes, Rome, N. Y., is the last name listed.

Harry Adolph Thomas Richard Eugene Bullock of Salmon, Idaho, has the most troublesome name in the record bureau. All five of his given names are copied on each official paper that is required for record purposes.

GETS DIVORCE FROM 20 MINUTE NAVY HUSBAND

Mrs. Lehr Coogan, 4144 Sheridan road, was granted a divorce by Judge John M. O'Connor in the Superior court when she told him that her husband, John J. Coogan, an officer in the navy, had deserted her after they had been married only twenty minutes.

They were married July 25, 1917, at Manhattan, N. Y., Mrs. Coogan testified.

"We didn't have any trouble," she testified. "He just said, 'I don't want to live with you. I have you now. That's all I wanted.' He writes once in a while, but he says he never will come back to me."

Judge O'Connor granted the divorce.

WIFE'S LOVE OF TRINKETS COSTS HER A HUSBAND

Forgave Her Once, but Never Again, Says B. H. Hamlin.

It was because Florence B. Hamlin "loved pretty things which her husband couldn't give her" that she was unfaithful to Benjamin M. Hamlin according to the testimony given yesterday before Judge John M O'Connor in the Superior court.

Hamlin is superintendent of the J. V. Myering Truck company and lives at 1959 West Monroe street.

Cites Cabaret Parties.

"On two different occasions," Hamlin testified, "I came home for dinner and my wife wasn't there. About 1 o'clock in the morning she came home and said she had been cabareting and attending parties in hotels with other men.

"I had forgotten her once before, when she cried and cried and begged to be given another chance. I gave it to her, but this time was the last."

Roomer in Home Testifies.

A specific account of Mrs. Hamlin's indiscretions was given by Charles Menard, a roomer in the Hamlin home.

"She used to go to a room on the top floor," Menard said, "and she would take a man with her."

"Did you ever see more than one man?" Attorney Frank T. McDermott asked.

"Yes, lots of them. I spoke to her about it. She said she loved pretty things that her husband couldn't give her."

Packard Responsibility Insures Low Truck Transportation Cost

The Packard Company Stands Squarely For Final Economy —That It Is to Your Advantage to Pay An Increased Initial Charge of Half a Cent a Mile When It Decreases Your Transportation Cost Two to Five Cents a Mile

YOU often hear men say that the motor truck so-and-so built in a certain year was better than his trucks built in other years.

No change in design perhaps, but there was a let-down somewhere.

That is what comes of building a truck to meet a price and not to deliver a definite service.

Among builders of motor trucks the temptation during the months to come will be to offset increasing labor costs by paring down on materials. There are two or three reasons why this is so, peculiar to the motor truck business.

First the manufacturing practice of the greater number of makers of trucks, really assemblers, of buying their parts of other manufacturers, leaves them no alternative other than to accept a higher price or poorer parts.

Second the selling practice of allowing an excessive used value on trucks they wish to replace, thereby indirectly cutting their price, almost forces them to make up the difference by skimping materials.

Skimping material may keep down initial investment but it raises transportation costs, increasingly during the years the truck is in use.

As the Packard people see it, the Packard truck built this year will still be giving service in 1930, perhaps in 1935.

Being sellers of transportation it is their business to so build their truck that it will deliver efficient and low cost transportation five or ten years hence.

With this very definite task in mind there is only one thing to do.

See to it that every quality that will insure low cost transportation be kept in Packard trucks regardless of the necessary cost.

Never before in the history of the motor truck in this country was it so necessary to talk to transportation experts as now, when it is getting to be more and more difficult to recognize real value.

Talk to men who know transportation and can back their knowledge with indisputable facts.

Standardization of equipment, methods, advertising, etc., is one of the factors of its success. You can participate in the benefits of this tremendous organization.

The BAKE-RITE Sanitary Revolving oven is not only the best but in our opinion is also the only permanent oven of its type on the market. It is built for permanency. Its superiority over all others is proven. The ordinary sheet iron revolving ovens cannot be compared to it. It is beautiful in appearance—white tile with big glass doors and electrically lighted interior. The bread, rolls, etc., are baked on revolving shelves and the process is visible to the public. It is by far the most attractive window-display, self-advertising oven.

COUNTY G. O. P. JOINS IN PACT ON CONVENTION

All Factions to Support Delegates of Element Ruling District.

The three Republican factions in Cook county have reached an agreement for the purposes of the primary at which delegates to th Illinois constitutional convention wil lbe nominated.

The arrangement, officially announced yesterday, is that the candidates suggested by the dominant organization in each of the senatorial districts shall have the solid support of all three of the factions.

In other words, where the Brundage faction is on top, as indicated by the ward committeemen within the district, the city hall and the Deneen wings will help the Brundage candidates. In city hall districts, the Brundage and Deneen factions will have no organization candidates of their own, and in Deneen districts no opposition will come from city hall and Brundage sources.

Make Strong Coalition.

The net result seems to be that the three elements will have about an equal division, taking the city all the way through, and the only chance to break the organization slates will rest with individual candidates who have filed petitions.

On the Democratic side the regular or Sullivan organization will have a complete slate of candidates in all Cook county districts. The anti-Sullivan Democrats will have opposing candidates in probably fifteen of the nineteen bailiwicks.

The official list of primary nominees is expected to arrive tomorrow at the office of the board of election commissioners from Secretary of State Emmerson.

There is to be no nomination of a candidate for judge of the municipal court at the Sept. 10 primary. This was decided yesterday, following receipt of an opinion from Attorney Colin C. H. Fyffe, by the election board, which held the election for convention delegates is a special election, and not a general election within the meaning of the municipal court act that provides the method of filling vacancies. The filling of the Dolan vacancy therefore goes over until next April.

Smith Vacancy Problem.

Whether there is to be an election in November for the Smith vacancy in the Superior court is up to Gov. Lowden, who may call a special election for the date simultaneous with the election for convention delegates. If it is called, nominations may be made by the party committees not more than seventy-five days nor less than forty days prior to the November election.

CHICAGO HERO LOADED DOWN WITH MEDALS

LIEUT. WILLIAM H. FAGA

William was always such a quiet boy. As a youngster he was never known to take part in scraps, and as a young man his oracular organs were immune from cussing. Then he enlisted in the marines and proceeded to corral all the medals in sight.

His name is William Harry Faga. At the time of his enlistment, in the spring of 1917, he was 23 years old and a doorman at the Union League club. Now, after fighting on all the bloody fronts from Chateau Thierry to the Argonne, he is occupying a lieutenant's quarters at Camp Mills, waiting for the word to return to his home at 1134 North Franklin street. His outfit belongs to the famous 6th regiment of marines of the equally famous 2d division.

As for those medals, it is said that when he dons 'em all he is unable to take a full breath. There is a distinguished service cross with bar, a croix de guerre with palm and star, a cross of the Legion of Honor, and a medaille militaire. His father, George Faga, doesn't know yet why they were all awarded.

G. O. P. FACTIONS POOL STRENGTH TO BACK LOWDEN

Solid State Delegation, Including City Hall, Supports Boom.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Gov. Lowden is to have the solid delegation from Illinois to the Republican national convention next June, without any shadow of opposition, and the eight delegates-at-large and the fifty district delegates will be Republicans who will go the route enthusiastically for the nomination of the Illinois governor for the presidency.

This much has been determined tentatively by the factional leaders in state and Chicago politics, and is to be made plain next week at the state fair in Springfield, when the official campaign of the Lowden for president organization is to be launched.

City Hall Pledges Aid.

The clincher was put on earlier arrangements, that have been in the making since the adjournment of the legislature, by the assurance that came yesterday from responsible city hall leaders that in Chicago congressional districts controlled by city hall forces delegates would be slated who will be pledged to Lowden. The same leaders deprecated any suggestions that have been made that city hall politicians are quietly attempting to embarrass the governor's friends in their preliminary campaign in the interest of the executive.

Closely informed political experts have reported in Chicago during the week just ended that the sentiment of the folks down state is unswervingly for Lowden and that any effort to take the national delegates away from the Lowden column would be dangerous to those who might make the effort. These reports were prompted by the suggestion early in the week that a gum-shoe attempt is being made to get some Illinois delegates for former President Taft, and another report that scouts for Senator Harding of Ohio were getting busy in Illinois.

Dawes to Bring Climax.

The arrival in Chicago, probably on Tuesday, of Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes is expected to bring to a head the quiet work that has been in progress for Gov. Lowden. Gen. Dawes has been freely mentioned in the east as a potential presidential possibility himself, coupled frequently with the suggestion that Gen. Pershing and others high in authority with the A. E. F. gladly would support the Chicago general

The belief in inside politics in Chicago, however, is that Gen. Dawes will take an early opportunity to express himself for Gov. Lowden, and it is more than a possibility Gen. Dawes may become the active head of the Lowden campaign organization.

In any event, the Lowden boomers have their plans pretty well completed to go into action in the open during the state fair roundup, which will get to a climax, so far as the Republicans are concerned, on Governor's day, Thursday, Aug. 21.

Bergeron Renews Attempt to Get Divorce Decree

L. E. Bergeron, 8353 Walnut street, filed suit for divorce in the Circuit court yesterday against Mrs. Emma Bergeron, naming Robert H. Bumpass as co-respondent.

Mrs. Bergeron three months ago successfully contested Bergeron's suit for divorce before Judge John J. Sullivan in the Superior court. At that time she was accused of cruelty and of "making her husband appear ridiculous before his friends.' She filed a cross bill alleging cruelty, but both bills were dismissed.

In the new bill, filed by Attorney W. J. Dole, Bergeron accuses his wife of indiscretions with Bumpass during March, April and May, 1919, at various hotels, and renews his former charges of cruelty.

ARREST PRIVATE SLEUTH AS UNION PHONE TAPPER

Morris Schwartz, 29 years old, 625 East Forty-seventh street, an investigator for the Dannenberg Detective agency, is under arrest at the West Chicago avenue police station and will face trial Monday morning for tapping the wires of the headquarters of local 100 of the International Garment Workers' union at 1575 Milwaukee avenue.

Schwartz, whose agency was employed by the Western Garment Manufacturers' association, various members of which employ striking members of the union, is alleged to have tapped the telephone wires leading into rooms 304 and 305 of the building at 1575 Milwaukee avenue after he had rented room 306 several days ago.

Discovery of the private detective's activities was made by H. C. Michelson, an employé of the building, according to Julius Hochman, president of the union, who alleges that Schwartz also had a dictograph ready to set up for use in his alleged spying on the union officials.

BANDIT CRIPPLE AND AID SEIZE BUCKET OF GEMS

Gag and Tie Up Jeweler; Flee with $5,000 as Crowds Pass.

Shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning a big black automobile drew up in front of Louis Trocky's jewelry store at 906 West Madison street, two men, one a cripple with a shortened right leg, alighted, and threaded their way through scores of pedestrians. They found Trocky alone in the store.

The cripple, a slender, light complexioned man about 5 feet 6 inches tall, pulled out two revolvers and shoved the muzzle of one of them against Trocky.

"Don't sing out or I'll let 'em both fly at once," he said.

The jeweler was compelled to enter a rear room, where they bound him with ropes and gagged him with a towel. The cripple's companion jerked up an iron bucket filled with water, dashed out the contents and stepped to the door.

"We'll get this full of junk, old man," he said.

The two locked the door behind them and Trocky heard them go to the safe, which had been left open.

He managed to free himself from the gag and began shouting for help just as passersby saw the two men, the cripple carrying a bucket covered with a piece of newspaper, emerge from the store, climb into the machine and speed west in Madison street.

Trocky could not determine the exact amount of his loss, but estimated the bandits obtained about $5,000 in diamonds and valuable watches from the safe and about $100 in currency and checks. In their haste the thieves grabbed up a few cheap pieces of jewelry not worth more than 10 or 25 cents.

COP SLIPS INTO TRAVEL TIDE HE RULED 30 YEARS

Gibbons of Union Depot, Who Saw the World a-Wing, Retires.

John T. Gibbons at last has started on a journey. For thirty years he has watched the thousands of travelers come and go; has seen tears and smiles, heard sobs and smacks, witnessed farewells and greetings; but he himself had never wandered from his post—the Union station—until yesterday.

Everybody's Friend.

Gibbons, member of the police force for thirty-five years, was assigned to the station in 1889, and there he stayed, while all about him were men, women, boys, girls, soldiers, adventurers,, roamers over the world, from all parts of the world, restless, hurried, flowing into Chicago, or ebbing out.

Gibbons was there day in, day out. Roosevelt knew him, and Taft and Wilson and Bryan, and dozens of other great men. Gibbons was there to answer questions, some of them sensible, to look out for pickpockets, to see that women weren't annoyed, to help anybody in trouble. He was everybody's friend.

Retires from Force.

Yesterday he retired from the force. Yesterday he left the depot, one of the restless public—and he'll come back only as a traveler or to see old friends. They gave him a solid gold star, and shook his hand, and bade him good-by—then turned again to the turbulent tides of passengers.

HELD ON EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE.

Gustav Lundquist, 54 years old, 1349 Wells street, was arraigned in the South Clark street court yesterday on a charge of embezzling $3,000 from the I. Call commission company, 525 West Twelfth street. He was held to the grand jury.

Truck Users, Listen!

200 lbs

Do You Carry Your Load or Pull It?

Here's How Highway Trailers Cut Truck Costs 80 to 90%

Total Cost of Hauling 1 ton 1 mile by truck is	18 cents
Total Cost of Hauling 1 ton 1 mile by Highway Trailer	2 cents
Saving by Highway Trailer, per ton mile, is	16 cents

Larger Sizes Make Proportionate Savings

Cost $250 to $400 Less Than Average Trailers of Same Capacity. U. S. Army and Navy Adopted Standard Model

Sixty-six per cent of your truck's efficiency is in the draw-bar pull. When you operate a truck alone you waste it—a power twice as valuable as that you use.

Highway Trailers will convert this waste power to profit. They treble the capacity of your trucks. The same driver, truck and gasoline, with a Highway Trailer, will haul three times the tonnage per day.

Note how the greatest concerns in the country prove this. The U. S. Army and Navy employs more than $1,000,000 worth of Highway Trailers. The Consumers Refining Co. of Chicago operates a large fleet.

The Cadillac Motor Car Company and the Timken-Detroit Axle Company pull twice as much on their Highway Trailers as they carry on their trucks. The Towars Creamery Company of Detroit cut haulage costs from 15 to 6 cents per can of milk.

There is a size and type for every need. Special bodies for all sorts of hauling. The 4-wheel reversible runs from 1½ to 7 tons. Semi-trailers and pole trailers from 1½ to 10 tons.

See them on our floors or request a representative to call on you. We can give immediate deliveries.

BUILDING TIEUP FAILS TO COOL REAL ESTATE ACTIVITIES

$4,500,000 FOR WAREHOUSE IS FEATURE OF WEEK

Cold Storage Company Plans Big Building on West Side.

The week's real estate market in its many important activities was of a truly sensational character and gave little evidence of the troubled industrial situation and the agitation about excessive flat and residence rentals. In fact it was about the best week's market of the year, and decidedly better than the previous week, which was commented on in this column as being surprisingly good in view of the unfavorable general conditions.

Cold storage warehouse property occupied the center of the stage, and, while the $700,000 purchase of the Sibley warehouses at Clark street and the river by the Central Cold Storage company was commented on as being one of the largest deals of the year, it shrank in importance as compared to the $4,500,000 project planned for the west side to cover the entire block bounded by Fulton, Morgan, and Carpenter streets and Carroll avenue.

Influence on Values.

Apart from the magnitude of the transaction and the effect it will have on land values in that vicinity, it is of far reaching importance in its relation to the economical handling of food supplies for Chicago and environs.

The proposed building, which is expected to cost over $4,000,000, will be erected by the Fulton Market Cold Storage company, headed by Joseph Byfield, president of the Hotel Sherman company. It will be ten stories high, of reinforced concrete construction, with a capacity of about 6,400,000 cubic feet.

It will cover the 75,000 square feet comprised in the block, which has been leased from William Hale Thompson and co-heirs for a term of ninety-nine years. It is understood the rental is to be 5 per cent on a valuation of $500,000, or $25,000 a year.

Plan to Build at Once.

Plans for the proposed building are being prepared by Architects Gardner & Lindberg, and it is expected to have the first unit, comprising half of the block, completed in time for occupancy in April, 1920.

The property has a frontage of 250 feet on both Fulton street and Carroll avenue and 300 feet on Morgan and Carpenter streets. The proximity to the Fulton and Randolph street markets and the certain growth of these food centers makes the location a particularly good one. The property is served by private switch from the Milwaukee and St. Paul roaad.

Owen D. Gilman, president of O. D. Gilman & Co., will be vice president, Isadore Cohen of Cohen & Co., South Water street commission merchants, treasurer, and Eugene Byfield secretary. John F. Miller represented the lessors in a brokerage way and Hodge & Chandler the lessees. Schuyler & Weinfield and Harry Newby attended to the legal details.

Sibley Warehouses.

The Sibley warehouse properties occupy 180x240 feet on the east side of Clark street on the north bank of the river, Carroll avenue being on the north. There are three warehouses in the group, known as A, B, and C, the first named being seven and eight stories, B ten stories, and C twelve stories. They are now used for general warehouse purposes and are under a lease to the Sibley Storage and Warehouse company, a local corporation, at an annual rental of $36,000 until Dec. 31, 1922, the lessor having the privilege of canceling the lease at any time, in case of sale, on giving one year's notice. It is said the purchasing company expects to expend about $300,000 in converting the buildings to cold storage purposes. In connection with the purchase the Central Cold Storage company has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company securing a loan of $350,000, ten years at 6 per cent.

Cost $865,000 30 Years Ago.

The company's present plant at Dearborn and Kinzie streets comprises 160x180 feet, which was leased for ninety-nine years in two parcels of 80x180 feet from Julius Frankel and the estate of Martha S. Hill, respectively. The building is a ten story structure.

Just what value was placed on the land and building in the present transaction does not appear, but it is said the land was valued at about $12.50 a square foot. The buildings, which are of unusually substantial construction, are said to have cost $865,000 to erect thirty years ago.

The transaction is of much interest as emphasizing the recent tendency on the part of cold storage and wholesale grocery interests to locate in that part of the city.

E. Orris Hart of E. Orris Hart & Co. was the broker.

E. Edelman & Co. to Build $250,000 Factory

E. Edelman & Co., manufacturers of automobile accessories, have purchased from the Chicago Title and Trust company a total of about 160,000 square feet at the southwest corner of Crawford and Shubert avenues for a reported consideration of $80,000, which is at the rate of 50 cents a square foot. The deal was negotiated by Edwin J. Bowes Jr. & Co. The property has a frontage of 217 feet on Crawford avenue and an average depth of 700 feet on Shubert avenue, with switch track connection with the St. Paul track available. Plans have been prepared by Architect A. S. Alschuler for improvements costing in the neighborhood of $250,000, but it is stated work will not begin until more favorable building conditions prevail. In connection with the proposed improvements, Mr. Bowes has negotiated a bond issue loan of $225,000, ten years, at 6 per cent.

ACTIVITY IN RESIDENCES A MARKET FEATURE

Francis C. Farwell Pays $62,500 for Vaux Property.

One of the most conspicuous features of the week's market was the activity in high grade residence property, the exclusive district just south of Lincoln park on Astor and North State streets being particularly in evidence with three notable transactions.

In one of the transactions Frederick T. Vaux, president of the Adams & Westlake company, sold his residence at 1520 Astor street, between Schiller street and North avenue, to Francis C. Farwell, treasurer of the John V. Farwell company, for a reported consideration of $62,500. The house is a modern three story stone front structure containing twelve rooms, 300 feet south inf Lincoln park, on a lot 30x110 feet.

Another transaction was the purchase by Alden B. Swift of Swift & Co., packers, from William R. Dickinson of the law firm of Wilson, McIlvaine, Hale & Templeton of the property at 1544 North State street, between North avenue and Burton place, for a reported consideration of $50,000. It is an attractive brick and stone structure containing fourteen rooms, on a lot 35x132 feet, being 100 feet south of Lincoln park and overlooks the grounds of the Catholic archbishop. Paul Steinbrecher & Co. negotiated both sales.

Buys Two Apartment Buildings.

The Fortune residence at the southeast corner of Astor street and Burton place, which was built by the late Peter Fortune a short time before his death, is understood to have been sold by his daughter, Joanna Fortune.

A deed was filed for record yesterday in which title was taken by the Northern Trust company, trustee, but the trust company is understood to have taken title for the actual purchaser. According to the stamps on the deed the property sold for a cash consideration of $72,500.

The house is an attractive three story stone structure, lot 26x120 feet, and contains about fourteen rooms. The property is said to have been recently held at $80,000.

Evanston Deal.

An important sale of Evanston residence property also figured in the week's news. It covers the property on Forest avenue at the northwest corner of Greenwood boulevard, lot 75 x210 feet, improved with an attractive sixteen room frame dwelling, and was sold by Lloyd B. Taylor, head of the C. M. Taylor Trunk works, to Madeline K. Tripp, for a stated cash consideration of $35,000.

The attractive residence property at the northwest corner of Greenwood avenue and Fifty-fourth place, lot 162x156 feet, improved with a fifteen room dwelling and two story garage, has been sold by Dr. W. F. and Josephine P. Ernest to Frank A. and Eleanor Mayer for a reported consideration of $35,000. It is one of the residential landmarks of Hyde Park and the new owners are said to plan extensive improvements. W. J. Boyd of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker.

$150,000 Dancing School on Grace Street Planned

The erection of a dancing academy on Grace street to cost about $150,000 is involved in a purchase by George J. Breinig of Rockford from Albert Fuchs of the vacant 140x200 feet about 250 feet west of Broadway. The property, which is on the north side of the street, adjoins on the west the Chateau theater, and is said to have been purchased for $42,000. Plans for the building, which are being prepared by Architect Henry J. Schalcks, provide for a building to cover the entire lot, to be two stories high in front and one in the rear, and will be devoted exclusively to dancing, no stores to be in the building. W. J. Boyd of W. K. Young & Bro. represented both parties to the transaction.

TRADING LIGHT ALONG BUSINESS PROPERTY LINES

There was not much doing in business property, the showing not being up to that of the previous week.

The business property at the northwest corner of South Halsted and West Taylor streets has been sold by the Hauge estate of Louisville, Ky., through W. D. Kerfoot & Co., to Walter S. Hoppie. The property, which is located in the Italian banking district, fronts 100 feet on Halsted street by 120 feet on Taylor street, and is improved with a three story brick business building having a reported gross annual reutal of $7,000. A nominal consideration is given, but the property is said to have been held at about $60,000. Ernest H. Lyons represented Mr. Hoppie in the transaction.

Sixteenth Street Flat Building Changes Hands

The property at the northeast corner of Sixteenth street and Millard avenue, lot 40x125 feet, improved with a building containing five stores and four flats, has been conveyed by Louis Loewenstein to Don S. Robinson, consideration nominal, but said to be about $32,000, the purchaser giving back a purchase money mortgage for $18,000 and subsequently reselling to Pincus Shapiro for an indicated consideration of $37,500, subject to $18,000. The seller took in part payment the six flat at 1543-45 Elburn avenue, subject to $5,000. K. R. Beak & Co. represented both parties.

A notable transaction in Lake Forest country home property has just been closed in which Arthur L. Farwell of J. V. Farwell & Co. has sold to Charles H. The Jennette Manufacturing company has purchased from S. Adler the factory property at the northeast corner of Montana street and Sheffield avenue, lot 125x113 feet, improved with a modern two story mill building, for a stated consideration of $35,000.

CHICAGO CLUB RENTS STORE TO CHOCOLATE SHOP

Copper Kettle Leases Space in Van Buren Street.

There was nothing of special magnitude in the way of leases of building space reported, although there were several of fairly good sized proportions.

In one of the most interesting the Chicago club, represented by Ross & Co., leased to the Copper Kettel Chocolate shop the double store at 71-73 East Van Buren street, in the building owned by the club, west and adjoining its holding at Michigan boulevard and Van Buren street, for a term of years at a term rental of $50,000. This store was for a number of years occupied by the Moulton & Ricketts art gallery. On the completion of improvements it will be occupied for the sale of light luncheons and fountain drinks, similar to their establishments at 139 South Wells street. The lease was negotiated by Warren A. Cahn.

Another noteworthy transaction covered the four story and basement building, 40x80 feet, at 29-31 North Market street, which has been leased by J. G. Kirk & Co. for John W. Flower & Bro. of Detroit to A. Magnus Sons & Co. for ten years from Oct. 1, 1919, at a term rental of $50,000.

Unusual Lease.

The lease is unusual in that the lessees are to pay for all repairs and alterations on the building, which are expected to amount to $15,000. The lessee is to receive three years' rental free and is allowed 6 per cent interest on the money put into the building. Magnus Sons company have been in their present location at 317 West Randolph street for the last thirty-five years and are forced to move because Channon & Co. have bought the property in question. P. E. DuCharme of J. G. Kirk & Co. represented both parties.

The Kiekhefer Recreation company is the name of the corporation of which Augie Kiekhefer is the head, and which has leased the entire second floor of the building at 14-20 East Randolph street, 66x170 feet, for a billiard parlor. The term rental is given at $87,000, and it is said $25,000 will be expended in equipping the hall, which will have thirty-five steel tables. The Hool Realty company made the deal.

Ogden Avenue Lease.

Hart & Whetston have leased for the Berry Fibre Door company to Morris Paper Mills the property at the southwest corner of Ogden and Kildare avenues, 130x500 feet, improved with modern one story building. 80x200 feet, served by a Burlington switch, for a term rental of $61,500.

The same brokers have leased for Frank L. Kohlhase to Martin Cushion Wheel company the two story and basement building at southeast corner Sangamon and Wayman streets, containing 19,000 square feet, for ten years at term rental of $36,000.

Hillman's Plans $1,000,000 Addition to Loop Store

Architects Mundie and Jensen are understood to be preparing plans for an extensive addition to Hillman's at 18-20 North State street, which is expected to cost more than $1,000,000. If conditions are favorable it is expected to begin work about Jan. 1. It will have a frontage of 63 feet with a depth of 143 feet. It probably will be sixteen stories high, although the details are said not to have been worked out yet.

This building is made necessary by the fact that the lease by Hillman's on the property in this block belonging to Mrs. Mollie Netcher Newbury expires in 1921, and it is proposed to concentrate the business of the concern in the new building and the Reliance at the corner of Washington street. This belongs to the heirs of the late Charles W. Partridge, the latter having been largely interested in Hillman's.

Machinists Buy Old Illinois Clubhouse

A transaction filed for record during the week was of special interest as marking the final passing of the old Illinois club property in Ashland avenue, 122 feet south of Monroe street. It has been sold to the Machinists' society for $14,000 and will be occupied by it as a home.

MEDIUM AND CHEAPER PRICED FLATS ARE ACTIVE

Louis Geyler Purchases Hyde Park Boulevard Apartment.

There was much activity in apartment property, medium and the cheaper priced properties being especially in evidence. Higher priced properties also figured in the week's business, although not to the same extent as during the previous week.

One of the most interesting was the purchase by Louis Geyler, president of Louis Geyler & Co., automobile distributors, of the two extra high grade three apartment buildings at 1232-36 Hyde Park boulevard and 1231-35 Madison park. The property was purchased from Gustav G. Anders, the builder, for an indicated consideration of $102,000, subject to an incumbrance of $63,500. The building, which is a comparatively new one, has a gross rental of about $14,100. Each of the apartments contains eight rooms and three baths, sun parlor, and sleeping porches, with elevators.

The building fronts seventy-five feet on the boulevard and the same on Madison park, with a depth of 136 feet between the two. In part payment the purchaser conveyed 100 feet of vacant property on South Shore drive 100 feet north of Sixty-eighth street, east front, facing the South Shore Country club grounds, with a depth of 180 feet, for a cash consideration of $25,000, being at the rate of $250 a front foot. Hedberg & Bistor represented both parties to the transaction.

South Side Transaction.

In another interesting south side transaction H. Teller Archibald has sold to Milford H. Lyon the high grade nine apartment building at 4709-15 Ellis avenue, lot 90x201 feet, west front, for an indicated consideration of $73,000, subject to an incumbrance of $43,000. The apartments contain eight and ten rooms, with a gross annual rental of $13,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the nine apartment building at 4825-29 Prairie avenue, clear, annual rent $4,800, lot 70x130 feet. Holton, Seelye & Co. were the brokers.

Samuel Weinberg has purchased from Harry A. Cohen of the Hartman Furniture company the thirty apartment building of four and five rooms at 743-755 Brompton avenue, 125 feet east of Halsted street, lot 145x149 feet, north front, for an indicated consideration of $114,600, subject to an incumbrance of $69,500. The building is said to have a gross annual rental of about $17,000. John B. De Voney & Co. represented both parties to the transaction.

Record was made of the transfer by Mrs. A. Hilland and husband Wilfred to Julian F. Fraser of the property in Farwell avenue, 195 feet east of Clark street, lot 37x171 feet, south front, with flat improvements, for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to $43,500.

Airdrie Place Deal.

Record was made of the transfer by R. A. Todd to Russell Paull of the property in Airdrie place, 100 feet west of Broadway, lot 54x125 feet, north front, with a nine flat building, for an indicated cash consideration of $35,000, according to the stamps on the deed, no incumbrance showing. Victor J. Curts & Co. were the brokers.

Margarethe Schroty has sold to Benjamin Segal and Benjamin Krenstein the high grade six apartment building at 844-46 Lafayette street, lot 50x110 feet, for a reported consideration of $32,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. The building overlooks the lake and has a gross annual rental of $4,560. J. E. Reninger of Whiteside & Wentworth and Joseph Schwartz were the brokers.

The twelve flat building of four and five rooms, lot 50x135 feet, at 5939-41 Calumet avenue has been sold by C. H. Davis of Belvidere, Ill., to Oscar Brachman of Milwaukee for a reported consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $10,000, the purchaser giving in part payment an improved farm of 760 acres in Adams county, Wisconsin. H. G. Howard & Co. were the brokers.

The high grade three apartment building at 650 Grace street, being 200 feet west of Sheridan road, with 40 feet of ground and with a gross annual rental of about $3,000, has been sold by Fred Brown to Mrs. M. Groth for a reported consideration of $18,500. A. E. Oblander of Nichols Bros. represented both parties.

$3,000,000 Apartment Is Planned for North Side

It is said that negotiations are in progress looking to the erection of a $3,000,000 apartment building in the block bounded by Banks, Stone, Goethe streets and Ritchie court, just south of the Palmer mansion. It is said that Walter Ross & Co., who have the project in hand, have secured options on the property, which call for a selling price of over $800,000. Marshall & Fox are said to be preparing plans, while Mr. Marshall is said to have obtained subscriptions amounting to 70 per cent of the amount required to swing the deal.

Charles M. Hayes Buys Old Cudahy Residence

An interesting transaction of the week was the purchase by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Automobile club, of the Cudahy residence at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Thirty-third street for $75,000 and his lease of the house to the club, which is now in the old Higinbotham home at Twenty-ninth streeet and Michigan avenue. It has, however, been leased to the Vesta Accumulator company. The transaction was negotiated by Holton, Seelye & Co., and Sprague Moore.

SAYS PROPOSED ZONE ORDINANCE NEEDS STUDY

Speaking of the proposed ordinance carrying into effect the provisions of the new zoning law, Mark Levy, president of the Cook County Real Estate board, says:

"The ordinance should be fairly elastic, and needs the most careful study by the best informed, fair, unbiased citizens. The real estate men, representing the real property interests, pay 80 per cent of our tax levy, and are in close contact with the various conditions, and should help study and formulate this ordinance. It might be well to begin zoning the outlying districts where the character of the neighborhood is more or less established.

"The zoning law is not a theoretical proposition, but it is a practical proposition. We hope for the good it will do and not for the bad. There are so many conditions and complicated matters to be considered that space will not permit, nor do I want to attempt at this time to begin to name them, as I no doubt would omit some important elements that should and will be considered by the commission to be appointed.

"The ordinance should provide, among other things, the use of districts, conditions of residence districts, business districts and unrestricted districts, reference to existing buildings and premises, the use of district exceptions, height districts, height district exceptions, area districts, the different districts included and their several conditions, rear yards, area district exceptions, general and administrative functions, rules and regulations, modifications of provisions, unlawful use, certificate of occupancy, enforcement, legal procedure, penalties, amendments, alterations and changes in district lines, completion and restoration of existing buildings, and when effective, as well as to provide for various illustrations in order to make the construction of the ordinance as comprehensive and simple as possible."

Lockout Puts Brakes on Building Permits

The report of the city building department for the week in respect to the number of permits issued furnished unmistakable evidence of the effect the lockout is having on building operations. Thus, there were twenty-five permits issued to cost $647,000, as compared with forty to cost $1,172,900 for the preceding week. Even this falling off does not begin to measure the actual cessation, as many permits were taken out to be exercised when peace once more prevails in this industry.

35 APARTMENT BUILDING [illegible] COST $1,350,000

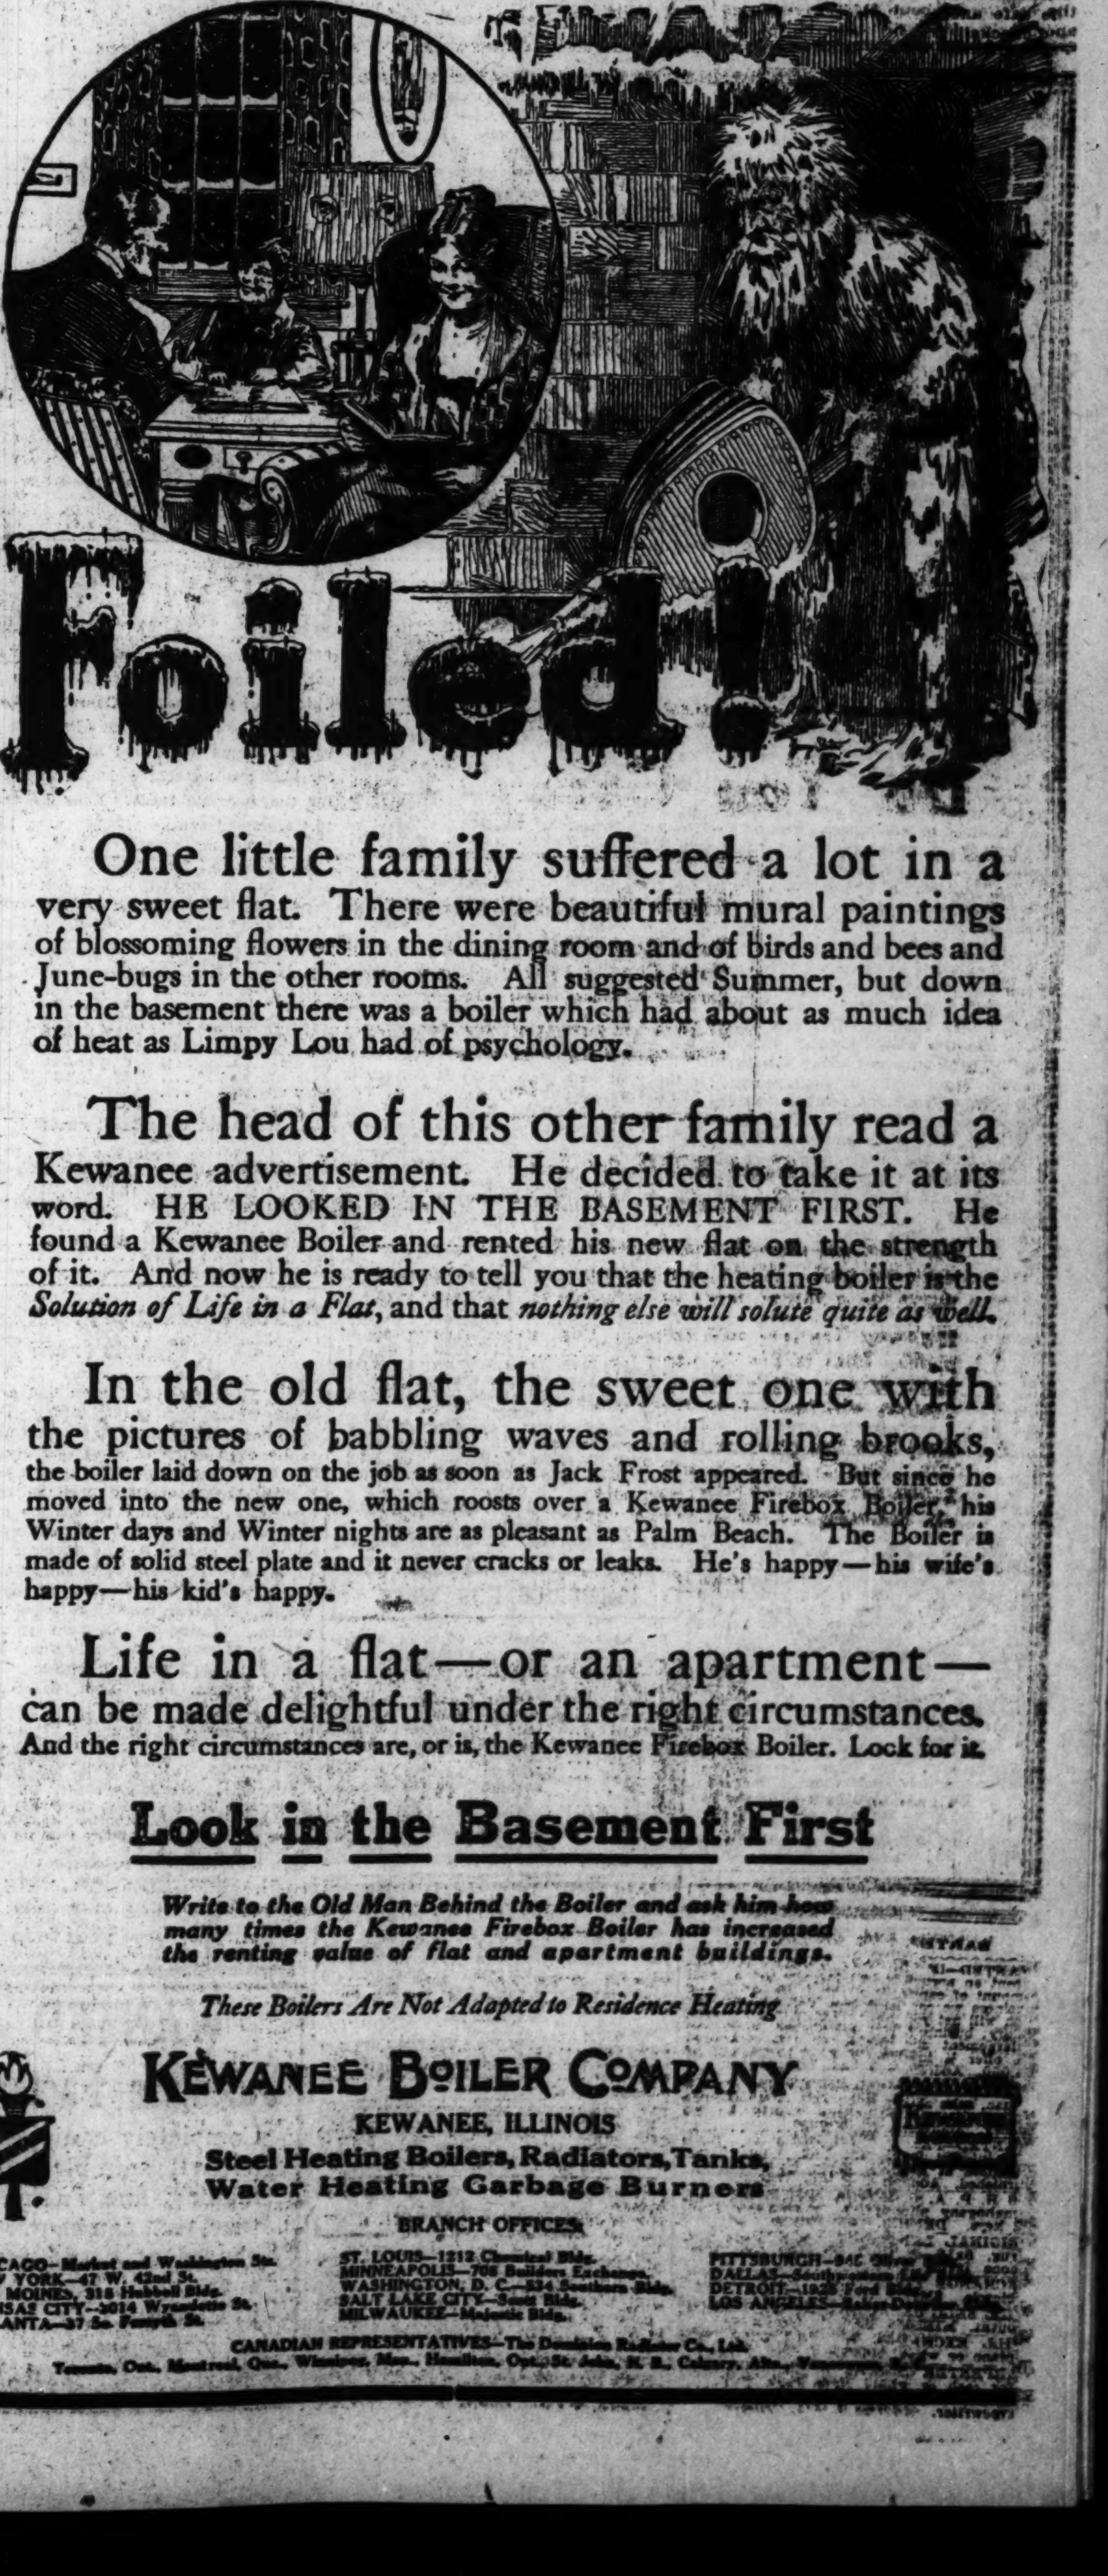
An important building development of the week involved the erection of another big high grade apartment building for Sheridan road. It will be erected at the northwest corner of Roscoe street by Hugo L. Goetz, president of the Para Auto Tire company, on 107x268 feet of vacant ground, which he has just purchased from Emilie W. Peacock for a reported consideration of $100,000, which is at the rate of a little over $940 a front foot.

The building, which is to cover practically the entire lot, will be of the best type of fireproof construction, and will be ten and a half stories high. The proposed building will be strictly an apartment building of the highest class, and will contain thirty-five apartments of twelve to sixteen rooms each. It is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $1,350,000.

Plans are being prepared and the work of construction will begin as soon as the trouble in the building trades is settled.

The erection of forty-six bungalows to cost between $5,000 and $6,000 each is involved in the purchase by Niels Buck, the builder, from Claude W. Morris of a tract of forty-six lots in Morris' second addition to Edgewater, two short blocks west of Western avenue, on the south side of Devon avenue. The consideration is said to have been $35,000 cash. All of the lots are 33x125 feet, with a twenty-foot building line, while no buildings are to be erected to cost less than [illegible]. It is statd that Mr. Buck will begin the erection of the bungalows as soon as conditions in the building trade will permit.

Twenty of the lots front east on North Campbell avenue and twenty-six front west on North [illegible] avenue, all being between Devon and Granville avenues.



One little family suffered a lot in a very sweet flat. There were beautiful mural paintings of blossoming flowers in the dining room and of birds and bees and June-bugs in the other rooms. All suggested Summer, but down in the basement there was a boiler which had about as much idea of heat as Limpy Lou had of psychology.

The head of this other family read a Kewanee advertisement. He decided to take it at its word. HE LOOKED IN THE BASEMENT FIRST. He found a Kewanee Boiler and rented his new flat on the strength of it. And now he is ready to tell you that the heating boiler is the Solution of Life in a Flat, and that nothing else will solute quite as well.

In the old flat, the sweet one with the pictures of babbling waves and rolling brooks, the boiler laid down on the job as soon as Jack Frost appeared. But since he moved into the new one, which roosts over a Kewanee Firebox Boiler, his Winter days and Winter nights are as pleasant as Palm Beach. The Boiler is made of solid steel plate and it never cracks or leaks. He's happy—his wife's happy—his kid's happy.

Life in a flat—or an apartment—can be made delightful under the right circumstances. And the right circumstances are, or is, the Kewanee Firebox Boiler. Look for it.

Look in the Basement First

Write to the Old Man Behind the Boiler and ask him how many times the Kewanee Firebox Boiler has increased the renting value of flat and apartment buildings.

BUYING FURORE STARTED BY U. S. CROP REPORT

Message of the President Also Cheers Up Traders in General.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Crop losses of late have been the most serious known, and are against low prices, as the trade in general see it. There was a loss in the five grains last month of 430,000,000 bu, as shown by the government report, which, combined with the bullish president's message, started a buying furore among the shorts and traders in general. Selling pressure was limited and prices advanced and closed well toward the top, with gains of 4¾c on September and May corn, and 6⅛c on December. Oats gained 2@2½c, rye 6½@7¾c, and barley 6½@7c. Outside markets were relatively stronger than Chicago on corn and oats, especially in the southwest.

Provision prices finished around the best of the day, with pork up $1.50, lard 40@52½c, and short ribs 45c.

There have been few weeks in the grain trade when the action of prices was more erratic than the one just closed. The range was unusually wide, with a sensational break and a sharp recovery. At the close September corn showed a gain of 9c and December 1¾c, while May was practically unchanged. Oats was 2¼@2½c higher, rye 1@2c lower, and barley 1½@2c higher. Provision prices, however, failed to recover the big losses, and pork is off $2.75 a brl, lard off $1.45 per 100 lbs, and short ribs 80c lower than a week ago.

Bulls Rule Corn Market.

A material change in the conditions which have been the dominating influences in the grain markets of late resulted in a stampede of shorts in corn, and prices advanced rapidly, although there was an absence of the hysterical price fluctuations which have been such a feature of late.

A bullish construction was placed on the government report, and there was a marked betterment in the railroad situation. In addition, President Wilson's address on the high cost of living set at rest any doubts as to the future of the exchanges, which have had nothing to do with the advance in foodstuffs.

At no time was there any great selling pressure, while shorts covered freely, with stop loss orders uncovered on the way up. September at the top showed 21½c above the low of Tuesday and was 40c over December at one time, closing at $1.94½, while December was $1.57, the latter delivery leading the bulge. May finished at $1.52½.

Cash corn sold at the highest prices on the crop, with No. 2 yellow, on spot, at $2.08, and to arrive, ten day shipment, at $2.02. Receipts small and demand fairly good. Crop conditions are ignored at the moment.

Keen Demand for Oats.

With supplies of oats about 250,000,000 bu less than last year, a tight cash situation and free buying by houses with eastern connections, it was easy to advance prices, and while the finish was on a moderate reaction due to week-end evening up, final trades showed substantial gain, with September 75⅞c, December 78⅞c and May 81⅜c.

The most effective selling was by longs, but the buying was of an excellent class, partly against cash business. Omaha reported liberal sales to exporters via New Orleans. Sample values advanced sharply with futures, and premiums were higher with light receipts. Country offerings limited.

Better Tone in Provisions.

A better feeling at the stock yards and no pressure of sellers led to active covering by shorts and prices advanced and closed around the top, with substantial gains. On the whole, trading was not large. There were not enough hogs in the yards to make the market a factor in the provision trade. A feature was the commandeering of the stocks in Great Britain by the government. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 22,885,000 lbs, against 32,254,000 lbs the previous week and 20,687,000 lbs last year. Prices follow:

FLOUR BUYERS TIMID

Flour buyers are holding off, expecting lower prices. The government is offering flour, which affects the trade with millers, who are doing a light business. The government bought 1,031,000 brls last Tuesday, which it is selling to the trade. It is a straight flour, and millers say it is as good as short patents. Chicago millers made good sales to the government, and Toledo millers sold 200,000 brls. The price at the mills was around $9.80 to $10 in 140 lb sacks, track Baltimore, $10.40.

Southwestern hard winters are $10.15 to $10.40; soft, $10.25 to $10.50 old springs, $12.50 for car lots of standard brands, and $13.00 to $13.25 to the retail trade. Bakers' grades are $11.90 to $12.20 for old and $11.35 to $11.55 for new, and standard brands of new $11.75 in car lots.

Rye flour easy; white patent, $8.15 to $8.50; medium $7.50, and dark $6.75 to $6.85 in car lots, with sales to the retail trade at 75c over. Corn flour $5.05 per 100 lbs. Cream meal, white, $4.95; yellow granulated, $4.77½, from warehouse.

Spring bran, $43.00; winter, $44.00; white middlings, $58.60; red dog, $64.65 per ton.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

A pronounced change was noticeable in the sentiment of the grain trade yesterday, the result of the unusual losses by the government crop report. This has changed the ideas of the trade and the president's message saying that low prices were not to be expected until peace, has created a feeling that until there is a surplus supply, breaks will only be temporary. The short interest was greatly reduced by the big advance yesterday and it will be no surprise to see some setback, which would be natural under existing conditions.

Oat specialists generally cling to the bull side. They argue that while the government report shows a larger crop than was figured on, the weight is so much lighter that there will be no surplus oats this year and with the shortage in the potato crop, consumption of oats should be large. Oatmeal millers are sold months ahead and indications are for a continued big business.

A big line of September corn was sold out yesterday that has been held several months. It was controlled by a large industry downstate and showed a good profit. Houses who were the largest buyers of September corn on the previous days were free sellers around $1.95 yesterday.

The railroad situation has improved somewhat in spots and indications are for a general betterment. The country offered more corn yesterday, it being the first time they have shown a disposition to sell to arrive in several weeks. No. 2 yellow corn for shipments in ten days sold at $2.02 to $2.04, while spot corn brought $2.08, the highest on the crop for that grade. No. 2 mixed corn brought $2.02 on spot and is offered to arrive at $2.00.

The Missouri crop report, as wired by King of Toledo, makes wheat 57,000,000 bu, with a yield of 13.5 bu per acre; oats, 40,000,000, 28 bu per acre.

In the seven surplus corn states there is a prospect of 1,353,000,000 bu, as shown by the government report, a loss of 61,000,000 bu last month and an increase of 3,000,000 bu over last year. Iowa has 11,000,000 bu more than last month, and all the other big states have less and are also under last year. Texas makes an unusual showing with a condition of 100, against 104 last month, with a crop of 186,576,000 bu, or 18,000,000 bu over the July figures and 118,000,000 bu over last year.

The three northwestern spring wheat states are in for a short crop, with 130,000,000 bu, given by the government report. This is 70,000,000 bu loss for the month and 119,000,000 bu under last year, but 40,000,000 bu over the crop of 1916. The oat crop is 208,000,000 bu, or 57,000,000 bu below last month and 72,000,000 bu short of last year. Montana has practically a crop failure in oats and spring wheat, and half a crop of winter wheat.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Improvement in the railroad situation was responsible for a better demand for winter wheats. The market was strong to ½c higher, with No. 1 red and hard ½c over, and No. 2 grades ½@1c over the basic. Springs sold readily. Minneapolis advanced 10c and is far above a parity with this market. Local receipts, 299 cars. Bulk of the sale at St. Louis were at the basic figure, but Kansas City was 1@3c higher on hard, and unchanged to 1c up on soft winters.

Offerings of corn were limited, sixteen cars, and sold readily, with prices 3@5c higher, No. 2 yellow selling at the highest figure on the crop. Peoria received four cars and advanced 5c, while St. Louis was up a like amount. Omaha closed 6@7c higher. Offerings in outside markets small.

A keen demand existed for cash oats, and premiums advanced somewhat. The grain sells more on the test weight per bushel than on the grade. Heavy oats wanted. Spot values were 1@3c higher, with receipts seventy-seven cars. Arrivals at Peoria were six cars, with prices 2¼c higher, while St. Louis was up 1¼@2c, Kansas City 1@1½c and Omaha 1¼@2c higher. PRODUCE TRADE

Trading in butter in all markets was only fair, with no change in prices at Chicago or in the east. Cheese markets were a little slow, with no alteration in values. Eggs were held at full prices for high grade stock, which are wanted for the domestic trade. Receipts were 10,458 cases, against 10,225 cases last year. Fresh firsts were 42c to 43c. Live fowls were 2c lower, with two cars and 425 coops in, making a big supply for which little demand existed. Fowls were 31c, broilers 34c to 36c, old roosters 21c.

Cotton Up Sharply; Reacts from Top

New York, Aug. 9.—Cotton had a big bulge which met profit taking after shorts covered. December was bid up 88 points over Friday's close and reacted 35. News and surroundings were more bullish, the president's message being especially so, making no specific mention of raw cotton. As to profiteering on cotton goods, it was thought that spinners could stand some reduction in prices without affecting values of the staple. Weather conditions were more bullish. Closing trades were at gains of 48 to 64 points, the near futures leading. Prices in New York follow:

Strike conditions at the stock yards looked brighter, as some of the packers were able to kill out their stale stock and start on fresh purchases. However, the situation is still very unsettled, as union officials state more men may be called out. E. C. Brown of the Live Stock Exchange issued a statement advising the holding of cattle receipts down to 12,000 for an average day, and hogs to 15,000, believing such arrivals would find an outlet despite conditions, as outside buyers have been good competitors in the trade.

While more than half of the packers were out of the hog market, those in the trade purchased relatively freely, causing the light offerings to clear 10@25c higher than Friday's average. Top hogs sold at $22.65, or 15c over previous day, while the average price at $21.20 showed 10c gain. Average price for the week was $21.05, or 90c below previous week but $2.00 higher than a year ago.

Only 75,200 hogs were received at Chicago during the week, being smallest since January, 1918. Estimated average weight at 246 pounds was one pound heavier than previous week and four pounds heavier than a year ago. Eleven markets received 307,000 hogs for the week, being 104,000 less than previous week, 105,000 less than a year ago, and 65,000 less than the eight year average for corresponding week from 1911 to 1918 inclusive.

Cattle Highest on Record.

One thousand cattle arrived Saturday, half of them being western rangers. Packers purchased stock and prices held steady. Sharply higher selling, due to light receipts and the much improved quality, put the average price of good beef cattle at $16.85, the highest on record, being 60c higher than previous week, $1.25 higher than a year ago, and $6.90 higher than eight year average for corresponding week from 1911 to 1918 inclusive.

Of the 42,100 cattle received this week 17,500 were eastern rangers. Another liberal supply of western grass cattle is expected next week, several large trains being due tomorrow, which should bring the receipts up to a fair size regardless of the native stock.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

The packing house shares showed a general recovery on the local exchange. Swift & Co. advanced better than 3 points from the opening, and International Packing was up 1½ points. Libby-McNeill was moderately active and firm, but did not show the gains of the other two Swift issues. Armour preferred advanced to par and there was a generally better feeling with reference to the outlook.

Union Carbide was again active and firm, the buying being broad in character, though some of it was characterized as "good." Stewart-Warner was fractionally higher and John R. Thompson also showed a fractional gain.

High Taxes Make High Prices.

The rôle of the investor in the drama of life is an ungrateful one. While he is not held morally responsible for every financial trouble of the world, the practical consequences of such difficulties are loaded upon him.

When it was necessary to provide an enormous revenue to conduct the war, most of the load was laid on investors in the form of corporation taxes. These taxes were confiscatory at first, but after a little while most of the publicly owned companies were able to adjust themselves to the situation, and pass on at least a part of the burden in the form of higher prices. If they had not done this they would have gone into bankruptcy.

Now it is discovered that the cost of living is high, and immediately corporations are to be investigated on the charge of "profiteering," and threats are made of taking them away from investors who own them.

The fact that taxes are the primary cause of high prices seems to be overlooked. The largest corporation is paying in taxes about 15 per cent of its gross receipts from sales. Some are paying more and some less. Suppose that the average is only 12 per cent. It may look small, but the jobber must get his 10 or 15 per cent profit on the increased price, the wholesaler 10 or 15 per cent and the retailer 30 or 40. The original tax plus three profits greatly increases the cost to the consumer, and this takes no account of taxes levied on jobber, wholesaler and retailer.

Under the plan of levying the heaviest taxes on producing corporations, it is inevitable that the tax should increase in geometrical progression till the consumer finally pays it. This is not at all the fault of the investor, but efforts are being made to hold him responsible.

Rice-Stix Dry Goods.

J. L., Albia, Ia.—The Rice-Stix Dry Goods company of St. Louis has outstanding $1,400,000 of common stock, $2,000,000 of first preferred and $2,800,000 second preferred, the last having been issued as stock dividends to common. Dividends of 7 per cent have been paid regularly on preferred stocks, and for some years 10 per cent in cash on common annually in January, except in 1915, when the dividend was omitted. Details are not made public. For common stock 260 is bid. Evidently at that price it is speculative. The preferred shares are probably well protected, but without detailed information there is a little uncertainty.

Brief Answers.

H. J. M.—Stock of the Ranger Refining company represents a participation in a new business venture. No figures are furnished except estimates of possible profits. Until the company proves its earning capacity stock is a mere speculation.

H. M. S., Farmer City, Ill.—The Pershing Land Opening is a colonization project on a mutual plan. Whether it will be a success or not depends principally on the people who join it.

The New York bank statement issued yesterday did not reflect the severe liquidation recorded in the stock market. Evidently other causes were operating in the loan account, since the decrease shown was but $21,916,000. Also the volume of cash instead of increasing showed a decrease of over $21,000,000. Deposits, too, were lower by better than $41,000,000. The net result of the changes was a decrease of $16,002,000 in the surplus reserve, bringing that item down to $51,137,570.

It is possible the figures at the end of this week may more clearly reflect adjusted conditions in the loan market due to the contraction in credit following the liquidation in the securities market. The weekly statement follows:

Chicago Reserve District.

The member banks in the Chicago Federal Reserve district revealed a moderate expansion in loans, or, rather, borrowings, at the reserve institution, the increase being $7,095,455. Other federal reserve banks, however, reduced their borrowings by $14,100,000.

The note circulation of the reserve bank increased $11,420,480. The treasury department made a small reduction in its deposits.

The statement as a whole reflected a disposition on the part of member banks to increase their borrowings, though the expansion could hardly be considered significant. The comparative statement follows:

The New York Times.

New York, Aug. 9.—[Special.]—The further recovery of stocks in today's session of the market was aided by several factors. The president's address to congress on methods to deal with the high cost of living and kindred matters was the cause of rather general satisfaction. The manner in which Mr. Wilson handled the economic aspects of current conditions was the subject of favorable comment. The soundness of his appeal to labor to cast aside radical tendencies and help to increase production found much support in banking and business quarters.

News that railway shopmen were returning to their posts in increasing numbers found reflection in buying of the railroad shares. Supplementing the brighter appearance of the labor situation were steady purchases in the way of short covering transactions after the week's decline, the net result of all the influences being net gains extending from 1 to more than 3 points.

The market had as its especial feature a gradual strengthening of prices all the way along. One or two issues were bid upward with vigor, but in general the advance was cumulative under moderately active dealings. Steel, rubber, tobacco, and equipment stocks were perhaps more prominent than others, although the rails displayed more force in recovery than had been seen for a long time past.

The president's address seemed to give many traders confidence that the program of the brotherhoods for nationalizing the roads would find little support in public or official quarters. The street saw in a statement issued by brotherhood leaders at Washington to the effect that no violence or threats were intended to carry a plan for tripartite management of the roads an indication that a new light had been seen by the labor representatives.

VAN SICKLEN CO. TO TRIPLE ITS PRESENT OUTPUT

Details of the reorganization of the Van Sicklen Speedometer company and its plans for expansion were announced yesterday. The company, which recently was reincorporated, will have capital of $2,500,000, compared with $250,000 for the old company. It is stated that the enlarged capital is fully subscribed.

The reorganization has been largely in charge of Norman B. Church, who will be chairman of the board of directors. He stated yesterday that all the stockholders of the old company retain their interests in the reorganization, among the larger interests being John W. Willys of the Willys automobile companies, C. H. Hurlburd, president of the Elgin Watch works; Ernest A. Hamill, president of the Corn Exchange National bank; George M. Holley, president of the Holley Carburetor company; T. F. Sheridan, and A. D. Edwards.

N. H. Van Sicklen Sr. will be president of the company, and his sons, N. H. Van Sicklen Jr. and Charles Van Sicklen, will be vice president and secretary, respectively. Chester B. Braselton will be a vice president and director.

"The company has contracts calling for the manufacture of 2,500 speedometers a day," Mr. Church said yesterday. "This will be nearly triple the output of the old company. We will supply twenty-nine automobile manufacturers to start with, and will increase production as it may be necessary. For the present our manufacturing will be done at the Elgin Watch works, as was done under the old company, but it is planned to erect a large plant as soon as construction and labor conditions permit. The capitalization is fully subscribed, so there will be no public offering of stock."

"Tomorrow" May be Too Late

The A B C of Business

Burroughs machines fall into three main groups, with many models—adapted to every figure need of any business, and priced as low as $125.

ADDING and Listing—where the great need is a printed record of items and a total.

BOOKKEEPING—where items are entered on a ledger page, card, form or statement, and balances automatically extended.

CALCULATING—where rapid multiplying, dividing, adding and subtracting are necessary and only the final answer is recorded.

Next time a Burroughs man calls, ask him to produce names and dates, facts and figures that you can verify yourself.

"What's Jones' balance?" means "what is it now, today, right away"—while the credit man holds the 'phone.

"How do our books stand?" means a trial balance in a hurry—not ten days late.

"Controlling reports" should mean reports that come to the manager's desk as regularly as the sun rises—it's a poor sort of control that delays action weeks or months for lack of figures.

Business today demands "Johnny-on-the-spot" bookkeeping, and the quickest, most accurate and economical way to get it is the Burroughs way.

Cost more? No—it costs less; but if it cost twice as much it would still save you time and money according to Burroughs users right here in Chicago.

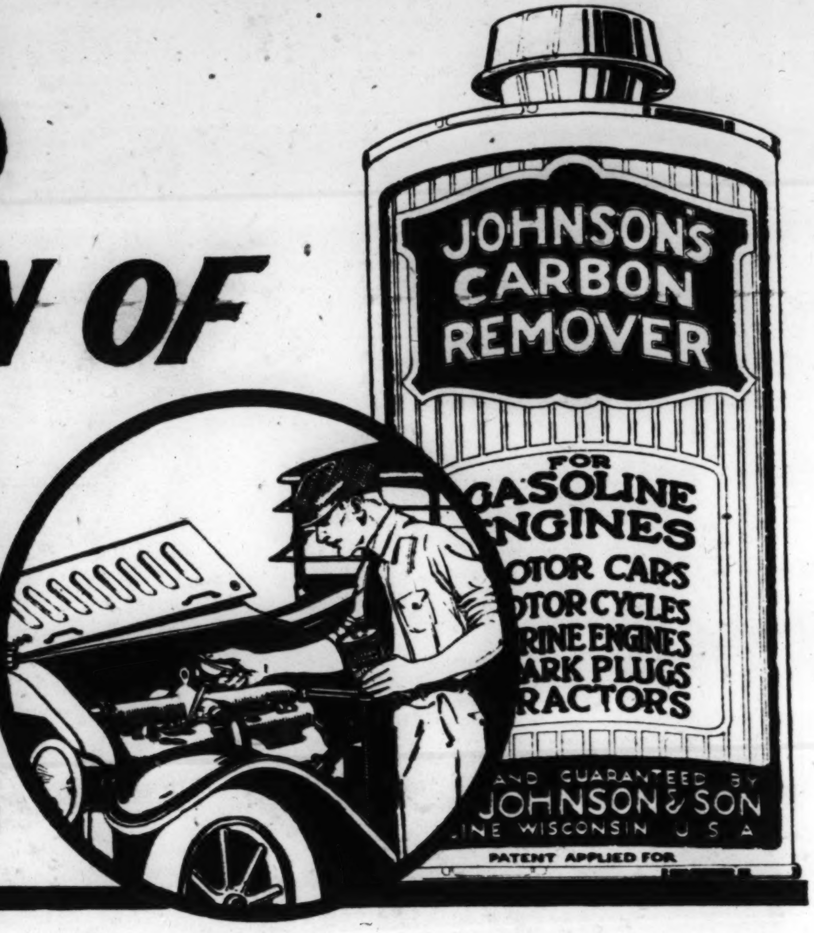
PREVENTS ACCUMULATION OF CARBON



YOU can keep your motor snappy and full of "pep" by preventing the accumulation of carbon. Don't wait until your engine is choked and caked with it. Use Johnson's Carbon Remover every 500 miles, then the carbon is removed while it is soft and powdery, eliminating the frequent grinding of valves and keeping the motor always clean. No experience or labor required—you can easily do it yourself in ten minutes—and the cost is trifling.

JOHNSON'S CARBON REMOVER

Johnson's Carbon Remover is a perfectly harmless liquid to be poured or squirted into the cylinders. Millions of cans have been used with satisfaction. It simply softens the carbon, then the heat from the engine pulverizes it and it is blown out the exhaust. Johnson's Carbon Remover contains no acids and does not affect lubrication.

It is the easiest, cleanest, safest and most satisfactory remedy for carbon. It will save you from $3.00 to $5.00 over any other method without laying up your car. A dose of Johnson's Carbon Remover—the engine laxative—will stop that knock—quiet the motor, and give the maximum power with the minimum amount of fuel.

KEEP YOUR CAR YOUNG

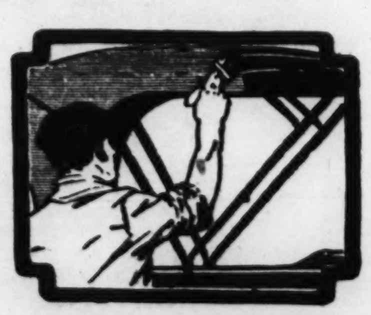
will stop leaks immediately without laying up the car—no mechanical experience required. It contains nothing which can clog or coat the cooling system and is absolutely harmless in every respect. It isn't a makeshift—it's a permanent repair. It will ordinarily seal a leak in from two to ten minutes. A half pint is sufficient for a Ford or other small radiator.

Johnson's Black-Lac

Here is a preparation with which you can make your gray, dusty top and side curtains look like new. Johnson's Black-Lac is unequaled for blackening fenders, rims, hoods, lamps—and in fact, all worn metal parts. Prevents rust and keeps your car in a high state of repair.



Johnson's Hastee Patch

This is the ideal repair for tubes, casings and rubber goods of all kinds. No time, labor or heat required. A Patch can be applied in three minutes, and it's so simple a child can use it. Gives equally good results on a pin hole puncture or on a large blowout. Conveniently put up in strips.

More Mileage for Tubes and Casings

Johnson's Valve Grinding Compound

Best by test for grinding all kinds of valves. Contains no glass, emery or grit. Gives a velvet seat. Made in two grades—the coarse for roughing and the fine for finishing. Put up in lithographed Duplex cans containing 2 ozs. each of the fine and coarse. Use Johnson's Valve Grinding Compound for all kinds of surfacing and polishing.

Drive around to our service station at 113 E. Superior Street (Chicago) and get an estimate on having the finish of your car put in perfect condition without revarnishing—simply with the use of Johnson's Cleaner and Johnson's Prepared Wax. Phone Superior 6516.

LOUISE GLAUM was one of our best little vampires until, they becoming a bit unpopular, she reformed. Lately she's been doing good, misunderstood women and sech. In her last picture, "Sahara," however, she rather reverted to type.

Maryland, the home of the world's best fried chicken, is also famous as the birthplace of Miss Glaum. It was in Los Angeles, however, that she received her education for the stage, later playing in stock with Nat Goodwin. Her screen career started with Ince-Triangle in "Love of Justice." She was with Paralta, and "Shackled" was one of the most widely advertised of her pictures for this concern. J. P. Reed produced "Sahara."

Miss Glaum has dark hair and eyes, is 5 feet 3 inches tall, and weighs 130 pounds—little heavy, I'm afraid—and may be addressed in care of the Ince Studio, Culver City, California. Mae Tinee.

ORA CAREW is a delightful out-door type of girl who has done much to make the pictures in which she has appeared successes.

Miss Carew was born in Salt Lake City in 1895. From the moment she attended her first matinee she was jealous of the ones who charmed her, and made up her mind that she would an actress be. So—she went into stock, was there five years, doing a bit of musical comedy on the side; then she tried vaudeville—and was author of her own acts, if you please.

Then pictures whistled and she deserted the stage for the screen. After working for a year with Keystone she went to Goldwyn. Then she did work for Paramount. For a while she had her own company. Now she's to make a couple of features for Universal. Her hair is black; her eyes are brown; she weighs 118 pounds and is 5 feet 2 inches tall. Mae Tinee.

ARA-MARA
To Cleanse the Skin
Herbert Roystone, Inc.
New York

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, cannot grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thoroughly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street. New York.

The Best Way to Use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it. It goes on splendidly and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last six months, yet the box is small enough to fit your purse. When you use this pure, harmless rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Because La-may Rouge is so new, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. If your dealer refuses to get you a package, you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th Street, New York. Save this notice.

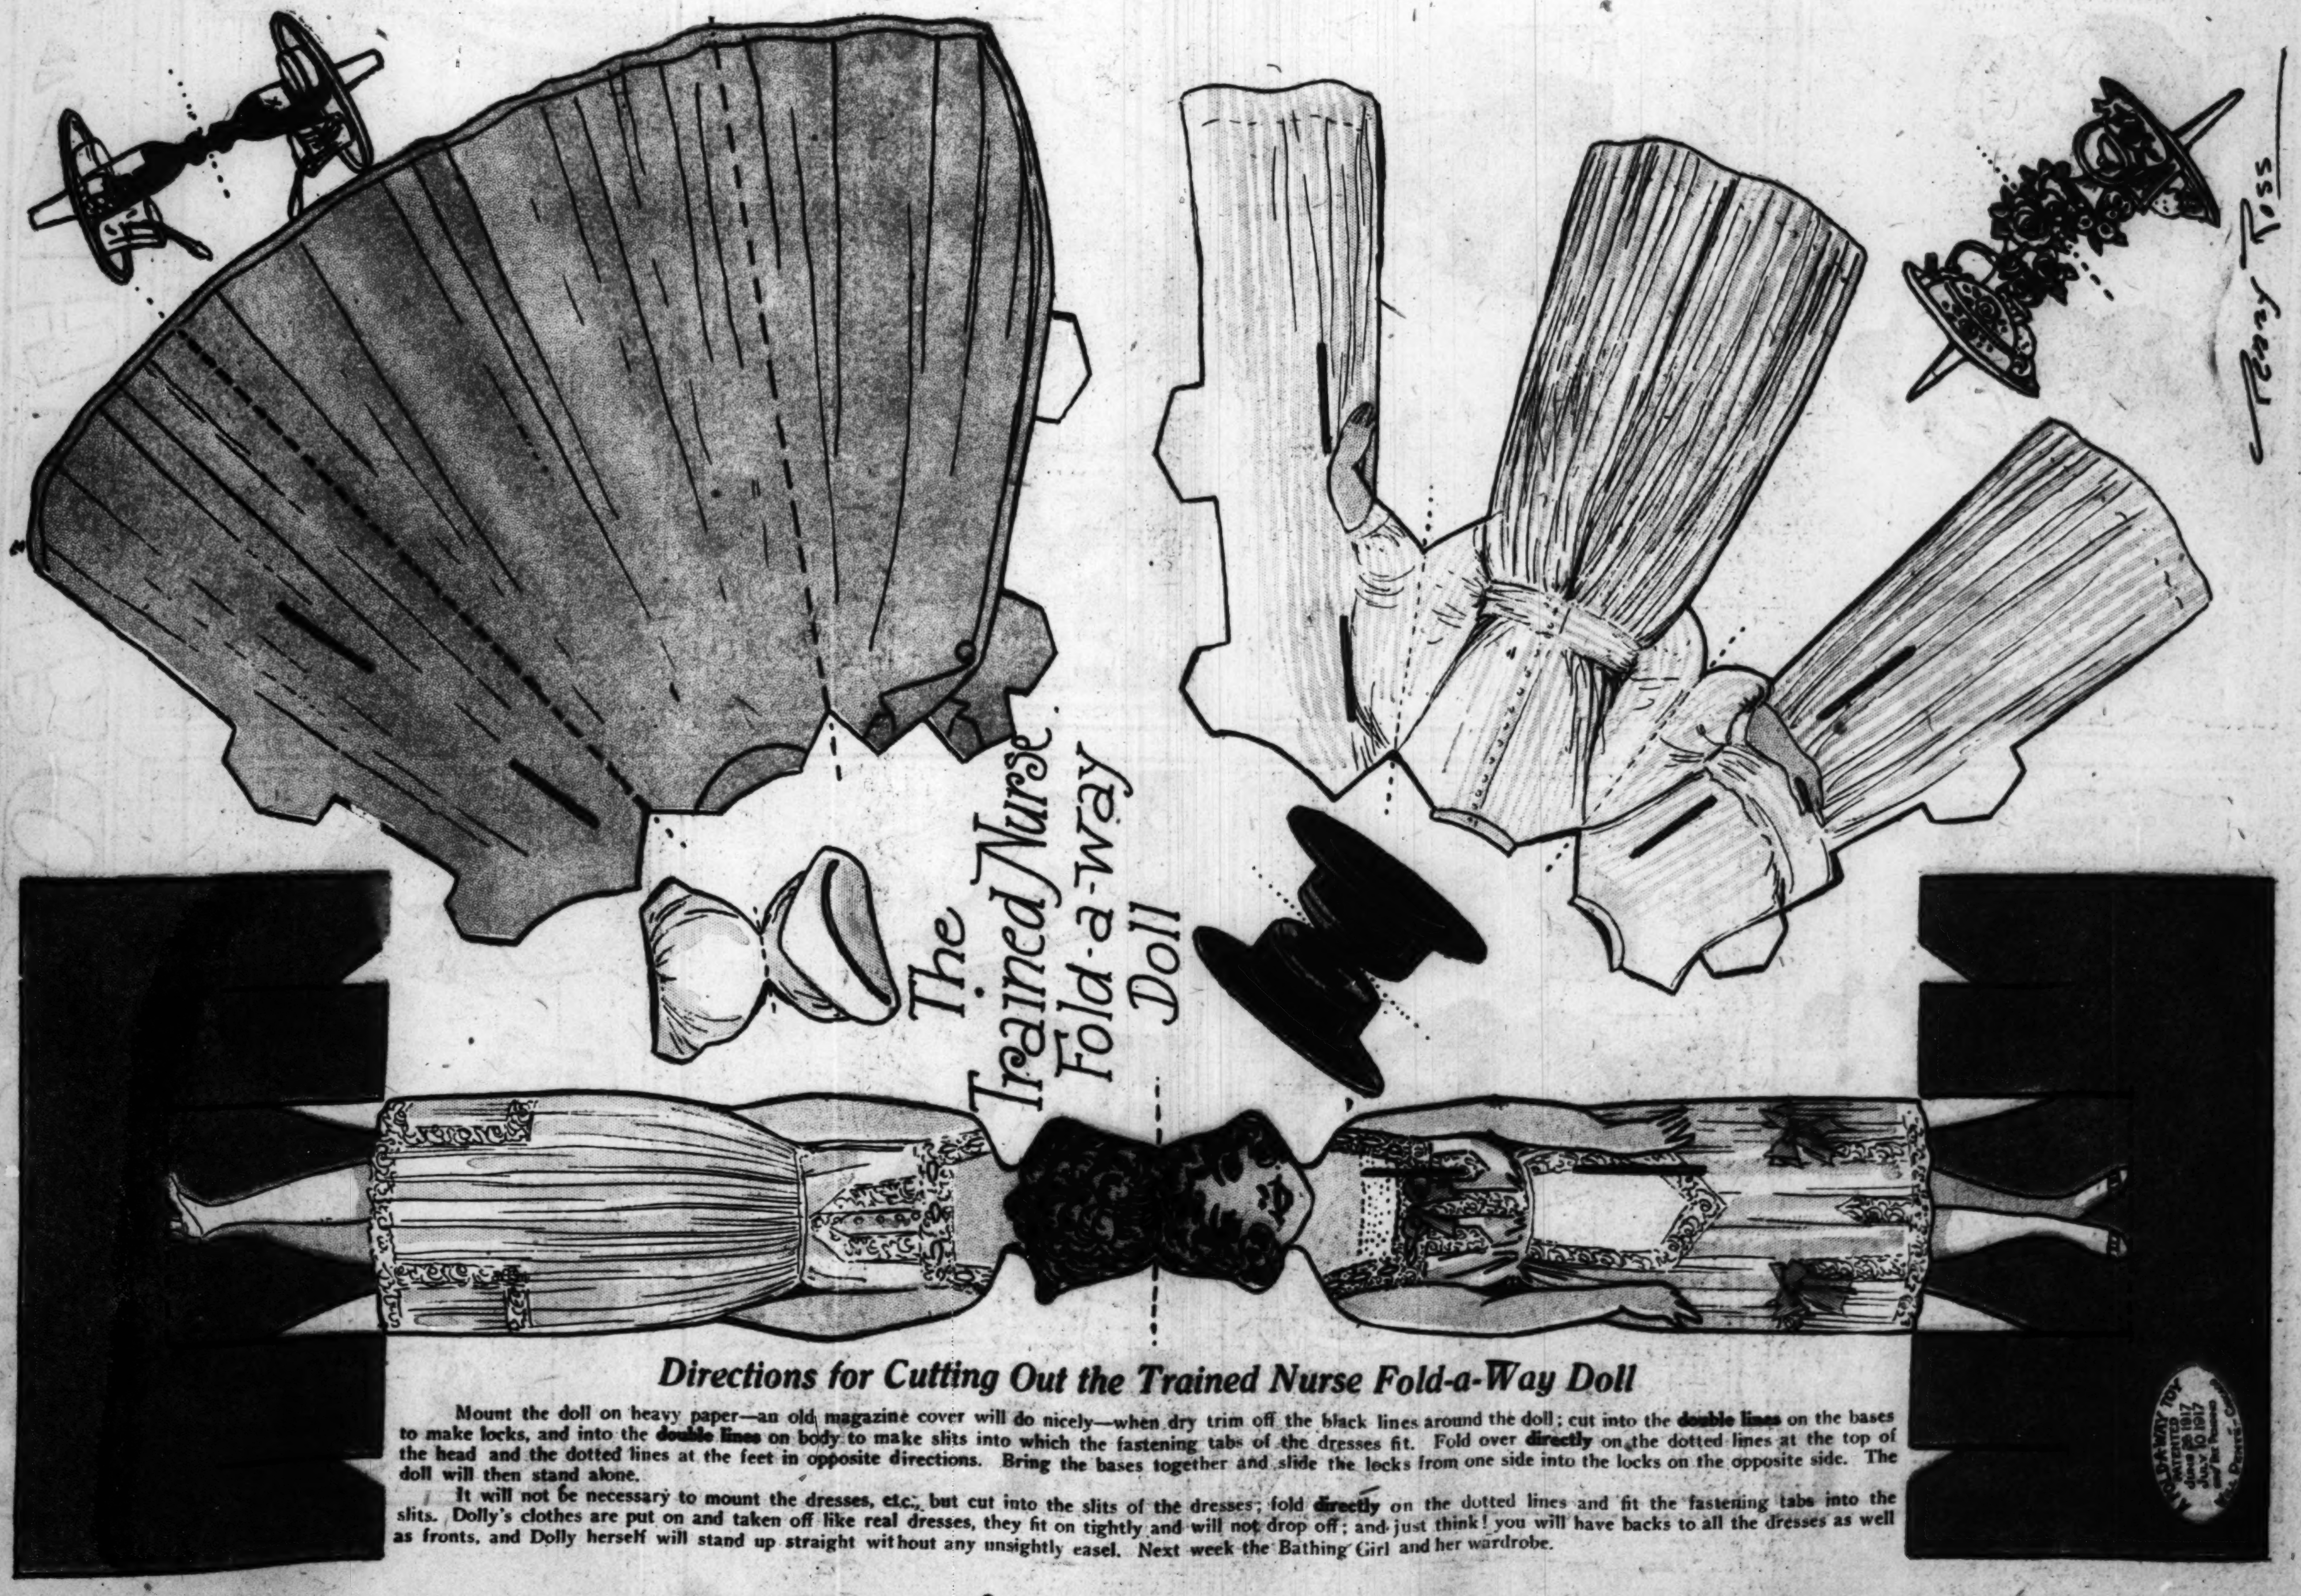
The Trained Nurse Fold-a-way Doll



Directions for Cutting Out the Trained Nurse Fold-a-Way Doll

Mount the doll on heavy paper—an old magazine cover will do nicely—when dry trim off the black lines around the doll; cut into the double lines on the bases to make locks, and into the double lines on body to make slits into which the fastening tabs of the dresses fit. Fold over directly on the dotted lines at the top of the head and the dotted lines at the feet in opposite directions. Bring the bases together and slide the locks from one side into the locks on the opposite side. The doll will then stand alone.

It will not be necessary to mount the dresses, etc., but cut into the slits of the dresses; fold directly on the dotted lines and fit the fastening tabs into the slits. Dolly's clothes are put on and taken off like real dresses, they fit on tightly and will not drop off; and just think! you will have backs to all the dresses as well as fronts, and Dolly herself will stand up straight without any unsightly easel. THE TEENIE WEENIES find it pays to be friendly with neighbors, by Wm. Donahey.

A TASTE for suburban life is frequently a matter of cultivation. Women usually find it harder to cultivate than men, and the younger the woman the slower to develop is her appreciation of its fullest and completest joys.

Such a case in point was that of a Susan MacMahon. Suburban life to Susan spelled everything she didn't want, never had wanted, and never, never would want.

Not that she often expressed this and similar convictions for public consumption. It would have grieved her mother and angered her father. They had come to the suburb for Susan's sake, and her viewpoint would have been much lamented. She was their reason for exodus from town. Married people almost always have a reason for coming to the suburbs. A definite reason is a comfortable thing in case actualities do not measure up to expectations. After three or four years you can hear the women regaling each new arrival in the suburb with their individual and particular reasons.

But Susan MacMahon had none of the consolations of well doing to sustain her. She had been raised in the city and bred on city pavements until she had reached what she considered years of discretion and the beginning of all life and fun. That is to say, precisely 16½ years, in terms of calendar time, and the smell of smoke and the bustle of crowds was sweet to her soul.

And the suburb she hated with as deep and abiding a hatred as any girl with Susan's natural sweetness of disposition could possibly treasure. She had spent ten years in it, and in that single decade of years, life, as she told herself, had passed her by. She had been robbed of all the gayeties of girlhood, the natural inheritance of youth, buried out in the prairie stretches of a new and struggling suburb, twenty-seven miles from town!

She hated the long ride to the city on the too infrequent trips she was able to make. She always had to sit with some married woman, who was very likely to regale her with all of the myriad worries and woes of matrimonial existence.

But though the distance was long enough in the day time, it was nothing to what it seemed after the theater. At the door of this grievance lurked a near approach to tragedy. Susan always had to invite the man to stay all night; that is, on those rare occasions when she was invited by some masculine cosmopolite for supper and theater afterward. There was no returning train he could possibly catch after depositing her at the door of the MacMahon bungalow, five blocks from the station. Susan was blonde, and Susan's particular type of prettiness did not stand the morning light well. In her heart Susan was convinced that she had lost several suitors through this criminal neglect on the part of the railroad authorities to schedule a return train to town.

The number of people in Garden Bloom, however, who were interested in theaters was a negligible quantity. Most of the dwellers of Garden Bloom were feverishly paying for their lares and penates. All of the family resources in summer were directed toward the buying of screens and seeds and interior decorations, while the resources of winter were speedily absorbed in such necessary luxuries as storm windows and coal, kindling, and metal sashes. Susan remembered once a remark of a patient little woman who referred fondly to the night her

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

IT PAYS TO BE FRIENDLY WITH YOUR NEIGHBORS.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"GENERAL," said the Sailor as he stepped into the Teenie Weenie library one morning, "I'm afraid, sir, that the turtle is not doing very well. He hasn't touched a bit of food for two days."

"Have you been giving him plenty of worms and bugs?" asked the General.

"Yes, sir, and we take great pains to get the biggest, fattest worms we can find, too."

"That's funny," muttered the General. "Can you suggest anything? Has he plenty of water?"

"Yes, the water is in good shape, but I think he could be tempted with a piece of meat, for turtles are very fond of meat," answered the Sailor.

"Well, you had better see that dog that lives over on the next street and may be he can get some meat for you."

The Sailor lost no time in making his way across the street to the house in which the dog lived. He found the dog asleep on the back porch and the little fellow sat down to wait until the dog awoke.

Presently the dog opened his eyes and the Sailor yelled at the top of his voice, "Say, my friend, I wonder if I could ask a favor of you?"

"O, it's the Teenie Weenie Sailor! Bet your sweet life you can!" said the dog. "What's up?"

"Well, we've got a turtle. We caught him last week and we've got him in our zoo, and he won't eat anything, so we have decided to try him on meat and we want to know if you can get us a little."

"You came to the right one for meat," smiled the dog. "I buried a nice big bone with a lot of meat on it only four days ago and you are certainly welcome to it."

"That's mighty nice of you," said the Sailor. "When can we expect you?"

"I'll have it over to the shoe house in a jiffy," answered the dog.

The dog was true to his word, and in about fifteen minutes he poked his nose under the rose bush, beside the laundry, and in his mouth he carried a big meaty bone. The bone was quite old and the meat smelled frightfully bad, but the Teenie Weenies were much too polite to mention the fact.

"It appears to me that that meat is a bit rare," suggested the General, pointing up to the bone. "Er—er sort of—er spoiled."

"O goodness, no," answered the dog. "It's just nice and ripe and has the most delicious flavor you ever tasted."

"Well, you see," said the General, "we wanted to give some meat to our turtle, who is a bit indisposed, and—er, begging your pardon, I think that this meat might be a little too rich for a sick turtle."

"Beg pardon, sir," said the Turk, who had been standing near talking with the Old Soldier, "turtles are very fond of old meat and I'm sure you will find that our turtle will eat all he can get."

"Sure!" exclaimed the dog. "I've seen turtles eatin' dead fish with all their might. They like their meat good and rich."

After much discussion it was decided to try the turtle on the meat, so a liberal supply was cut off and thrown in to him. The turtle eagerly went after the meat and ate several large pieces as big as walnuts.

"There!" barked the dog. "Didn't I tell you. All animals and fish and such—except cats, for they don't count—like rich meat."

"It looks as though you were right," said the General, "and I certainly thank you for getting us the meat."

"Don't mention it, don't mention it," answered the dog. "Any time you want a bone just let me know and I'll be glad to get one for you—got 'em buried all over the neighborhood—give you one any time." And the dog leaped over the tea pot and disappeared under the rose bush.

husband took her downtown to dinner. It seemed to stand out brightly in her mind against an eternity of dinners which she had prepared at home. Figuratively Susan tore her hair.

If she ever married it would be the city for her and a tiny apartment and a movie every night.

But there seemed no immediate prospect of such a turn of fortune's wheel. In the first place, Susan met very few men. It may be all right to claim that love affairs are a matter of temperament and not of environment, and that marriages are not of the earth born, but still it remains a fact that one of the first essentials of matrimony is to meet the man.

And Susan did not meet an unattached man in a month of full moons. There were instances, rare instances, of oasislike relief, when she spent the night in town with some friend. On one of these occasions she had met Sterett Haydon. He had appeared tremendously interested—until he found out where she lived. To be sure, he had plowed his way through snowdrifts a number of times that winter, but the crowd he met with in town was pretty lively, and Sterett Haydon's interest in Susan had been eclipsed by nearer and more convenient attractions. That had been a real heartache for Susan. She had cared a lot about Sterett Haydon, and her cup of bitterness toward the little suburb where she lived welled full.

Nor was it much comfort that Sterett never quite seemed to forget her. There were nights when he would phone her long distance and talk to her for half an hour on a stretch. And when he went to war he sent her postal cards quite regularly, and even a marvelous box of bonbons from Brest at Christmas time. But that was all.

As for Garden Bloom and its possibilities there just weren't any. All of Garden Bloom was married and settled, taking themselves and their purpose in life with all of the seriousness of a modern American suburb. They had come to the suburb with a grim purpose to achieve—and achieve it they would. Some day, perhaps, when their families were grown and machines were in the garages, and a servant or two in the servants' quarters, life would assume a less serious aspect.

But in the meantime there was Susan!

Sterett Haydon leaned back comfortably in the smoker of the suburban train, drawing a long breath of sheer masculine content.

"This is certainly the life," he remarked casually to the man at his side.

"Are you settling out this way?" returned his companion, with true commuter's interest in a prospective sharer of his joys and sorrows.

"Yes—no—I really haven't decided," stammered Haydon.

"I'm considering it," he finished.

As he swung briskly off the train at Garden Bloom he glanced down at his watch. It had not taken him so very long—and he used to think of Susan living such an outrageous distance from the city.

Yes, it was wonderful air. He took another deep breath. It reminded him of southern France in the spring, when he had his furlough. He had thought of Susan constantly those two glorious weeks, had pictured her in the different little country places along the French roadside—and had been thinking of her ever since.

Susan was out in the garden as he approached the house. She had been working there for some time, and the pink from the sun was in her cheeks and her eyes were blue. And her hair—he had never seen such glorious lights in it by the electric lights of town.

Susan stared hard at him. She could not believe her eyes. He was in France—not here. Then, with a gasping little cry of sheer delight, she tore out across the lawn to meet him.

"Sterett!" she cried. "Sterett!"

And she kissed him. A wave of gladness surged over her. She had not expected to see him—not here—not out here.

And the uniform—and the medal—and the scar on his face—and home again.

"O, you look just wonderful!" she cried, "just won——"

But she got no further, for he had caught her again and was kissing, real kisses, which frightened her.

She drew away, stammering something—she hardly knew what.

"Let's go in the house. You must be thirsty. I'll give you something cool to drink."

He laughed then, a boyish, embarrassed laugh.

"I'm not a bit thirsty," he protested, but he followed her into the house.

Across from the yellow wicker table on the sun porch she watched him while he ate his sandwiches and drank the lemonade she had piled high with red fruits. He was certainly looking finer than she had ever seen him, older and much more serious. She warmed under the look in his eyes, the spark which leaped into a light like fire as she talked. And the kisses—she trembled faintly—she could feel them still on her lips. What did they mean—what did they mean?

After he had finished eating he leaned back in his chair.

"Susan, come here," he held out his big hand, burned brown by the months of outdoor life.

She did not move, only sat very still, looking at him.

"Very well, I'll come to you," he retorted, and he sprang up and came over to her side of the table. He drew a chair close, pushed back the dishes on the table, and drew out the package of papers from his pocket.

"I was talking to Boggs before I left town," he said, "and he was showing me the plans of a new house he has started to build. It's a small house—you call it a bungalow, I think—I——" "Now, though——" He grinned and then burst out desperately:

"I know you love the country—you've always stood up for it when I used to run it down—and I'm—I'm just crazy to get out away from town. I've been this way ever since I came back from France. They know how to enjoy it there, and now I—well, I want to live in the country myself." He paused breathlessly, taking a cool drink of lemonade by way of encouragement.

Susan leaned back in her chair, her eyes wide. Sterett in love with the country—Sterett wanting to settle in the suburbs—Sterett wanting——

She looked down at the plans of the bungalow, but she could make out none of the details in the maze of bewilderment which clouded her eyes.

Did he mean that he wanted her, too? Was he showing her this, for her to share? Could it really be possible? No, it couldn't be—and yet. A rush of memory swept her. There were his kisses!

Susan's heart leaped in sudden strong desire. She knew there was nothing on earth she wanted so much as just to be with him, in some such bungalow. It didn't matter where it was. It might be in a wilderness of prairie or in a forest vastness. Just so it was their own.

"Isn't it great?" he went on. "And you—you do love it here, don't you?" He bent over her eagerly.

Susan nodded. Her small world was whirling away about her head. Nothing seemed real. It was a dream she was living through and she would wake in a moment.

"Say you do—and want me out here with you—in some place just like this." His voice was lower than she had ever heard it before.

"I do," answered Susan, in a choky, gaspy little voice.

And she did!

The Sacrifice by Ethel M. Colson

"You've at Least Got to Live Long Enough to Pay to Some Other Distressed Woman What It Has Cost Me to Save You."

"YES," said the girlish voice, with soft determination, "I'm going to him tomorrow, unless," in lowered tone, "I decide in favor of the river tonight. No, Don't speak," as the older woman showed signs of remonstrance; "I know all that you're going to say, and I don't believe it, or if I do I don't care. I'm telling you, Gracia, just to save you suspense when my absence is first noted. I shouldn't tell you if I hadn't firmly made up my mind!"

"Why shouldn't I go to him!" she burst forth again, after a moment of tense silence. "We're all the world to each other, and he"—with a shuddering sigh—"has so brief a time in which to be happy. The doctors say he'll be dead in a year at latest. I don't love my husband; I was too young to know the meaning of love when I married; I never even dreamed it until after I met Tom. And Tom doesn't love his wife; in fact, he can't bear her. It's awful to him to have her about now that he's so weak and helpless. The—the other two love us, I suppose, and I suppose they'll suffer if we go off together. But they must suffer, anyway. They must feel that we don't love them, and nobody's happy. But Tom and I, together——"

Again the older woman, tender eyed, pitying, made as though to speak, and again an imperative gesture restrained her.

"I know it all," continued the younger. "I've gone over all the arguments you could advance until I'm dizzy. I've thought about things until I'm almost unbalanced. But I've decided, and I shan't think about them any more.

"It isn't right to go off with the man you love when you're married to another! Granted, but it will make Tom happy and I'd toss over all the right and wrong in creation, all my hopes for time and eternity, just to make Tom happy—that's the way I love him! One can't snatch happiness; it won't last! Granted, again; but, you see, Tom has only a year of life before him and after that nothing matters. The world will despise me; I shall despise myself, this mad impulse over! Of course, I know it. I should despise myself now, if I could stop thinking how much Tom and I love each other and that Tom's dying. But I can't stop! I don't know that I want to. And, anyway, I give him that, too, my shame and disgrace and humiliation. It's a small matter beside the love he gives me, and I shall count it. For the sake of making Tom happy I can stand even my own reprobation and contempt!"

"But can you stand his?" the listener cried, seizing her opportunity. "Can you bear to have him pity and despise you, even in silence, even though he loves you to distraction, to know that he is reproaching himself, in his secret soul, for having brought you so low? Listen to me, Josephine!" She dropped to her knees by the other's side.

"I loved a man once, Fina, loved him just as you love Tom, loved him with every fiber of my being, loved him as the Bible says we should love the Creator, 'with all my heart and soul and mind.' I was younger than you are, but I'd learned to love early. And he loved me, too, God bless him! but—he had some bad habits. One night he went off with a crowd of convivial associates, got drunk, and woke up to find himself married to a woman whom, sober, he didn't even admire. A few hours later came that blow that nearly killed me, in the frantic note telling me that he couldn't bear to see me again or to face any one else who knew him. He was off to Europe with—his wife.

"You think you're suffering, Fina, but consider my situation. We'd been engaged for some time, and I'd come to think of him almost as my husband. One moment it was my right, my duty, to love him to the uttermost, the next—it was a sin to think of him, willingly, even for a moment. And I, reared in an atmosphere of religion, I—well, I loved him, Fina, as you love Tom!

"I bore it, of course, as we do bear things we have to. Pride helped me, and my mother. For a time I was sick in soul and body, I hated the sight of any one who had known me before it happened. But I struggled hard and gradually I could again discern the sunshine, savour life faintly. And then—he came back. I could have borne it even then if only he'd been happy, but a single glance told me how wretchedly he suffered, and to my burden was added hate of that other woman who had brought that hurt look to his eyes.

"I loved him so much, you see, that his pain wounded me worse than my own. And it seemed as though everything went against us that winter. His wife—she'd been dead a long time, poor thing, before I could bring myself to forgive her!—fairly flaunted his reluctant gallantry before the circle that we all traversed. I think, now, that she must have loved him in her own way, but then I thought it was sheer bravado. And no matter how hard I tried to avoid them we were always being brought into contact somehow, somewhere. The climax came when, after an evening gathering from which the wife happened to be absent, our hostess, new to the town and ignorant of the story, insisted upon sending the two of us home in her carriage, insisted that he see me to my door.

"I tried to be cold and distant; I really did, Fina, but it was useless. He'd reached the limit of his endurance, poor lad, and he began to speak almost before the carriage started; I never hear a certain kind of rainfall without having the entire scene brought up before me. He was desperate, Fina; he loved and wanted me so terribly, and the arguments he used were practically your own.

"His marriage was an unhappy accident; in the spiritual sense no marriage. He and I belonged together, not he and his wife, who wasn't even happy with him, who made his life a burden. As with you, there were no children to be injured. Divorce—it wasn't so easy in those days, either—would take time, and, meanwhile, life was slipping by us. Why not take the law into our own hands, go off together, snatch happiness, cheat fate? He talked and looked like a fallen angel, and my own heart played my better nature false as I listened—and yielded. Almost before I knew it I'd consented to go.

"And then—an obstruction on the street stopped the carriage full under a lamppost, and from another waiting carriage a woman's eyes met mine with a strange look in which recognition, deprecation, appeal, shame, pity, and warning were curiously mingled. She did not bow, that other woman, but the man at my side bowed with an odd mixture of chivalry and something that I couldn't quite understand.

"'Who was that?' I asked him, and he told me. It was a woman who several years before had shocked society by doing the very thing he was proposing. The man for whom she had given all had left her, presently, had married another woman; her husband, naturally enough, had divorced her. She was very lonely. My lover had stood her friend at the time, had at all times treated and spoken of her kindly, but—the tone of his reply embodied a fierce revelation. Like a flash of lightning I saw how, down at the bottom of his heart, he would by and by think of me!

"I said nothing of this to him. When the carriage drew up at my door I kissed and clung to him, knowing that this was indeed good-by, though he, thinking I feared for the future, only assured and reassured me of his unending love and devotion. This was our last parting, he said, with a final kiss, and I acquiesced, reading into the words a different meaning. Then he escorted me up the steps, my mother opened the door to us, and—something in me died!

"I told my mother all—poor Fina, you have no mother, so you must listen to me a little longer—and she helped me again. We never alluded to the episode, even indirectly, until I thanked her as she lay dying, but next morning we started off together, ostensibly to visit an invalid relative, and we never returned to the home town until—until all was over. The man I loved died less than two years later, and after his death I received the two letters that had followed me more than half around the world.

"One, written on the day of my flight, was full of passionate reproaches, yet ended with the scarcely veiled conviction that I had acted rightly. The other, painfully scrawled on the edge of eternity, thanked me for the deed that had rendered our earthly happiness impossible. He could not have borne it, he wrote, dying, to have known that he had irreparably wronged me.

"To this day I can't think of that other woman's claims and rights without wincing. But I've never suffered a pang so cruelly keen as that which came with the realization that if I sacrificed law to love my lover would sooner or later despise me—nature made men that way, dear, for the protection of the race, and they can't help it any more than we can help despising ourselves when we let our lower selves rule the higher. And I've never ceased to thank God, even when it has seemed that I couldn't live another minute without flying to the man who spelled heaven and earth to me, that it was given me to act as I did!"

The younger woman turned her tortured gaze toward the window.

"Well, there's always the river!" she murmured, low, to herself.

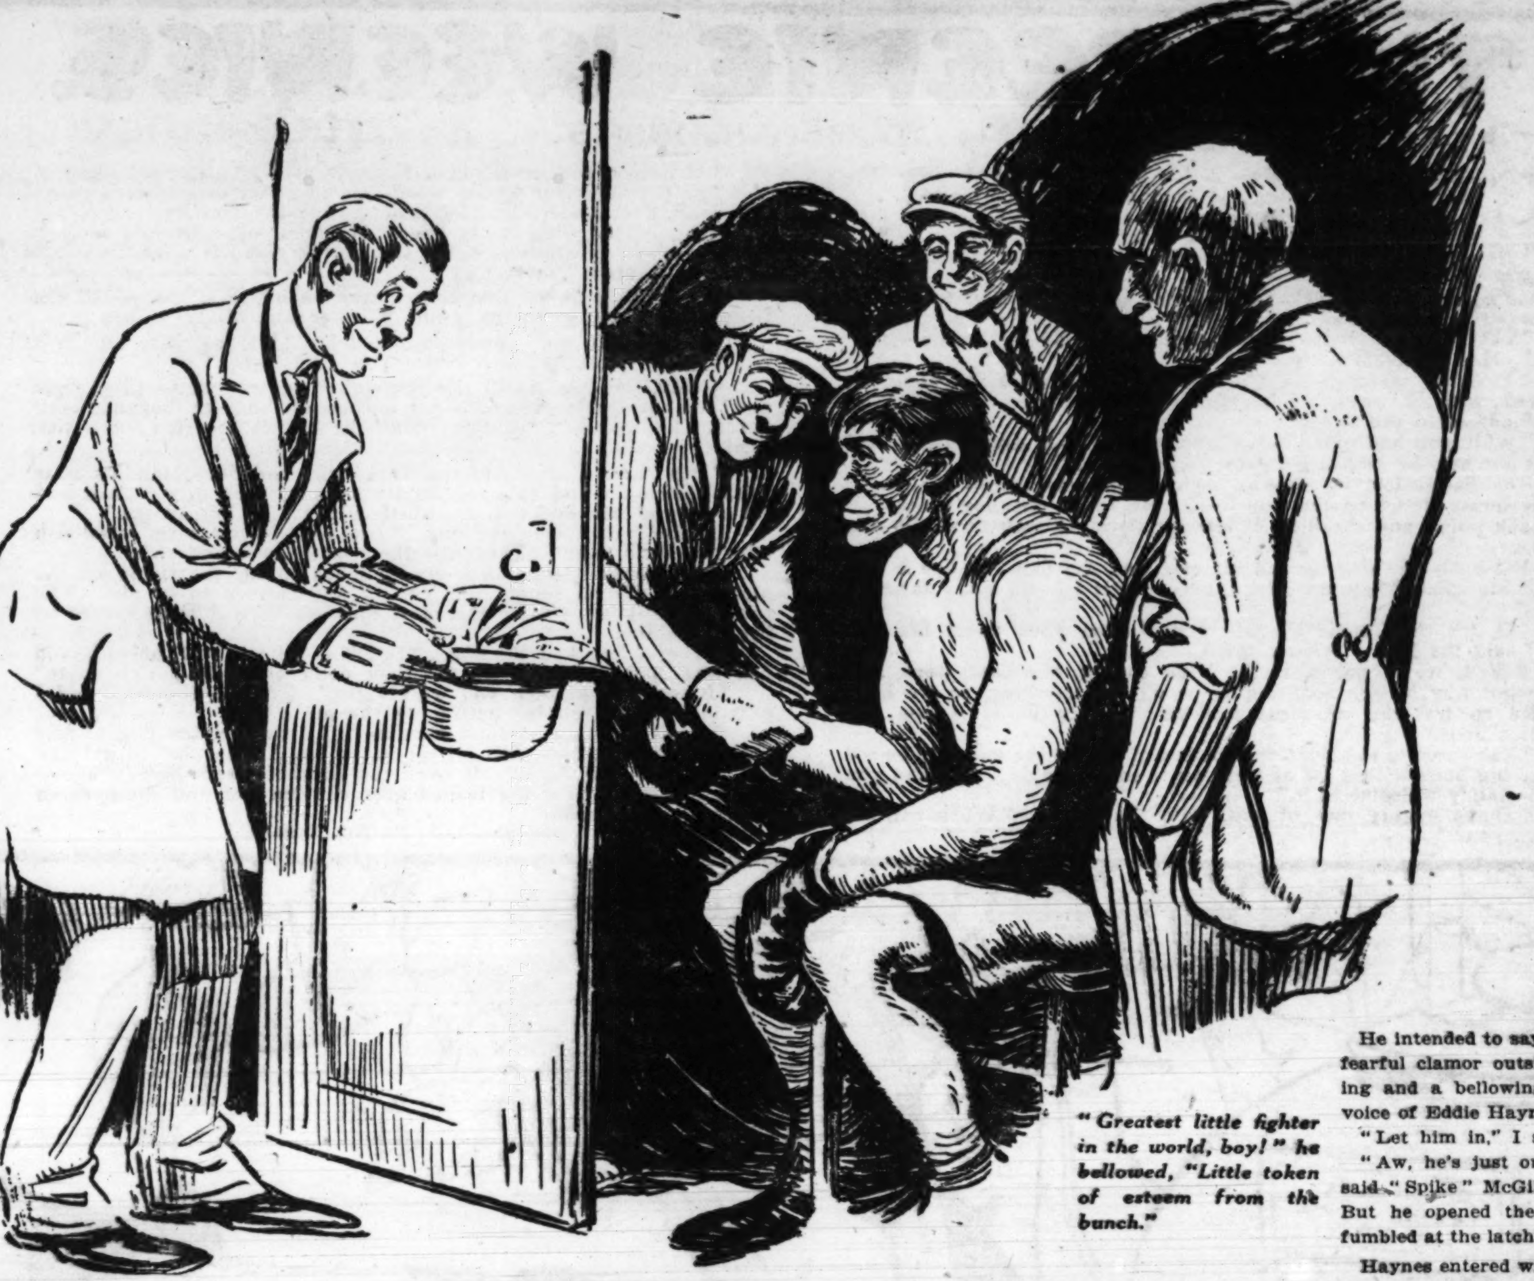
The other woman prayed mutely for a moment, then, obeying a sudden inspiration, she sprang to her feet and lightly shook the bowed form before her.

"Never for you, my dear!" she cried with bracing fervor. "It isn't in you, in the first place, to run away from duty, and especially it isn't in you to betray and desert poor Tom just when he most needs the help of your faith and example. And it isn't in you, either, to leave an honest debt unpaid.

"Don't you see," as the suffering, childlike eyes met her own with new hope and meaning, "don't you see, Fina, that we've all got to get even with each other somehow? I've paid my debt to that poor sister who kept me from making the mistake that had wrecked her, and you've at least got to live long enough to pay to some other distressed woman what it has cost me to save you!"

THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

Charles E. Van Loan



"Greatest little fighter in the world, boy!" he bellowed, "Little token of esteem from the bunch."

Isidore away for a second.

Isidore became angry. He asked the referee if he should "commit it a murder."

"Shall I stop it, Pete?" he asked.

"If you do," said Peter grimly. "I'll make you hard to catch!"

"Get together!" said the referee.

Isidore was very angry by this time. By all precedent, Peter had no right to be on his feet. The champion to be lost his presence of mind and began swinging wildly. Peter bobbed his head, ducked his body, and hopped out of danger. Isadore swung a wandering right, and followed it with a haphazard left, and Peter, seeing another golden opportunity, stepped under that random left and stopped the swing of Isidore's body with another piledriving right hander just below the breast bone.

"O-o-o-ff!" grunted Isidore, clinching and looking toward his corner, where Abey was telegraphing advice with all his fingers.

When the bell sounded the end of the first round, Peter was on the floor again, but he rose at once and walked steadily to his corner. I watched his knees for the weakness which is the first sign of collapse. They were as steady as they had ever been. The house was working itself into a state of great excitement. Eddie Haynes, whooping like an Indian, had nearly completed the circle of the boxes, and business with him seemed quite prosperous during the minute's intermission.

"Look at Izzy!" said the usher. "He's blowing like a porpoise!"

I looked at Isidore. He was sprawled back against the angle of the ropes, and one hand was placed tenderly over the pit of his stomach. He was swallowing air in great gulps, and his excited handlers were not helping him any by filling his mouth with water. Two seconds, with an ear apiece, were telling him exactly what he ought to do. A minute in the corner, under bad handling, is sometimes worse than three rounds of fighting.

In the other corner of the ring, Peter the Battler was resting easily, with a large blue lump on the left side of his jaw. He caught my eye, and nodding toward Isidore's corner, tapped himself twice on the stomach. For a few seconds I had hopes for him.

When the bell rang, Isidore catapulted out of his seat with a rush which carried him nearly all the way to Peter's corner. As he swung his right arm as a man swings a scythe, hooking it straight upward at the end of the blow, there was no time to dodge. Isidore's glove grazed Peter's forearm and struck him under the chin.

The Battler came as near turning a back somersault as his limited arc would permit, and his head struck the canvas with an amazing bump. Every man in the house grunted in sympathy.

For the fraction of a second there was silence, and in that lull I heard the calculating Abey say:

"That's the money, Izzy!"

Then, I think, I stood up and yelled. I remember finding myself on my feet and breathless. What happened was enough to make almost any man yell. No sooner had Peter's hand hit the canvas than he whirled over like a cat and literally shot from the floor in a thunderbolt charge. His yellow hair fairly streamed behind him as he rushed upon the startled Isidore, and his eyes were blazing with fury.

"He's been knocked crazy!" howled a man behind me. "He doesn't know what he's doing!"

In no other way could I account for the sudden transformation of the human punching bag, or his recovery from a blow which would have felled an ox. In a flash Peter attacked became Peter attacking, a wild-eyed maniac coming into battle with a shrill yell of rage.

To say that Isidore was surprised would be putting it quite mildly. His eyes popped from his head, his mouth fell open, and his hands hung dangling at his sides. They were hanging there when Peter landed a crazy, haymaker swing to the body, and with a yelp of pain Isidore shut up like a jackknife. Then he shuffled away backward toward his corner, Peter following him like a tiger and banging away with both hands.

By this time it sounded as if the building was being torn down. Chairs were smashing in all directions, men were jumping up and down, screaming, yelling, whooping; canes were flying, hats were thrown away, and every man in the place seemed to be urging Peter, who needed no urging.

"Put him out!" they shouted.

I have seen many champions, but never one who showed such an insane fury of attack as Peter did that night—Peter, who through all his fighting career had been a punching bag for other men. It did not seem possible, yet there he was, battering the great Fighting Pawnbroker along the ropes, smashing him out of clinches, doubling him up with body blows, and straightening him again with uppercuts.

Finally Isidore brought up with a crash in his own corner; he could retreat no farther. At the same instant Peter started a right uppercut which seemed to come from his shoe tops. The whizzing glove thudded under Isidore's chin, and the Fighting Pawnbroker collapsed in a heap, fell against the ropes, and slid slowly to the floor. It was all over.

The referee counted in dumb show—no voice could have carried more than a few feet in that tremendous din—but he bent low, so that Isidore, if conscious, might hear the passing of his fame.

Somewhere in the middle of the count the champion-who-was-to-be stirred slightly, as if disturbed in his slumbers, and then nestled closer to the floor.

The referee threw up his hand at "ten" and turned to pat Peter on the shoulder, but the Battler was already helping to lift the fallen idol to his stool.

Then Peter picked up Isidore's limp glove, shook it twice, and carefully replaced it in his lap. One might have said that he did it apologetically.

By this time half the men in the house were on their way to the ring.

A wild African buffalo loose in that stampede would have needed pity. Down they came to the ringside and up under the ropes, treading on the shoulders and backs of those at the press tables, stepping on fingers and smashing telegraph instruments.

From four sides they burst into the ring, a wild wave of humanity that engulfed Peter and tossed him shoulder high in an instant. They slapped him on the back, they hugged him, they patted his arms and his legs and tried to tear off his gloves for souvenirs. The ring was jammed with a pushing, tugging, hauling mass of red-faced, open-mouthed humanity.

Only in one corner of the ring was there anything like a calm. In Isidore's corner there was no celebration. His scowling seconds locked arms and formed a cordon about him, kicking right and left when the press threatened. The Fighting Pawnbroker sat on his stool with his head in his hands, a forsaken idol, listening to a wild requiem which was also a welcome to a conqueror. Fight followers waste little time on the beaten man, no matter how great he has been. He has been licked, and that settles him.

"The king is dead! Hoo-ray!"

At last, with immense difficulty and the aid of the police, a passageway was cleared, and Peter left the ring high on the shoulders of his delighted seconds. I crushed my way through the aisles, and by virtue of my official position as matchmaker was admitted to Peter's dressing room. The Battler was sitting on the rubbing table, while his seconds bent over his shoe laces.

"How on earth did you do it, Peter?" I demanded.

"Honest, Mr. Carey," said he, grinning, "I don't know. I guess I just went crazy. You know, that's the first jaw punch I ever really felt in my life! It made me mad. O, say! I guess I get that hundred anyway, don't I?"

"Hundred! It's five hundred! You knocked him out!"

Peter gasped and turned pale.

"Why I thought it was only a hundred!" he stammered.

He intended to say more, but there arose a fearful clamor outside the door, a hammering and a bellowing, and I recognized the voice of Eddie Haynes, lifted in supplication.

"Let him in," I said.

"Aw, he's just one of them crazy bugs!" said "Spike" McGilligan, the chief adviser. But he opened the door, grumbling as he fumbled at the latch.

Haynes entered with a roar. His collar was torn loose, his vest was ripped open, he was perspiring liberally, and his voice was hoarse. Hugged close to his chest was a stiff hat, which he carried like a tureen.

"Greatest little fighter in the world, boy!" he bellowed. "Little token of esteem from the bunch! Something to pay doctors' bills! Gee, but that was a great finish!"

Then he turned the hat upside down in Peter's lap, cascading a flood of silver, paper, and gold onto the floor. Peter looked down at his lap, then stared at Haynes, and lastly turned to me.

"What the——" he began, and then he choked. "What is this, anyway? What's coming off here?"

"Looks like it might be money," I said. "Your friends in the house wanted you to have something besides the purse."

"Spike," who had been flat on the floor, suddenly dumped another heap into Peter's lap.

Haynes, grinning happily, turned the lining of the hat inside out, shook it, tapped it a few times, and replaced it on his head.

"I guess that's all of it," he said.

Peter looked down at the money in his lap, and touched the pile with his fingers.

"My Lord!" said he, and it sounded like a prayer, "I didn't know there was that much money in the world!"

Then he held out his hand to Haynes. Peter's face was twitching, and his eyes were full of tears.

"I—I can't say nothing," he began. Then he choked and began to sob.

"Forget it!" cried Haynes. "If you want to make it right with me, ask me to the wedding!"

"You're on!" said Peter, wringing Haynes' hand. "And it'll be soon, too!"

Billy Grayson says that a fighter is the most ungrateful of all professional performers. He said this after he had offered Peter all sorts of inducements to meet fighters of national reputation. Peter declined every offer; 50 per cent of the house was no inducement. To the best of my knowledge, the Battler has never had a five ounce glove on his hand since that memorable night.

He owns a laundry route now, and has three men working for him. I meet him occasionally. The last time I saw him he informed me that it was a boy, and his name was Edward Haynes Hansen.

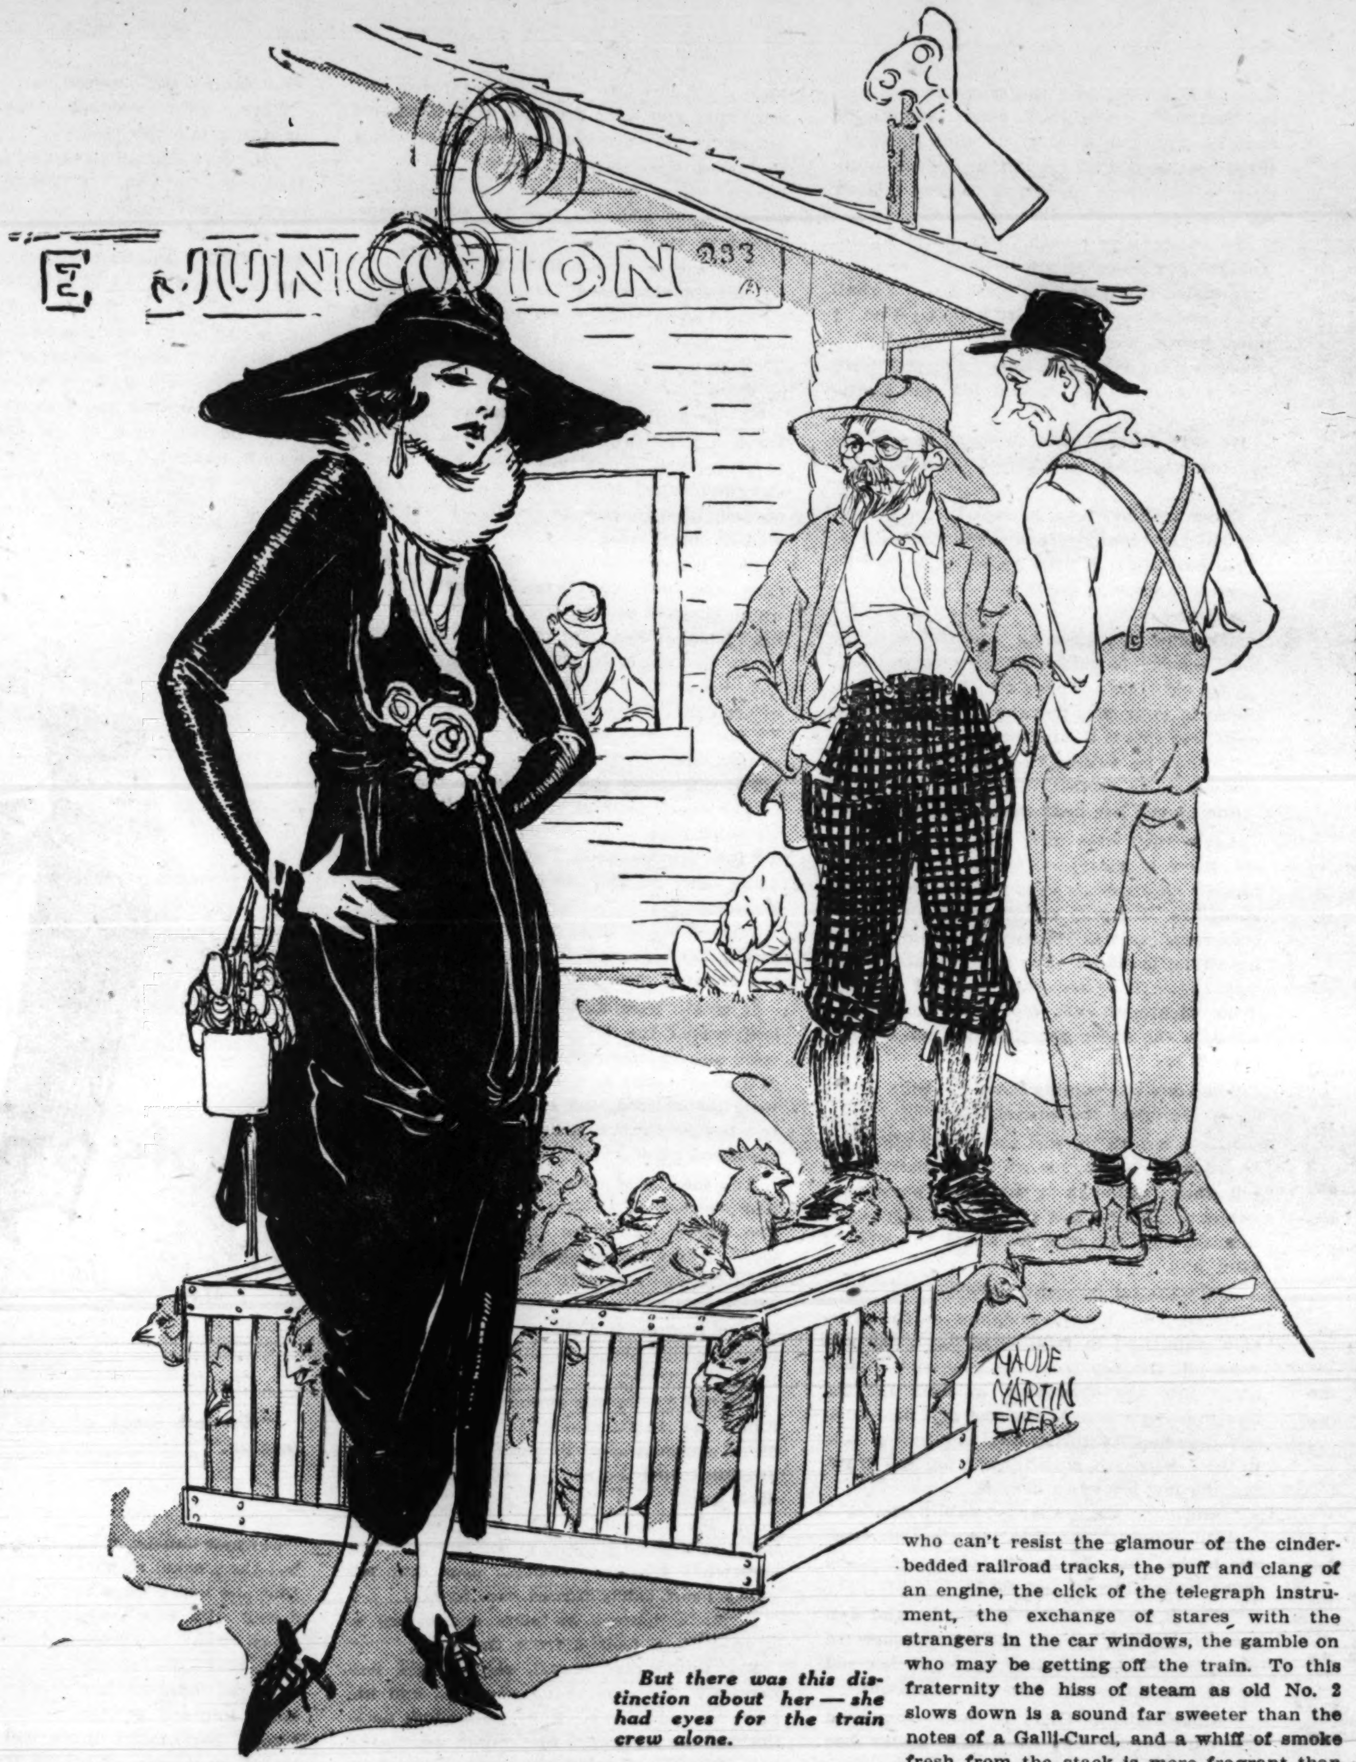
THE DEPOT VAMPIRE

by Oney Fred Sweet



But there was this distinction about her — she had eyes for the train crew alone.

"I Can't Help It Because I'm Different and Attractive Can I?"' She Asked.

THOSE who pass the Pioneer house in Prairie Junction on a summer evening, pass as in review. For the coterie reclining on the hotel entrance steps or in the chairs that have been lugged from the uncomfortable temperature of the office, though apparently bored and languid, is very much at attention. The peculiar light after the sun has gone down and before the stars come out is a merciless limelight upon Main street pedestrians as they approach this reviewing stand.

A woman, direct from her edge of town environs of a story and a half house and vegetable garden, came down the new cement walk, feigning indifference to the bevy of spectators. Her skirt and waist seemed to have been hitched together by fingers that had had no spare instant for primping purposes. The waist hinted of having gone from the washtub to the back of its owner without having experienced a flatiron's redeeming touch. Both skirt and waist sagged here and tightened there, in defiance of current fashion's decree. As for the woman's face, it was permitted to appear as sallow as it chose, and the hatless hair above it rebelled in stray strands.

Behind her the woman dragged a go-cart, designed in the factory for a single occupant, but on this occasion pressed into carrying two passengers, one seated so far along the handle as to impede anything like hasty locomotion. Acting as a rear guard, came three more youngsters.

"My laws, what's the matter with you kids back there?" complained the woman at the cart handle. "It's the last time I'm ever going to try to take you any place. Be still, now or I'll get the marshal after ya."

This last ultimatum was her best bet. The party continued its progress, for the austere marshal, blue-uniformed, was sitting in one of the hotel office chairs beside me.

"She's going to the movie, I suppose," the officer of the law remarked. "That bunch'll be quiet in there about two minutes. That's the first time I've seen Mrs. Mullen out anywhere in six months."

"What's on at the movie tonight?" asked one of the traveling men on the steps.

"One of them vampire films," replied the marshal. "It came in by express this afternoon."

For a few minutes the marshal sat in reverie. Finally he remarked as he turned toward me: "We used to have a sort of a vampire here in Prairie Junction. Her name was Etta Hurley. She was what you might call a depot vampire. You know, a mania for going down to the depot to watch the trains go through. Her idea of romance was waving at an engineer, or a conductor, or a fireman—fellows she didn't know or who didn't have any idea who she was. It was always a fleeting performance; trains never stopped here long.

"Of course," he continued, "most towns this size have got their depot hounds—folks who can't resist the glamour of the cinder-bedded railroad tracks, the puff and clang of an engine, the click of the telegraph instrument, the exchange of stares with the strangers in the car windows, the gamble on who may be getting off the train. To this fraternity the hiss of steam as old No. 2 slows down is a sound far sweeter than the notes of a Galli-Curci, and a whiff of smoke fresh from the stack is more fragrant than the breath of springtime blossoms.

"I have rather a weakness for hankering to be on hand when the train pulls in myself," admitted the marshal, "but I insist that I am interested merely because it is within the line of my duty. And years of observation have taught me that a throng at the station does not indicate that the whole town is really going away.

"Etta Hurley was a feminine member in good standing of this fraternity. She never missed a session. But there was this distinction about her—she had eyes for the train crew alone. Her smiling and waving acquaintance was a thing in which she took great pride. This smiling and waving acquaintanceship set her apart, she felt, from the general run of residents belonging to the burg in which she dwelt through no wish of her own. When the train had pulled out her smiles died on her lips, her handkerchief was snapped back in her handbag. For local consumption she assumed a bored expression. As she minced away on her high heels toward downtown she felt that she could hardly be expected to register interest in the prosaic and everyday—she who held communion with momentarily glimpsed gentlemen in blue coats and brass buttons who were of all towns and no town in particular.

"Preparatory to her great daily adventure Etta must have spent many moments looking back over her shoulder into the family mirror to make certain that things hung just right. She kept so far in advance of the styles that you never realized until a month or two later that what she had on wasn't really outlandish at all. She would have worn a cucumber on her hat if fashion had called for it. If a girl was supposed to wear furs in summer and go bare-throated in winter, she knew all about it. When the train was real late she used to pass the time in manicuring her finger nails absent-mindedly, or, just as if nobody was around, studying her makeup in the handbag mirror. Everything local and stationary seemed to annoy her—flies buzzing on the window pane, the cry of a fussy baby really waiting with its mother to go some place, the repartee of fellow townspeople.

"One day, after the train had come and gone, and the rather one-sided smiling and waving session had ended, and she had started mincing back towards downtown, the busman, just before cracking his whip for his own getaway, sallied, 'Well, Etta, did you get to see him?'

"She stopped short, every inch of her bristling dignity. She lifted her chin, her eyebrows lowered, her lip curled. 'O, you folks in this town make me tired,' she flared back. 'Just because a girl happens to know a bunch of fellows that don't live here, you think there's some mystery about her. I can't help it if I'm different, can I? Or because I'm attractive? If outsiders take to me, there's nothing to stop 'em, is there? You folks around here make me tired."

"And Etta continued as our depot vampire. She became a part of the setting, like the name of the town lettered on the sign at the edge of the low roof, like the baggageman with the metal plate across the front of his cap, like the weeds that crept between the platform planks, like the beer kegs waiting to be shipped back to wet territory, like the sidetracked box car that seemed to have forgotten where it was going, like the water tank beneath which the I. W. W.'s of the period held rendezvous.

"Etta was not a novel reading girl. Her own imagination pictured enough—fancies concerning the wonderful towns that the train had left and the real burgs to which it was on its way. It gave Etta a satisfaction to feel that the town in which she was being held by circumstances of birth for a short time longer, perhaps, was but a snap of the fingers to the train and its crew. The railroad was the one thing connected with the town that was not of the town, and it was therefore a symbol for worship.

"A conductor swinging from the steps of a coach to help on passengers, an engineer leaning from a cab window, a fireman pausing at his task of shoveling coal, a brakeman signaling with his arms to 'go ahead,' a newsboy deigning to vend a paper from the coach platform—all these furnished thrills for Etta.

"There was a broad-brimmed hat that she used to wear that completely concealed the upper part of her face. Seated in one of the depot's worn benches, she was by means of the hat enabled to maintain seclusion and reserve, so far as mere natives were concerned. Natives saw but the cold, set expression of her lips. It was when some one acting as scout on the depot platform detected a moving speck on the horizon that Etta arose—as though a calm partner in some secret understanding with the unusual—and strode with studied poise to her point of vantage, near a certain telegraph pole. You could be sure that everything she wore hung just right and that the shine had been banished from her nose. Standing there, balanced on her high heels——"

The marshal was interrupted by the return of the go-cart doing double duty and the rear guard. All five were in rebellion and bursting with unrest.

"Be still, now, or the marshal will get ya," warned the woman, who had hold of the cart handle. And then, just as she passed: "My laws, do you suppose I had a chance to stay and see anything with this bunch on my hands? Haven't any idea how the thing finished. Only saw part of the first reel. Jenny kept kicking the seat in front of her, and Clara wanted a drink of water, and Horace was scared when they turned off the lights, and Benny squalled because Esther took his peanuts. No chance getting out with this bunch. Just let me get home with 'em again, that's all I ask. My laws!"

"Be quiet, now," her voice threatened just before the aggregation turned the corner. "Walk along here, now, all of you. My laws!"

"You were speaking of the depot vampire," I reminded the marshal.

"A thing of the past now," he replied. "The brakeman she married turned out to be a widower with five children. He was only working as an 'extra,' and he lost his job two weeks after the wedding. That was Etta just went by."

been licked, and that settles him.

"Battling Pete"

Nobody Ever Accused Him of Quitting. He Was Always There at the End of His Fights.

If you know what makes a comedian desire to play "Hamlet" and a musical comedy star pine to appear as Lucia or Marguerite, you will know what power persuaded Peter Hansen that he was cut out for a fighting man.

Peter had neither the temperament nor the physical qualifications of a pugilist, and I state, here and now, fearing no contradiction, that on every occasion save one he was absolutely the worst fighter that ever stepped through the ropes. Nature designed Peter for more sedentary pursuits, but Peter would not have it so, and under the picturesque nom de guerre of "Battling Pete" he blazed along the horizon of the Queensberry firmament and there endured for a short time. Later Peter appeared in the very zenith of the heavens, flared for an instant, and then winked out into darkness.

We are now speaking of Peter's career as a "pork and bean" preliminary man. If Peter did nothing else, he contributed his mite toward the gayety of the nations, and for that alone his name should be held in grateful remembrance. If one cannot make his audience applaud, the next best thing is to make it laugh, and Battling Pete was assuredly the laughing hit of his time.

In my official capacity as matchmaker for the Western Athletic club I have seen many fighters of all sorts, and I do not believe I boast when I say that I am considered a judge. I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that Peter Hansen had no more business in the ring than the traditional lamb in a Wyoming blizzard. And about as much of a chance.

There was only one thing in his favor—Peter was game. Many a clever fellow is able to hide his lack of courage by the skill with which he avoids punishment. Peter never avoided anything. He had but one system of blocking punches, and that was by interposing the portion of his anatomy at which the blow was aimed.

Peter might easily have established a world's record for knockdowns per round, and the night he fought "Slaughterhouse" Green Peter was down just eighteen times. In four rounds, mind you!

Now it is not such a wonderful thing to be knocked down eighteen times; it is getting up eighteen times which amounts to something. To be knocked flat requires no great amount of gameness; the difference between staying there and getting up again is the difference between the quitter and the game man.

Nobody ever accused Peter of quitting, for he was always there at the end of his fights, yet his preliminary record was an unbroken string of defeats.

It was no fault of mine that Peter's record was not embellished by the cabalistic "K by," which signifies a knockout. In my official capacity I saw to it that Peter drew none but rough, two handed fighters as opponents.

This was not because I had anything against Peter, but because I was drawing a salary to provide the best entertainment possible for the patrons of the club, and had I matched Peter with thistledown boxers, his one talent would have been wasted, his one accomplishment taken from him. He could never have hit a scientific boxer even with a buggy whip, and the boxer could not have knocked him down. It was a matter of business all around.

Because he furnished amusement, I usually slated Peter for the opening bout on the program. He served to put every one in a good humor, and he was always there at the end of the fourth round, slightly battered about the head and somewhat mottled about the ribs, but otherwise serene and undamaged. He always grinned cheerfully at the ironical applause which never failed to waft him from the ring.

I was sitting in the office one morning, entertaining the usual delegation of lop eared, low browed gladiators, all of whom demanded several times what their professional services were worth, when the door opened to admit Peter.

Following his usual custom, he sat down in the corner and allowed the rush of business to subside.

A good thing about Peter was his patience. He never seemed to be in a hurry. When the last of the visitors swaggered away, he came forward, cap in hand.

"I can get McCarty for you for next Friday night," I said. "Do you want him?"

Peter shook his head.

"You've met a lot tougher fellows than McCarty." I believed that it was the encouragement he needed.

"Mr. Carey," said Peter, "I just came up here to tell you that I'm going to retire."

"To what?"

"Retire," repeated Peter. "Quit; blow the game; you know that's what they all say: retire."

"But why?" I asked. "Haven't I always given you nice, easy matches?"

"Sure, Mr. Carey," he said. "The matches have been all right. I ain't kicking. But a fellow offered me a job and I'm going to take it. It's driving a laundry wagon. Twelve bucks a week. That's better than being beat up for ten a throw."

I did not see Peter again for eight months. He dropped out of sight as completely as if he had loaded himself into his laundry wagon and driven it into oblivion. We never saw him at the office; he never presented himself at the club entrance on fight nights. Evidently he had put his past behind him and was driving his laundry wagon toward better things.

In the meantime we were busy developing a champion. An awkward, rawboned recruit suddenly developed a devasting right hand punch and mowed his way through the pork and beaners with a startling succession of one round knockouts.

His name was Isidore Goldstein, which was probably the reason he wished to be known to ring followers as "One Round Ryan." He was immediately christened the "Fighting Pawnbroker," and he put many a budding reputation in pawn, rising by leaps and bounds until he reached red type on the posters and star bouts on the program.

He passed through the local welterweight crop like a pestilence, and we were forced to import high priced talent.

It was good business to let Isidore fight as often as possible, for he was a remarkable drawing card, but the good welters refused to have anything to do with him.

"I tell you what we shall do," said brother Abey. "We shall agree to stop three local men in one night, only you should put it in there one soft one, anyhow."

I planned the triple bout. Brother Abey, insisting that Isidore was the "card," demanded 40 per cent of the gross, and we had to give it to him. In order that Isidore should not loaf upon the job, we asked him to sign a contract to pay any of the men who should stay four rounds the sum of $100.

Brother Abey protested long and loud, but when we pointed out to him that none of Isidore's oponents had ever lasted to the finish of the second round, he agreed to sign. To whom Isidore should defeat inside the limit, the club was to give $25 apiece. Then, more as a joke than anything else, Billy Grayson, the club manager, announced that he would pay $500 to any one of the three men who might "stop" the talented Isidore.

I finally managed to secure two candidates, "Wolf" Benson and "Shadow" Belcher. Benson was a rugged fighter of some local reputation and Belcher was a fast, showy boxer with a "cream puff" left hand. Both believed they stood a chance of forcing Isidore to disgorge the $100.

There remained the third man, and fate sent him to me just as I was locking my desk for the afternoon. The door opened and closed softly, and there was Peter, smiling down at me with the same old damaged smile.

"Well! Well!" I said. "How's the laundry business, Peter?"

"O, fair," said Peter, without enthusiasm. "Mr. Carey, what's the chances to get on next Friday night?"

I shook my head.

"The preliminary card is all filled," I said. "What's the matter with the laundry business? Lose your job?"

Peter ignored the question.

"I don't want to fight no preliminary," he said. "I want to get in on that three man thing with your Pawnbroker."

"You don't want to get your head knocked off for $25, do you?" I inquired.

"You ain't seen nobody knock my head off yet, have you?" said Peter reproachfully. "I still got it and I met all the tough guys you could dig up for me."

I laughed. Peter twisted his cap in his hands just as he used to do when he asked for a "loan" of $2 on the day before a fight.

"I figure that I've got a good chance to stay four rounds," he said.

"A good chance to be killed!" I retorted. "You'd better stick to your laundry wagon, Peter. You don't know what a tough fellow this is."

Peter stood perfectly still for several seconds. Then he placed one hand on the desk, and leaning over began to talk in low hurried tones.

"Mr. Carey, I ain't caring how good this fellow is or how tough he is. I'd fight him if he was the champion. It's this way: I'm up against it and I've got to have some money. There's a girl that I met out at the laundry—the best kid you ever saw in your life. I got awfully stuck on her, and we were figuring on going to keeping house—getting married, you know."

A slight blush swept over his battered features and tipped his magnificent cauliflower ear with crimson. He hurried on:

"She ain't got no folks nor any home—just a furnished room. Last week she got her hand caught in the mangle and she's out at the hospital now in pretty bad shape. I could see where it was up to me, and I had a little money saved up for—for furniture and things. I paid her expenses at the hospital and I got her a good doctor, but it took every bean I could dig up. They had an operation to save her hand, and operations cost like hell. I tell you, Mr. Carey, I'm up against it, and I'd go after any man in the world if there was a chance to get a hundred dollars. I'd fight a buzz saw right now for that much money!"

Peter stopped suddenly and gulped once or twice. It was the longest speech he had ever made in his life.

After Peter had disappeared we remembered that he had said nothing about the $500, or the $25 to a loser. It was plain that Peter had but one idea—namely: to hear the bell ring at the end of the fourth round.

That night the preliminary men fought before a packed house. There was a terrific roar of applause when late in the evening the Fighting Pawnbroker clambered through the ropes followed by a whole platoon of advisers, seconds, towel swingers, and bottle holders, who brought along enough supplies to last for a week.

Soon afterward Shadow Belcher appeared, looking pale and rather nervous. The men had drawn for positions and Peter was to appear last.

Belcher ran for two minutes of the second round, and then Isidore, desperate because of his hundred, literally herded the Shadow into a corner, battered down his guard, and sent him headfirst through the ropes with a solid thump on the jaw. Exit Mr. Belcher.

The Wolf came next, a shaggy, hairy boy with a square, fighting jaw. Isidore took his full ten minutes' rest, as provided for by the articles, and estimated the house while he was doing it.

The Wolf was also out for some of Isidore's money, his method being a simple one. No sooner had he reached the middle of the ring than he shot out his left hand and followed it into a clinch, pinning Isidore's arms as best he could. Then he held on as long as possible. Isidore flailed away with both hands, but the Wolf covered his stomach with his elbows and humped his back like a camel.

Toward the end of the third round, Isidore began to puff as if tired. Benson was still jabbing and clinching. With twenty seconds to go, the Wolf, who knew that the time was short, tried a right hook as he stepped into the usual hugging match. Isidore met him with a straight jolt to the pit of the stomach, and the clinging arms fell away as the Wolf wilted under the blow. Quick as a flash over went Isidore's justly celebrated right cross, and down went the Wolf as if struck by lightning.

A shout went up from the gallery and spread all over the house, and there was Peter, marching down the aisle, clad in the same old faded green trunks and the same worn old fighting shoes.

Peter sat in his corner and grinned at old ringside friends as the new gloves were being adjusted. The under dog always has the sympathy of the audience, and in this case, thanks to the gentlemen of the press, Peter appeared as a battered knight, fighting for his lady. I did not realize how generally the story was known until an usher leaned over my shoulder.

"Say!" he exclaimed. "What do you think those sports back in the boxes are doing? They're making up a purse for Pete. I just saw one fellow cough up a twenty-dollar note, and Haynes has got a derby hat about half full of money. Wouldn't that kill you? Pretty soft, Pete, eh? He ought to split it with the press agent for starting that story about his girl. It's a cinch Pete never spoke to a skirt in his life."

I looked behind me toward the boxes where our weighty patrons were located. Eddie Haynes, a well known young man about town and patron of all the liberal arts, was going from box to box with a hat in his hands, and contributions were pouring in freely. Red blood and big hearts go well together.

There was a final commotion in the ring, and the men came to the center for the referee's instructions which they knew by heart and backward. Naturally the seconds, rubbers, towel swingers, and bottle holders crowded in, too, listening breathlessly as if to a state secret and trying to look as important as possible, in this, their brief tenure of the limelight.

The fighters walked back to their respective angles of the ring, the handlers scattered like quail, scuttling under the ropes. Abey patted Isidore on the back the gong clanged and the fight began.

Peter walked steadily out of his corner, his left shoulder hunched high up over his ear. For the first time in his life he was adopting a protective measure; he wished to preserve his jaw from Isidore's pulverizing right cross.

The Fighting Pawnbroker wasted no time on Peter. He was itching to set about the counting of his share of the gate receipts, and Peter was nothing more than an annoying incident who was delaying Isidore's game temporarily.

Peter sruck out his left glove cautiously and over came Isidore's money getter. Peter bobbed his head and the glove struck him high up over the ear, but with such force that Peter went sprawling on all fours. He started to scramble to his feet instantly, thought better of it, and dropped back on one knee to take the count of nine. Isidore walked away, sneering.

Up came Peter, hunching his shoulder as before, Isidore walked in deliberately, feinted a few times, and, swinging high, brought his right fist down over the raised shoulder. Peter went to the floor with a thud, rolled over on his stomach, drew up his knee, and waited, crouching, while the referee counted nine. The grin had disappeared from his face and he shook his head sharply several times, as if to clear it.

Isidore was disgusted. He knew what had been behind that last punch, and for the life of him he could not understand why Peter was not on his back. What was this Swede made of, anyhow? Oh, well; next time.

But the next time he missed, being in a hurry, and Peter, squatting to let the glove whistle over his head, plumped his own right into the pit of Isidore's stomach. It was an awkward blow, awkwardly delivered, but it fetched a loud grunt from Isidore and a volley of cheers from the house. Isidore clinched willingly for the first time that night.

At last the Fighting Pawnbroker pulled out of the clinch, steadied himself for a second, and rushed in, swinging his right hand from his hip. Peter was as wide open as a barn door, and the flailing uppercut caught him fairly on the point of the chin. I reached for my overcoat. Men began to stand up and gather their belongings. Peter stiffened on his feet and then toppled sidewise to the canvas. Isidore took one look at him and started for his corner, tugging at his gloves.

"Stop it! Stop it!" cried several voices which were immediately drowned in a roar from the gallery. There was Peter on his hands and knees, shaking his head as before, dazed and badly jarred, but otherwise perfectly calm, watching the referee's face. He was up at the count of nine, and I was amazed to see that his knees were steady under him.

The referee was a humane man. He waved

The Fortieth Door

By Mary Hastings Bradley

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Ryder, a young American, is doing some excavating in Egypt, and is induced by Jinny Jeffries, a pretty American tourist he has known, to attend a masked ball at her hotel. He obtains a Scotch costume from a friend, Andrew McLean, an attaché of the English government, and at McLean's he hears the story of a French scholar who disappeared in the desert fifteen years before. The man was reported dead, and a wife and baby girl were left; now the inheritance of an estate make it suddenly important to hunt up the child. But all trace is gone. McLean shows Ryder a miniature portrait of the young Frenchman, very curiously mounted. At the ball, Ryder is fascinated by a mysterious young girl in a Mohammedan costume who will give no hint of her identity. He follows, as she slips away, and finds she is the daughter of Tewfick Pasha, a Turkish official in the neighboring palace. The terrible ennui of her secluded life has led the girl to this escapade.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

PARTING IN THE GARDEN.

"WHAT about your mother?" he asked her, "Is she——?"

"She is dead," the girl told him, with a drop in her voice.

And after a long moment of silence, "When I was so little—but I remember her, O indeed, I do. She was French, monsieur."

"O! And so you——"

"I am French-Turk," she whispered back. "That is very often so—in the harems of Cairo. She was so lovely," said the girl wistfully. "My father must have loved her very much; he never brought another wife here. Always I lived alone with my old nurse and the governesses."

"You had—lessons?"

"O, nothing but lessons—all of that world which was shut away so soon. French and English and music and the philosophy—O, we Turks are what you call blue stockings, monsieur, shut away with our books and our dreams. And our memories—we are so young and already the real world is a memory. Sometimes," she said, with a tremor of suppressed passion in her still little tones, "I could wish that I had died when I was very young and so happy when my father took me traveling in Europe. I played games on the decks of the ships. I had my tea with the English children. I went down into the hold to play with their dogs."

She broke off, between a laugh and a sigh. "Dogs are forbidden to Moslems—but of course, you know, if you have been here two years. And emancipated as we may be, there is no changing the customs. We must live as our grandmothers lived, though we are not as our grandmothers are."

"With a French mother, you must be very far from what some of your grandmothers were!"

"My poor French mother!" whimsically the girl sighed. "Must I blame it on her—the spirit that took me to the ball? Tomorrow this will be a dream to me. I shall not believe in my shamelessness. And you, too, must forget——"

"Forget?" said Ryder under his breath.

"Forget—and go. Positively you must go now, monsieur. It is very dangerous here."

"It is." There was a light dancing in his hazel eyes. "It is more dangerous every moment——"

"But I mean——" her confusion betrayed itself.

"But I mean—that you are magic—black magic," he murmured, bending over the black domino.

The crescent moon had found its way through a filigree of boughs. Faintly its exploring ray lighted the contour of that shrouded head, touched the lovely curves of her arched brows and the tender pallor of the skin about those great wells of dark eyes. From his own eyes a flame seemed to pass into hers. Breathlessly they gazed at each other like dim shadows in a garden of still enchantment.

And then, as from a palpable clasp, she tried to slip away. "Truly, I must go! It is so late——"

Ryder's heart was pounding within him. He did not recognize this state of affairs; it was utterly unrelated to anything that had gone before in his merry, humorous, rather clear sighted, and very young life. He felt dazed and wondering at himself, and irresponsible, and appalled; but deeper than all else, he felt eager and exultant and strangely, furtively determined about something that he was not owning to himself, something that leaped off his lips in the low murmur to her, "but tomorrow night—I shall see you again——"

She caught her breath. "O, never again! Tonight has no tomorrow——"

"Outside this gate," he persisted, "I shall wait—and other nights after that. For I must know—if you are safe."

"See, I am very safe now. For if I were missed there would be running and confusion."

He only drew a little closer to her. "Tomorrow night—or another—I shall be waiting."

She moved her head in denial.

"Neither tomorrow nor another night."

He only drew a little closer to her. "Tomorrow night—or another—I shall come to this door——"

"It must not open to you. It is a forbidden door—forbidden as that fortieth door in the old story. There are thirty and nine doors in your life, monsieur, that you may open, but this is the forbidden——"

"I shall be waiting," he insisted. "Tomorrow night, or another——"

She moved her head in denial.

Again their eyes met. He bent over her. He knew a gleam of sharpest wonder at himself as his arms went swiftly round that shrouding drapery, and then all duality of consciousness was blotted out in the rush of his young madness. For within that drapery was the soft, human sweetness of her; his arms tightened, his face bent close, and through the sheer gauze of her veil his lips pressed her lips.

Some one was coming down the walk. Footsteps crunched the gravel.

Like a wraith the girl was out of his arms. In anger or alarm, his whirling senses could not know, although it was their passionate concern. But his last gleam of prudence got him through the gate he heard her locking after him.

And then, for her sake, he fled.

Nearer sounded the footsteps on the graveled walk, and in frightened haste the girl drew out the key from the gate and slipped away into the shrubbery, grateful for the blotting shadows. At the foot of a rose bush she crouched to thrust the key into a hole in the loose earth, covering the top and drawing the low branches over it.

"Aimée," came a guarded call, "Aimée!"

Still stooping, she tried to steal through the bushes, but the thorns held her and she stood up, pulling at her robes.

"Yes, Miriam?" she said faintly, and desperately freeing herself, she hurried forward towards the dark, bulky figure of her old nurse, emerging now into the moonlight.

"Alhamdolillah—Glory to God!" ejaculated the old woman, but cautiously under her breath. "Come quickly—he is here—thy father! And thou in the garden, at this hour! But come," and urgently she gripped the girl's wrist as if afraid that she would vanish again into the shadows of the shrubbery.

Aimée felt her knees quake under her. "My father!" she murmured, and her voice died in her throat.

Had he discovered? Had some one seen her slip out? Or recognized her at the ball?

The panic stricken conjectures surged through her in dismaying confusion. She tried to beat down her fear, to think quickly, to rally her force, but her swimming senses were still invaded with the surprise of those last moments at the gate, her heart still beating with the touch of Ryder's arms about her, of that long, deep look, that kiss—beyond all else, that kiss!

Little rivers of fire were running through her veins. Shame and proud anger set up their swift reactions. O, what wings of wild, incredible folly had brought her to this! To be kissed like—like a dancing girl—by a man, an unknown, and American!

How could he, how could he! After all his kindness—to hold her so lightly. And yet there had been no lightness in his eyes, those eager, shining young eyes, so gravely concerned.

But she could not stop to think of this thing. Her father was waiting.

"He came in like a fury," the old nurse was panting, as they scurried up the walk together, "and asked for you—and your room empty, your bed not touched! O, Allah's ruth upon me, I went trotting through the house, mad with fear. Up to the roofs, then down to the garden, sending him word that you were dressing, that he should not know the only child of his house was a shameless one, devoid of sense."

"But there is no harm in a garden," breathed the girl, her face hot with shame. "Tonight was so hot——"

"Is there no breeze upon the roof?"

"But the roses——"

"Can roses not be brought you? Have you no maids to attend you?"

"I am tired of being attended. Can I never be alone——"

"Alone in the garden! A pretty talk! Eh, I will tell thy father, I will have a stop put to this—hush, would you have him hear?" she admonished, in a sudden whisper, as they opened the little door at the foot of the dark well of spiral steps.

Like conspirators they fled up the staircase, and then with fumbling haste the old nurse dragged off the girl's mantle and veil, muttering at the pins that secured it. She shook out the pale, flowered, chiffon of her rumpled frock and gathered back a strand of her dark, disordered hair.

"Say that you were on the roofs," she besought her.

For a moment the girl put the warm rose of her cheek against the old woman's dark, wrinkled one.

"But you are good, Dadi," she said softly, using the Turkish word for familiar old servants.

With a sound of mingled vexation and affection Miriam pushed her ahead of her into the drawing room.

It was a long, dark room, on whose soft, buff carpet the little gilt chairs and sofas were set about with the empty expectancy of a stage scene in a French salon. French were the shirred, silk shades upon the electric lamps, French the music upon the chic rosewood piano.

And then, as if some careless property man had overlooked them in changing the act, two window balconies of closely carved old wood, solidly screening mashrubieyeh, jutted out from one cream tinted wall, and above a gilded sofa, upholstered in the delicate fabric of the Rue de la Paix, hung a green satin banner embroidered in silver with a phrase from the Koran.

Tewfick Pasha was at one side of the room, filling his match case. He was in evening dress, a ribbon of some order across a rather swelling shirt bosom, a red fez upon his dark head.

At his daughter's entrance he turned quickly, with so sharp a gleam from his full, somewhat protuberant black eyes that her guilty heart fairly turned over in her.

It made matters no more comforting to have Miriam packed from the room.

She would deny it all, she thought desperately. No, she would admit it, and implore his indulgence. She would admit nothing but the garden. She would admit the ball. She would never admit the young man.

With conscious eyes and flushing cheeks, woefully aware of dew drenched satin slippers and an upsettingly hammering heart, Aimée presented the young image of irresolute confusion.

To her surprise there was no outburst. Her father was suddenly gay and smiling, with a flow of pleasant phrases that invited her affection. In his good humor—and Tewfick Pasha liked always to be kept in good humor—he had touches of that boyish charm that had made him the enfant gâté of Paris and Vienna as well as Cairo and Constantinople. An enfant no more, in the robustly rotund forties. His cheerful self-indulgence demanded still of his environment that smiling acquiescence that kept life soft and comfortable.

And now it suddenly struck Aimée, through her tense alarm, that his smile was not a spontaneous smile, but was silently, uneasily asking his daughter not to make something too unpleasant for him, that something that had brought him here, at an unprecedented midnight, that had kept him waiting until she, supposedly, should rise and dress.

If it were not then a knowledge of her escapade——?

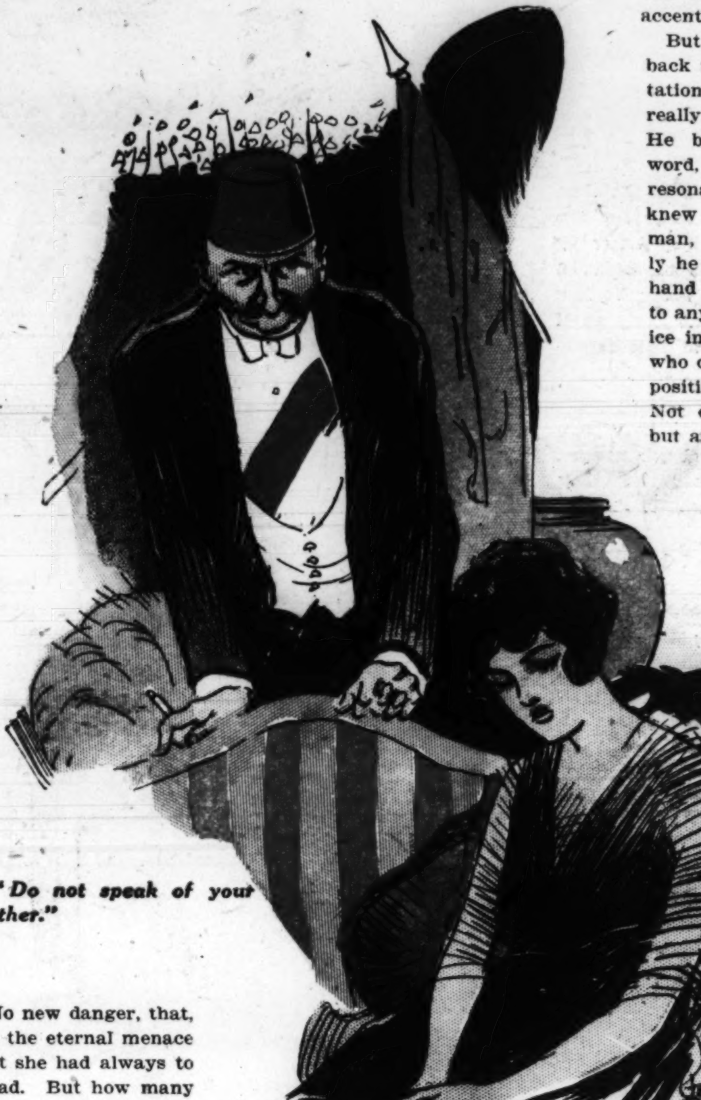
The relief from that fear made everything else bearable. She was even able to entertain, with a certain welcome, the alternative alarm that he had decided to marry again—that nightmare from whose realization the unknown gods (or more truly, the unknown goddesses of the Cairene demimonde!) had assisted to save her.

There was a furtive excitement about him that fanned the supposition.

Then, quite suddenly, the illuminating lightning cut the clouds.

"My dear child, I have news, really important news for you. If I have not been discussing your future," said Tewfick Pacha, staring with stern nonchalance ahead and determinedly unaware of her instant stiffening of attention, "I have by no means been neglectful of it. Today—indeed, tonight—there has been a consummation of my plans. It is not to every daughter that a father may hurry with such an announcement."

Her first feeling was a merciful relief. He knew nothing then of the ball! She could breathe again. It was her marriage that had brought him.



"Do not speak of your mother."

No new danger, that, but the eternal menace that she had always to dread. But how many times had he promised that she should have no unknown husband, imposed by tradition! How many times had she indulged dreams of Europe, of bright, free romance!

And now he was off on some tangent from which it would need all her coaxing wit to divert him. With wide eyes painfully intent, her little, jeweled fingers very still in their locked grip in her lap, the color draining from her cheeks, she sat waiting for the revelation.

What was it all? Had he really decided upon something? Upon some one?

Tewfick Pasha appeared in no hurry to inform her. He wandered rather confusedly into a rambling speech about her age and her position and the responsibilities of life and his inabilities to prevent their reaching her, and about his very tender affection for her and his understanding of all those girlish reticences and reluctances which made innocent youth so exquisite, while silently his daughter hung her head and wondered what he would be saying if he knew that she had broken every canon of seclusion and convention, had talked and danced with a man.

His astonishment would be so horrific that she flinched even from the thought.

And if he knew, moreover, that this man had caught her and kissed her——!

She told herself that she was disgraced for life. She had a dreamy desire to close her eyes and lean back and dream on about that disgrace.

But she must listen to her father. He was talking now about the powers of wealth, not merely the nominal riches of his somewhat precarious political affiliations, but solid, sustaining, invested, and invulnerable wealth.

Unexpectedly Aimée laughed. "He must be very plain," she declared, her face brightening with mockery, "if you take so long to tell me his name!"

Not, she added to herself under her breath, that any name would weigh a feather's difference!

"On the contrary," and the pacha's eyes met hers frankly for the first time and he seemed delighted to indulge a laugh, "he has the reputation of good looks. He is much à la mode."

"Beautiful and golden—did you meet him just tonight, my father?" Aimée went on, in that light audacity which he had loved to indulge.

Now he smiled, but his glance went uneasily away from her.

"Not at all. This is a serious affair, you understand—the devil of a serious affair!" and for the first time she felt she heard the accents of his candor.

But again he was back to voluble protestation. This man was really an old—friend. He boggled over the word, then got it out resonantly. A man he knew well. Not a young man, perhaps—certainly he was not going to hand his only daughter to any boy, a mere novice in life!—but a man who could give her the position she deserved. Not only a rich man, but an influential one.

His name, he brought out at last, was Hamdi Bey. He was a general in the armies of the sultan.

It was a long moment before she could piece any shreds of recollection together.

Hamdi Bey. A general. Why, that was a man her father had disliked; more than once he had dropped resentful phrases of his airs, his arrogance, had recounted certain clashes with malicious joy.

And now he was planning—no, seriously announcing——

A general. He must be terribly old.

Not that it made any difference. Old or young, black or white, general or ghikar, would mean nothing in her life. She would have none of him, none of him. Never would she endure the humiliation of being handed over like a toy, an odalisque, a slave.

What had happened? She could only suppose that her father had been overcome by that wealth of the general's on which he had made her such a speech. Or perhaps his dislike of Hamdi had been founded on nothing but resentment of Hamdi's airs of superiority, and now that the bey was condescending to ask for her hand her father's flattered appeasement was rushing into genial acceptance. Anything might be possible to Tewfick Pasha's eternally youthful enthusiasms.

She told her frightened heart that she was not afraid. Her father would never really fail her. And she would never surrender to this degradation; for all her fright and all her flinching from defiance she divined in herself some hidden stuff of resistance, tenacious to endure, some strain of daring which had made her brave that wild escapade tonight.

Was it still the same night? Were the violins still playing, the people dancing in their fairyland of freedom? Was that young man in the Highland dress, that unknown American, was he back there dancing with some other girl?

What was it he had said? Tomorrow night, and another night, he would be there, in the lane. As if she would come! As if she would demean herself, after his rude affront, to steal again to the gate, like a gardener's daughter!

Her thoughts were so full of him. And now she had this new horror to face, this marriage to Hamdi Bey. Did her father dream she would not resist? It was against such a danger that she had long ago stolen a garden key, a key to the outer world in which she had neither a friend nor a piastre to save her.

"My dear father," she said entreatingly, "please do not tell me that you really mean—that you really think you would like to—that you would consider—this man."

He turned on her a sudden direct, confessing look.

"Aimée, I have arranged this matter."

He added heavily, "Tonight. That is what I came to tell you."

In the silence that settled upon them he finally ceased his effort to ignore her shocked dismay. He abandoned his airy pretense that the affair could possibly evoke her enthusiasm. He sucked at his cigaret like a rather sullen little boy.

"I have always indulged you, Aimée," he said at last, without looking around at her. "I hope you are not going to make me infernally sorry."

"I think you are m-making me inf-fernally sorry," said an unsteady little voice.

He looked about. His daughter was sitting very still upon the gilded sofa beneath the banner of Mahomet; as he regarded her two great tears formed in her dark eyes and ran slowly down her cheeks.

With a sound of impatience he jumped to his feet and began to pace up and down the room.

This, he pointed out heatedly to her, was what a man got who indulged his daughter. This is what came of French and English governesses and modern ideas. After all he had done—more than any other father! To sit and weep! Weep—at such a marriage! What did she expect of life? Was she not as other women? Did she never look ahead? Had she no pride, no ambition—no hopes? Did she wish never to marry, then, to become an old mees like her English companion?

"I am but 18," she said quiveringly. "O, my father, do not give me to this unknown——"

"Unknown—unknown! Do I not know him?"

"But you promised——"

Angrily he gestured with his cigaret. "Do I know what is good for you or do I not? Have I your interest at heart—tell me! Am I a savage, a dolt——"

"But you do not know what it is to be unhappy. I beg of you, my father. I should die with such a life before me, with such a man for my husband. I am too French, too like my mother——"

"Ah, your mother! Too French, are you? But what would you have in France?" he demanded with the bursting appearance of a man making every effort to restrain himself within reasonable bounds. "Would not your parents there arrange your marriage? You might see the fiancé," he caught the words out of her mouth, "but only for a time or two—after the arrangements—and what is that? What more would you know than what your father knows? Are you a thing to be exhibited—given to a man to gaze at and appraise? I tell you, no. You are my daughter. You bear my name. And when you marry you marry in the sanctity of the custom of your father—and you go to your husband's house as his mother went to his father."

Timidly she protested, "But my mother—and you——"

"Do not speak of your mother! If she were here she would counsel gratitude and obedience." He turned his back on her. "This is what comes," he muttered, "of this modernity, this education."

He pitched away his stub as if he were casting all that he hated away with it.

She had never seen him so angry. Helplessly she felt that his vanity and his word were engaged with the general more than she had dreamed. She felt a surge of panic at the immensity of the trouble before her.

"But, my father, if you love me——"

"No, my little one, if you love me!"

With sudden assumption of good humor over the angry red mottling his olive cheeks, he came and sat beside her, putting his arm about her silently shrinking figure.

"I am a weak fool to stay and drink a woman's tears, as the saying goes," he told her, "but this is what a man gets for being good natured. But, tears or not, I know what is best. Come, Aimée, have I not ever been fond of you?"

He patted her hand with his own plump one where bright rings were sparkling deep in the encroaching flesh. Aimée looked down with a sudden wild dislike. That soft, ingratiating hand, with its dimples and polished nails, which thought it could pat her so easily into submission.

It was nothing to him, she thought, chokingly, whether she was happy or unhappy. He had decided on the match—perhaps he had foreseen her protests and plunged into it, so as to be committed against her entreaties!—and he was not stopped by any thought of her feelings.

After all her hopes! After all he had promised!

But she told herself that she had never been secure. Beneath all her trust there had always been the slant fear, slipping through the shadows like a serpent. Some instinct for character, more precocious than her years, had whispered through her fond blindness, and initiated her into foreboding.

"Come now, my dear," she said heartily, "this is a surprise, of course, but after all you will find it is for the best—much for the best——"

His voice died away. After a long pause, "You may make the arrangements," she told him in a still, tenacious little voice, "but you cannot make me marry him. I will never put on the marriage dress. Never wear the diadem. Never stir one step within his house."

A complete silence succeeded this declaration. He got up violently from beside her. She did not dare look at him. He was going away, she thought. It would be the beginning of war. She did not know what he would do, but she knew that she would endure it.

And the gossip of the harems would be her protection. Her opposition, bruited through those feminine channels, would not be long in reaching Hamdi Bey. And no man could today be so callous of his pride or the world's opinion that he would be willing to receive such a revolting bride.

Did her father think of that, that poor, pale power of hers? He stood irresolute, as if meditating a last exhortation, and then suddenly turned on her the haggard face of a violent despair.

"Would you see me ruined?" he said passionately.

Sharply he glanced about the room, at the far, closed doors where it was not inconceivable that old Miriam was lurking, and strode over to her and began talking very jerkily and huskily over her bent head.

"I tell you that Hamdi is making this a condition—it is the price of silence, of those papers back. He came to me tonight. I knew that hound of Satan had been smelling about, but I could not imagine—as if, between gentlemen——"

At that, she lifted her stupefied head. Her father, with the face of a cornered fox! She caught her breath with the shock of it. Her lips parted, but only her mute eyes asked their startled questions.

Hurriedly, shamefacedly, with angry resentments and self-justifications, he was pouring a flood of broken phrases at her. She caught unintelligible references to narrow laws and the imbecile English, to impositions binding only upon the fools. And then the word hasheesh.

Sharply then the truth took its outlines. Her father had been smuggling in hasheesh. Hamdi Bey had discovered this, and Hamdi Bey, unless silenced, had threatened betrayal.

The danger was real. English laws were stringent. Vaguely the horros loomed—arrest, trial. Even if he escaped the law the scandal was ruin.

Small wonder that her father had come flying upon the wings of his danger and its deliverance, small wonder that his brow was wet and his lips dry and his eyes hard with terror.

Thrown to the winds now his pretense of affection for Hamdi Bey! He hated and feared him. The old fox had done this, he declared, to get a hold upon him, for always there had been bad blood.

And the bey had heard, of course, of the beauty of the pasha's daughter. Some cousin had babbled. And undoubtedly the rumor of that beauty—Tewfick Pasha received his inspiration upon the moment, but that was not gainsaying its truth—had determined the bey to find some vulnerable hold.

He was like that, a soft voiced, sardonic devil! And this accursed business of the hasheesh had served his ends. Tonight he had come with his proofs.

"So you see," muttered Tewfick Pasha, "what the devil of a serious business this is. And how any talk of—of unreadiness—if you were not amiable, for example, to his cousin when she calls upon you—might serve to anger him. And so——"

Significantly his glance met hers. Her eyes fell, stricken. The color flooded her trembling face. She quivered with confused pain, with shame for his shame, with terror and fright, with a hot, protective compassion that tore at her pride.

She struggled against her dismay, trying for reassuring little words that would not come. Her heart seemed beating thickly in her throat.

She never knew just what she said, what little broken words of pity, of understanding, of promise, she achieved. But her father suddenly dropped beside her, with an abandon reminiscent of the enfant gâté of his Paris days, and drew her hands to his lips, kissing their soft, quiescent palms. She drew one away and placed it upon his dark head from which the fez had tumbled.

For the moment she was sorry, as one is sorry for a hurt child. And her sorriness held her heart warm, in the glow of giving comfort.

She had need of that warmth. For a cold tide was rising in her, a tide of chill, irresistible foreboding.

For all the years of her life—for all the years.

The remaining hours of Jack Ryder's night might be divided into three periods. There was an interval of astounding exhilaration coupled with complete mental vacancy, during which a figure in a Scots costume might have been observed by the astonished Egyption moon striding obliviously along the silent road to the Nile, past sleeping camels and snoring dhurra merchants—a period during which his sole, distinguishable sensation was the memory of enchanting eyes, of a voice, low and lovely, of a slender figure in a muffling tcharchaf, of the touch of soft lips beneath a gauzy veil.

This period was succeeded by hours of utter incredulity, in which he lay wide-eyed on the sleeping porch of McLean's domicile, and stared into the white cloud of his fly net and questioned high heaven and himself.

Had he really done this? Had he actually caught and kissed this girl, this girl whose name he did not know, whose face he had never seen, of whom he knew nothing but that she was the daughter of a Turk and utterly forbidden by every canon of sanity and self-preservation?

In the name of wonder, what had possessed him? The night? The moon? The mystery of the unknown? If he had never really kissed her he might have convinced himself that he had never really wanted to. But having kissed het——

He looked upon himself as a stranger. A stranger of whom he would be remarkably wary, in the days and nights to come, but a stranger for whom he entertained a sort of secret, amazed respect. There had been an undeniable dash and daring to that stranger.

During the third period he slept.

When he awoke, late in the morning, and descended from a cold tub to a breakfast room from which McLean had long since departed, he brought yet another mood with him, a mood of dark, deep disgust, and a shamed inclination to dismiss these events very speedily from memory. For that shadowy and rather shady affair he had abandoned the merry and delightful Jinny Jeffries and got himself involved now in the duty of explanations and peacemaking.

What in the world was he going to say?

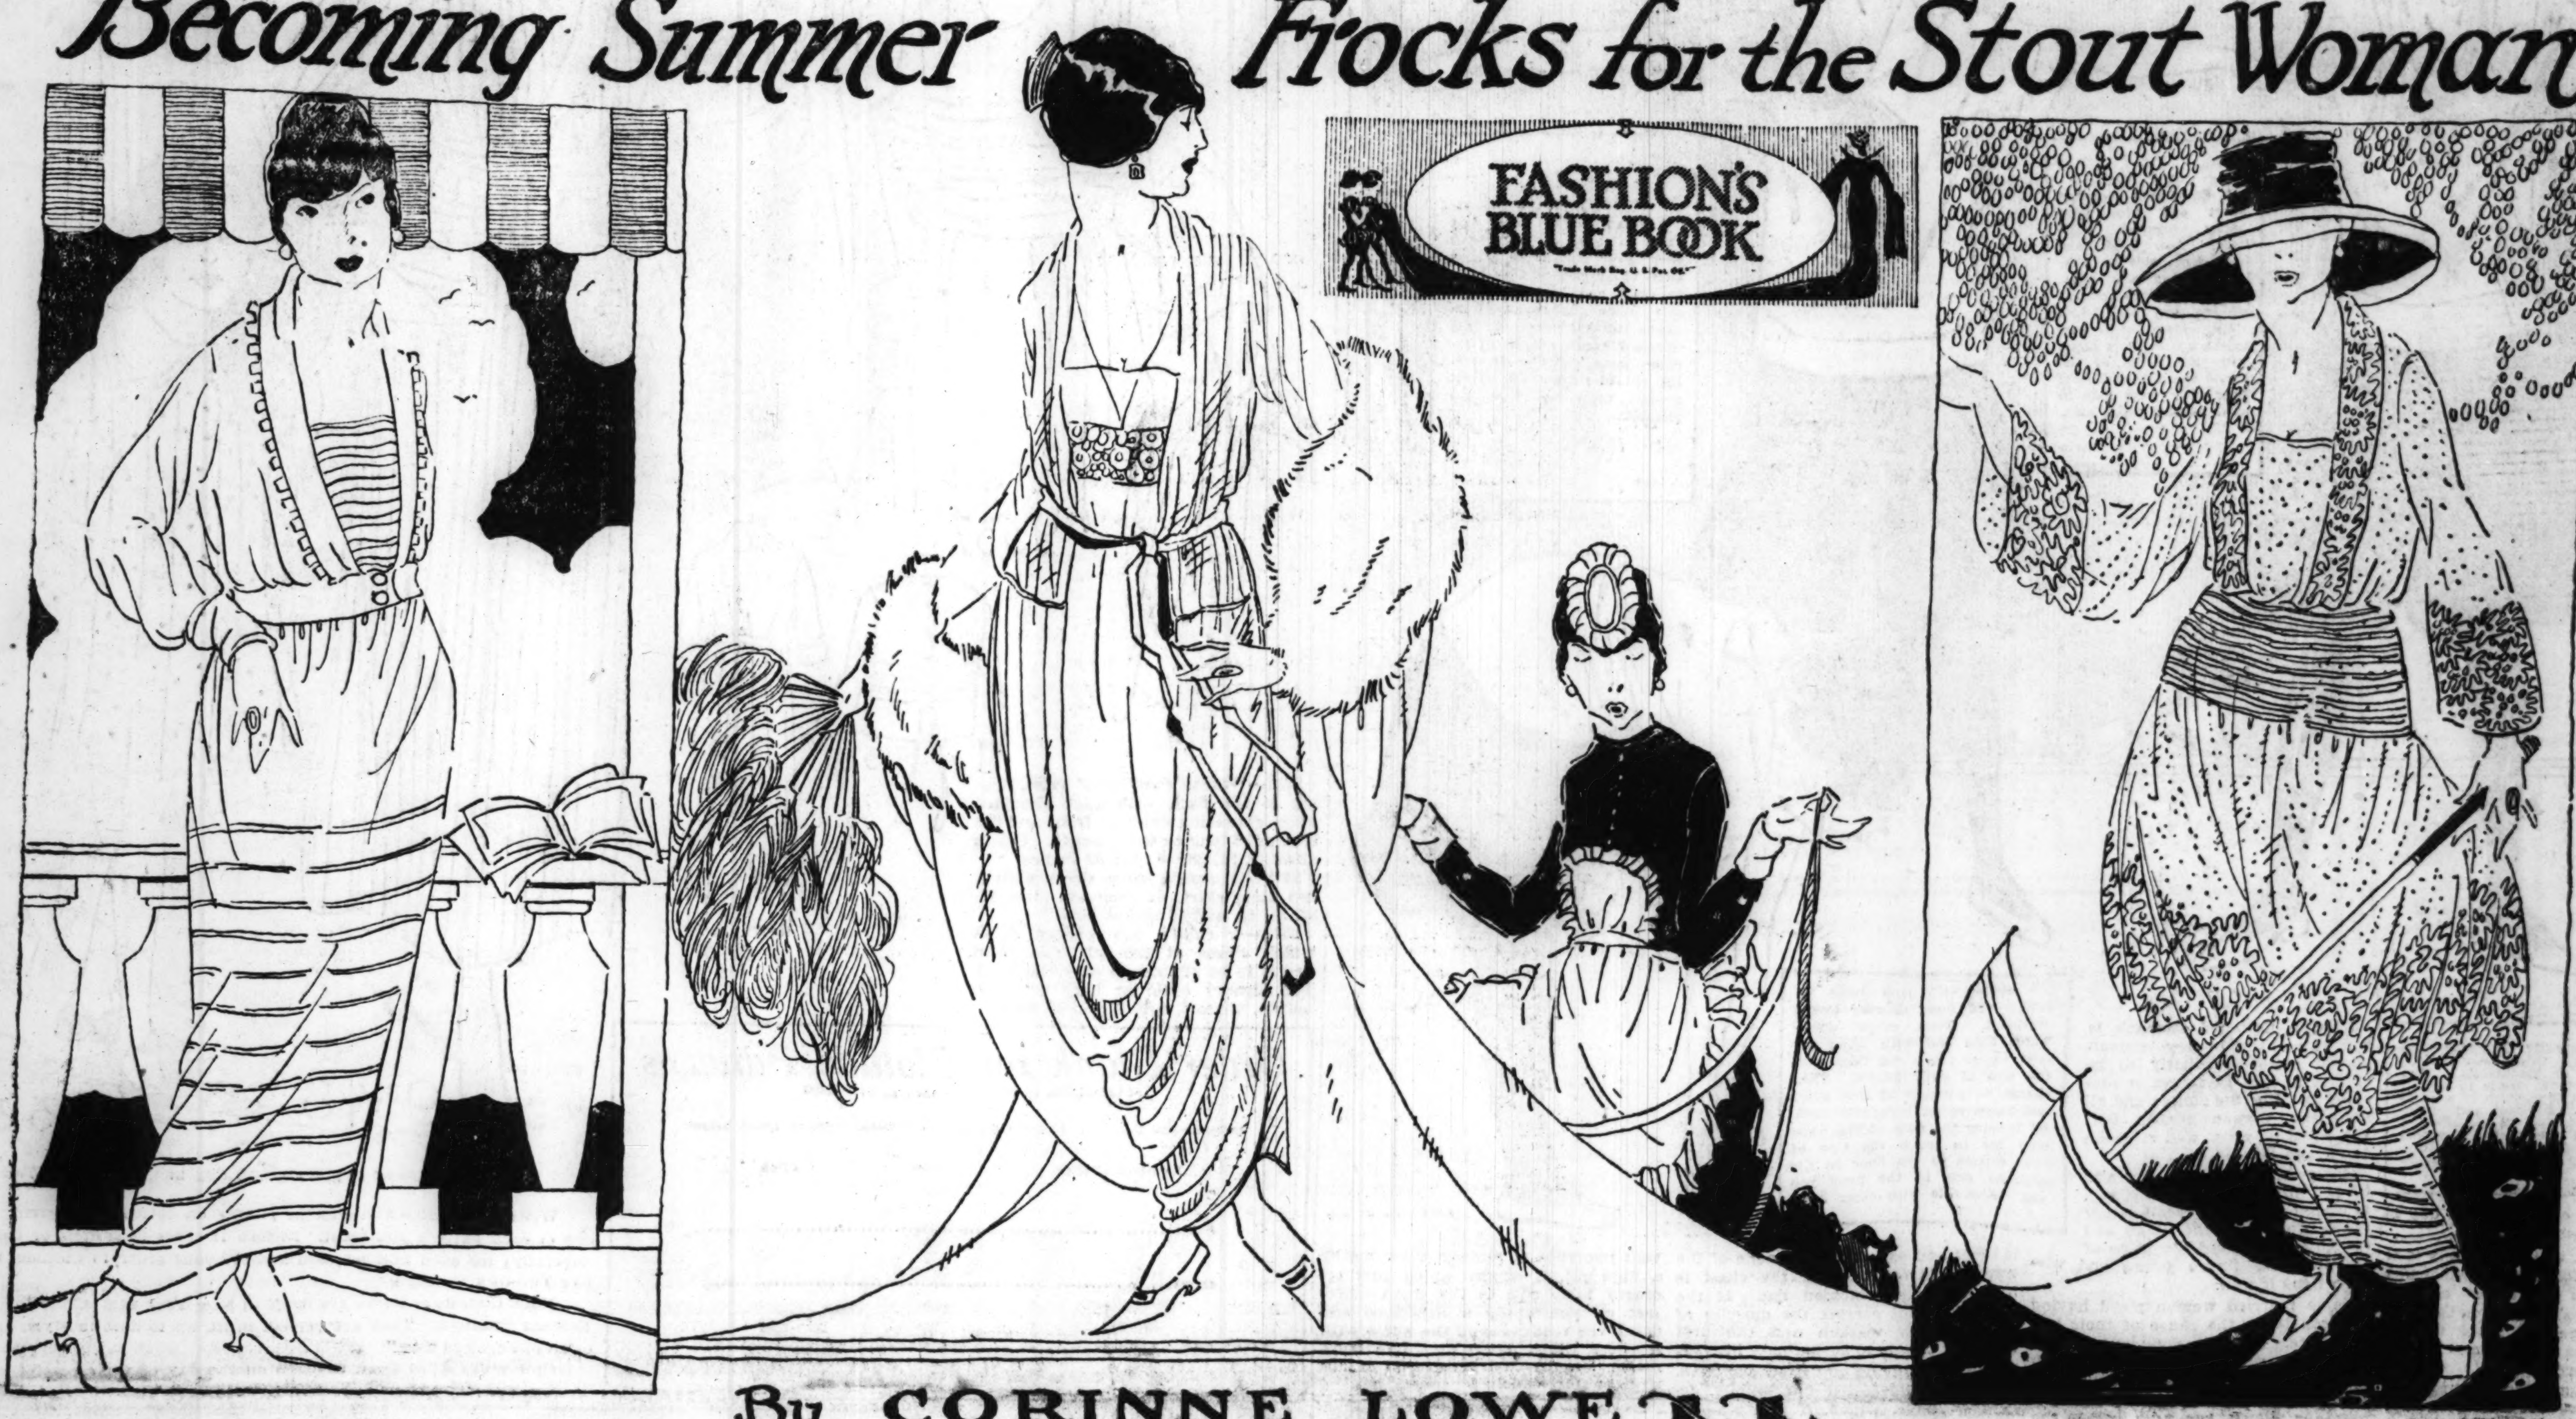
Becoming Summer Frocks for the Stout Woman



By CORINNE LOWE

> DRESS and grow thin is the problem solved by the white gabardine skirt at the upper left designed for the stout woman who is tall. In the center a frock of old blue crepe meteor and georgette gives the loose waist line and draped skirt so becoming to the ex-sylph. At the upper right a white net is finished with cording and white soutache braid. Below are found, respectively, a blue gabardine suit trimmed with black braid and a black silk sweater trimmed with white brushed wool.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—"Many are cold, but few clothen!" In these few but well chosen words we might describe the attitude of the plump lady. She has discarded every petticoat and every ruffle that might add to her appearance of stoutness. Her silk lingerie is lean as a proverb. And even her summery frocks look summery without the usual behavior of flounce and frill.

Dress and grow thin—here is indeed a problem and one that can never be solved by any haphazard leafing over of the shop dress racks. Every stout woman is, in fact, a separate problem and the clothes that might look well on the woman of 5 feet 10 who weighs over 200 would be a hopeless failure on her who is plumply 5 feet 3.

We are giving some suggestions for the vacation wardrobe of the woman who says, "O, I wouldn't dare get myself weighed any more." At the upper left is a white gabardine skirt which is tucked horizontally. Horizontally? It sounds profane to those brought up on the belief that every woman who weighs over 240 should stick to stripes. And for the short, stout woman stripes would undoubtedly be better. Yet in this skirt, designed for the tall woman who speaks of the time when she was thin, these horizontal stripes are very good. Coming as they do right below the hips, they do not emphasize the torso and they do take away from the height.

And, speaking of stripes, they have, after all, been such a persistent refuge for the bulky of build that we cannot help sympathizing with our friend who, looking down at her striped silk sports skirt, remarked peevishly, "The last time, the very last! I feel as if I were in the fat woman's official uniform."

At the upper right of the page is an afternoon frock, which, though charming for the nymph, is particularly adapted to what somebody calls the thwarted nymph. This is made of white net and is embroidered in a design of white soutache braid. Rows of cording finish the underskirt and are applied about the hips. Now, of course, this sharp definition of the hips is not good in every case. But when it is accompanied by the bagging of the blouse such as we see here the effect is much as the moyenage, always one of the most successful lines for those whose slenderness is a retrospect.

Of course, one of the fundamental principles of dressing the stout woman is to avoid a tight line about the waist. Only when we are 20 and weigh a hundred and twenty do we dare police this zone. In the top center we find this principle of the loose waist line applied in a charming frock of old blue crepe meteor which is combined with georgette of the same tone. The georgette extends to a little below the waist line, where it is confined with a narrow ribbon, old blue faced with old rose. A band of French flowers in pastel shades is used across the front of the bodice.

The draped skirt is perhaps the happiest dressmaking adventure that can befall the "she used to be thin" woman. Here in this skirt we find the draping accomplished in crepe meteor. It is not tight about the ankles. That is always a calamity for the heavy one and in the "ankle teasers" of last winter the average woman looked like a skewered fowl. Only the extremest slenderness could ever consider itself befriended by the hobble skirt.

This summer fabrics all seem to be crying to the stout one, "Here I am, damsel in distress!" The most fashionable of women, whether fat or thin, are all wearing chiffons, crepes, georgettes. The soft, clingy, slinky materials are the best thing that can happen to those who eat and grow fat. On the other hand, taffeta, and even the exuberant tulle, are acid tests for the figure. Indeed, the stout woman's summer dress program should be georgette or chiffon for afternoon and the same thing for evening.

At the right of the page down below is a suit of blue gabardine trimmed with black braid which has been carefully designed to make the stout woman, tall or short, "look as if she ain't." Balancing it on the left hand side, a black sweater—always the best choice for the subject of our text—is trimmed with white brushed wool. The sloping line of the shoulder tends to take away that square shouldered, almost gendarme-y look which so many matrons acquire with increasing avoirdupois.

And, speaking of sweaters, the latest thing which the society woman is doing is the sweater suit. This is often sleeveless and the long sleeved dress, frequently of some rough weave silk, matches in color the knit silk of the coat sweater. A waistcoat of a different kind of silk is sometimes added to taste.

We have spoken frequently this summer of the popularity of burnt orange. Nor does it need to be burnt or even cooked. Latest of fads is the orange velvet hat, sometimes combined with a sweater of the same tint and with some kind of white skirt. One finds it staged, however, among various costumes.

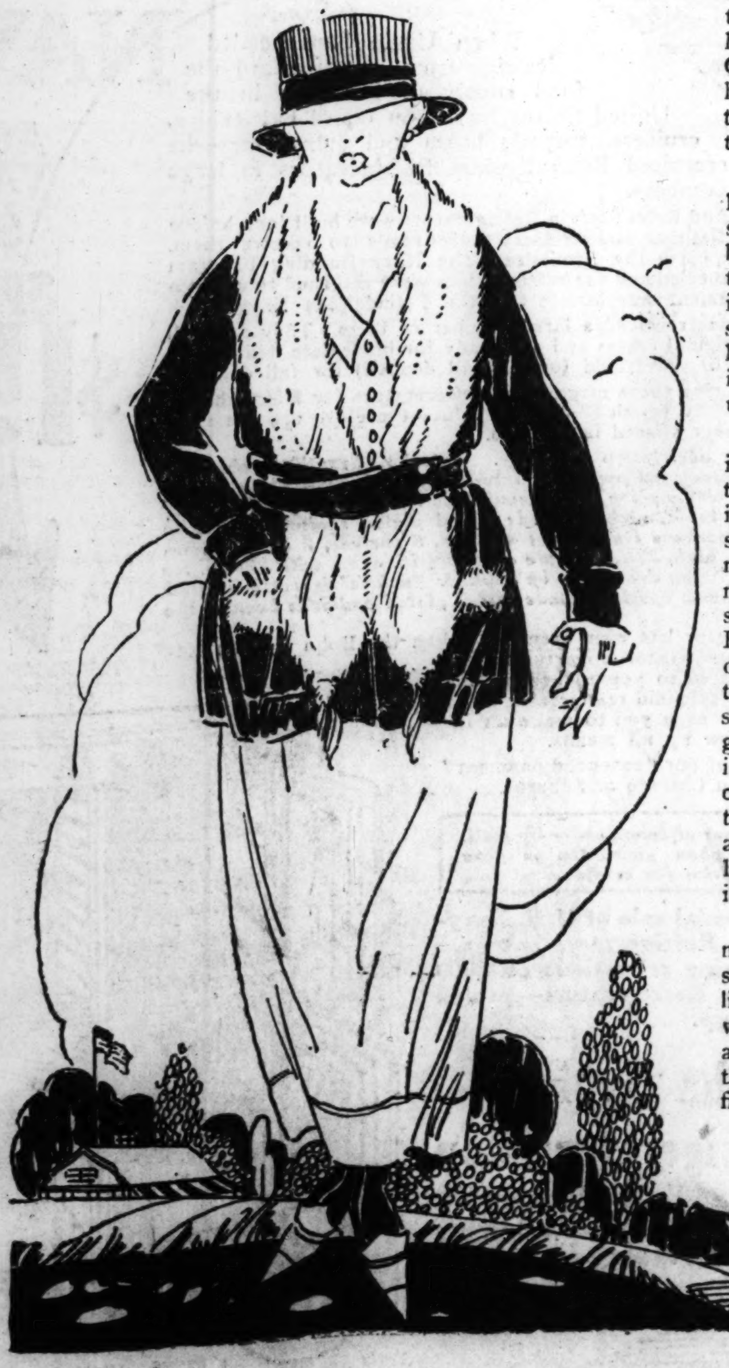
Pearls are undoubtedly the favored jewelry this summer. Even when we can't afford them they are favored. However, one sees many inventions in the way of jewelry. All sorts of funny beads, necklaces, and earrings of jade, fansticks, and parasol handles of some antique design—all these make up the intensely "personal touch" for which every well dressed woman nowadays seems to be aiming. And, speaking of jewelry, how piquant it does look to see long earrings combined with these bobbed locks which so many of the debutantes are now affecting!

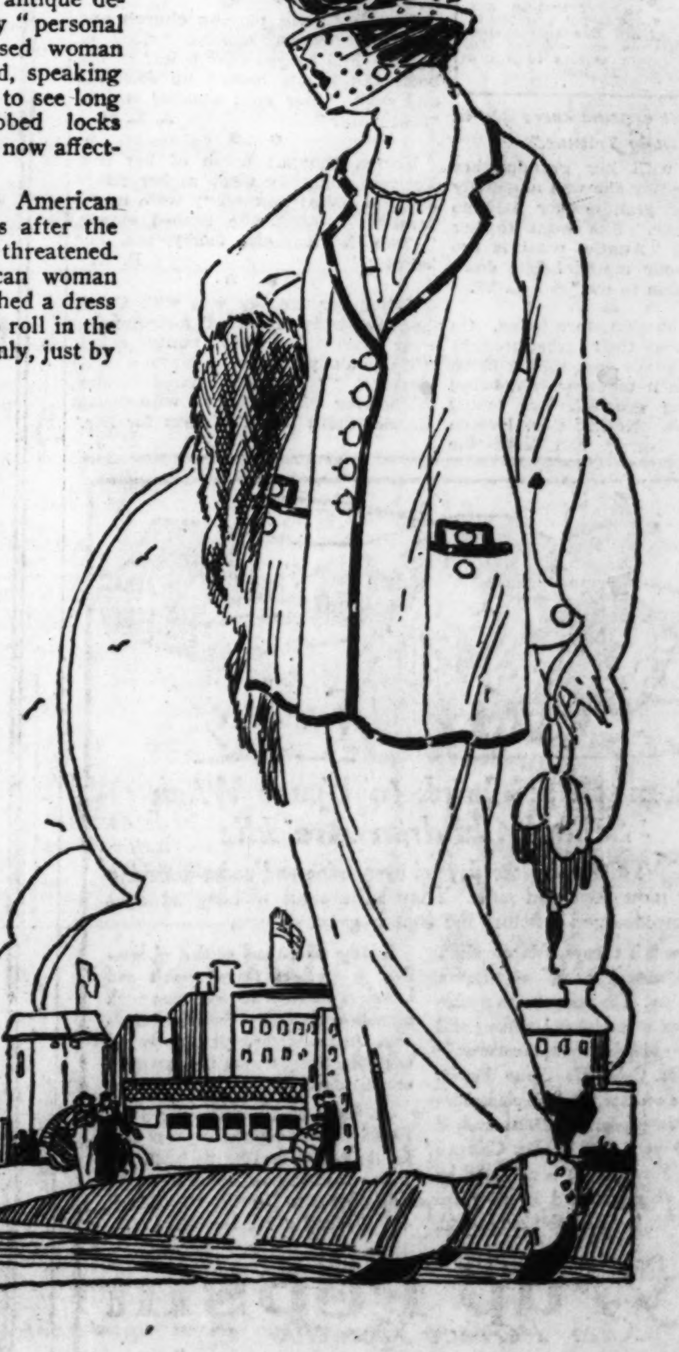
That long waist line which the American women have clung to for two years after the French have evacuated it is definitely threatened. Around the hips, where the American woman wears her waist line, Callot has launched a dress with a hoop, like the one you used to roll in the park when you were a little thing. Only, just by way of giving one a really slender appearance, this one is trimmed in a wreath of flowers.

Smart houses are insisting that it will be straight, with only a slight enlargement below the waist line. They are rather looking to the women of America to help them thwart the movement toward an ugly outline. They say that it is going to bring about a civil war in dressmaking establishments. Remember that the battle is not always to the strong, but to the steadfast and the brave, and that many a war is won by the support of those back of the battle line.

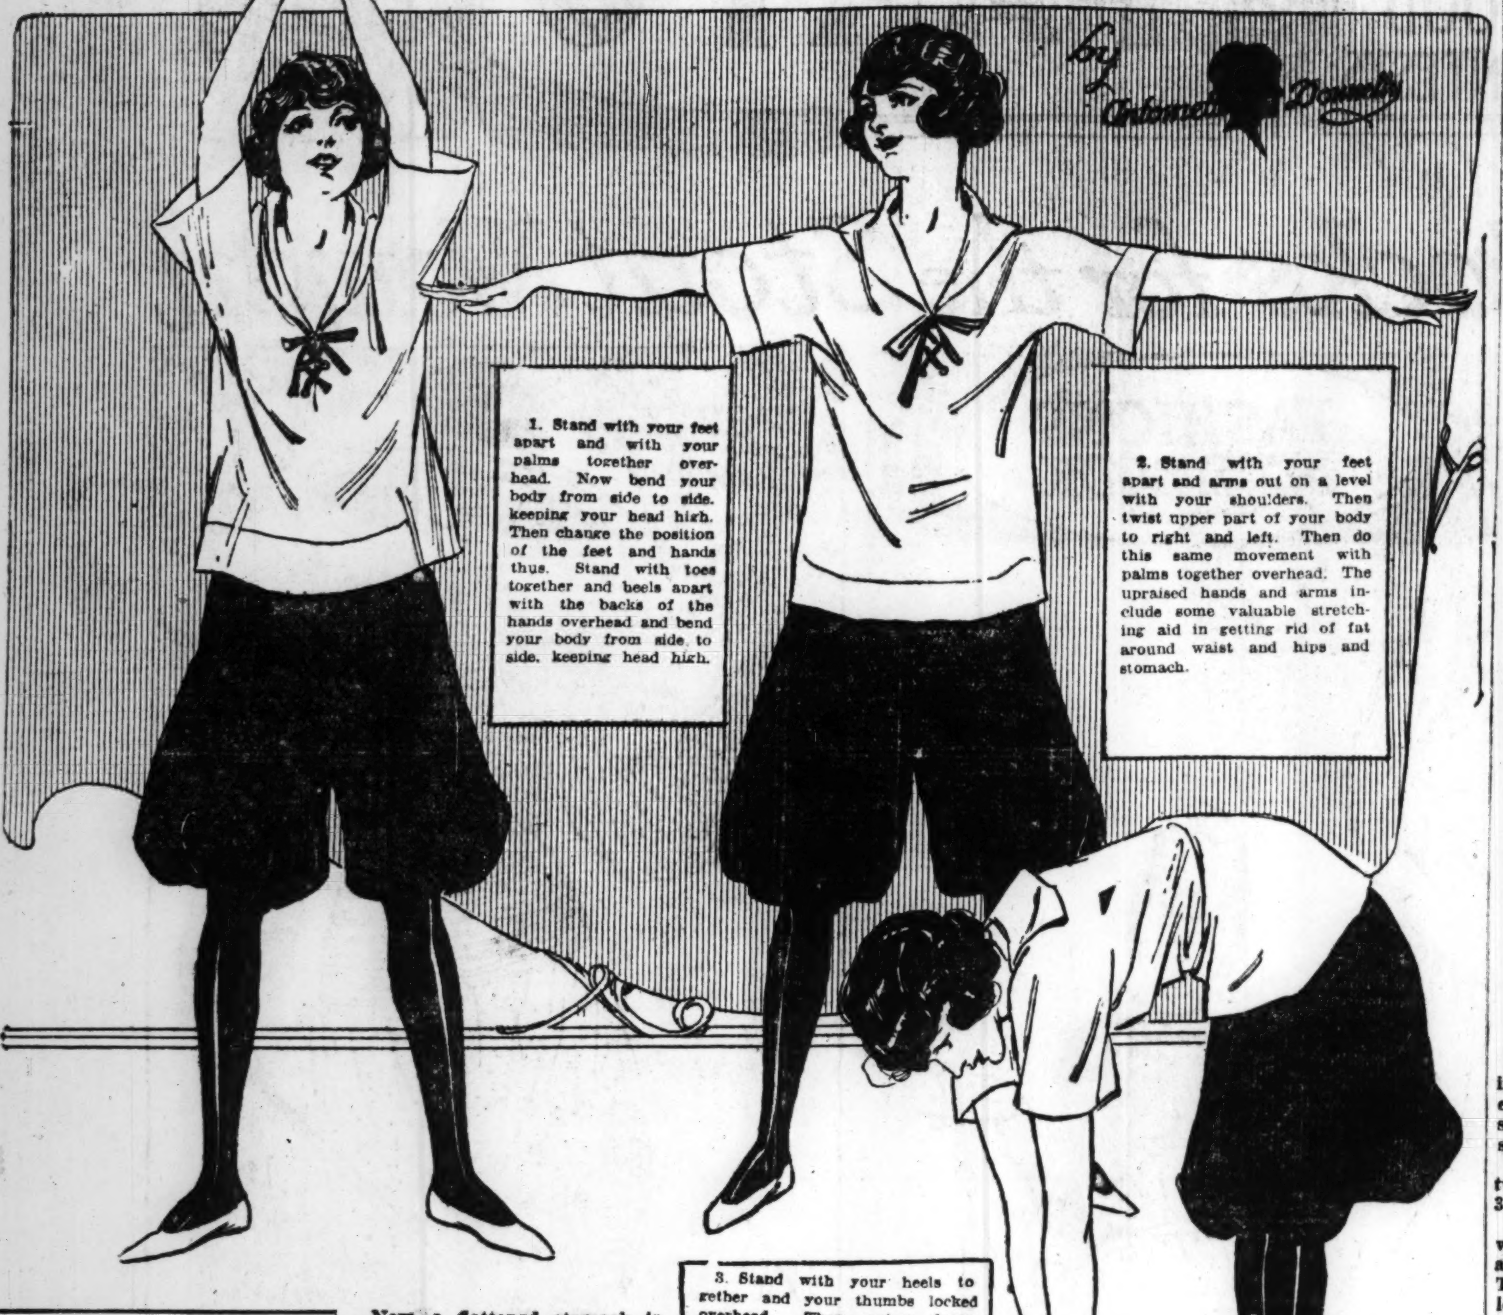
Meantime there is an important news item connected with foundation material. It is no longer shiny, but dull. Satin as a foundation is dead, and crepe de chine has risen to replace it.

Space permits but one other mention. Women in Paris are busy with their winter furs. The coats and capes are magnificent and luxurious, with wide, large collars. Only real furs are used. Imitations are absolutely not permitted. Such of the wraps as are finished are going with their owners to the seaside to act as evening coats. The women are commenting on their economy in thus using them—and so, indeed, it is conservative of them, as many of these garments cost as much as others of us are able to save up for the fortune of our lifetime. Fifty thousand dollars is regarded as a conservative price this year. The women are indeed abstemious not to have two or three.





REDUCING WAIST AND STOMACH



1. Stand with your feet apart and with your palms together overhead. Now bend your body from side to side, keeping your head high. Then change the position of the feet and hands thus. Stand with toes together and heels apart with the backs of the hands overhead and bend your body from side to side, keeping head high.

2. Stand with your feet apart and arms out on a level with your shoulders. Then twist upper part of your body to right and left. Then do this same movement with palms together overhead. The upraised hands and arms include some valuable stretching aid in getting rid of fat around waist and hips and stomach.

3. Stand with your heels together and your thumbs locked overhead. Then swing downwards hard and with knees unbent try to touch the floor with the tips of your fingers. Then change to position of feet apart and hands raised high over head. By bending the body at the waist only try to touch the tips of your fingers to the floor on the opposite side to the hand you use. Alternate with other hand.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I COULD go without corsets if it were not for the fact that my stomach is too high," came a not wee sma' voice from the next corset fitting cage. "I never wore a corset until I was married and I used to have a wonderful figure.

"I could save a lot of money if I didn't have to wear them because I have to buy such a heavily steeled one now that I have to pay like everything for it. I'm not big anywhere else but around my waist and stomach——" And so on and so on. Same old story in the same old way!

Every woman knows she could go uncorseted if it were not for her high stomach. The spreading waistline somehow takes care of itself in these days when a thirty-inch belt is never gasped at by even the most tactless dressmaker, and then there are sash artifices that covereth multitudinous waist discrepancies.

But the protruding abdomen cannot be sashed out of sight. Neither can drapes or folds of the gown be brought into action without increasing the look of general thickness.

Now, a flattened stomach is something that every woman should prize sufficiently to be willing to exercise to get or preserve it. For the simple and all sufficient woman reason that thickness of waist and stomach is an age telltale.

However, women may arrive at 50 and still be without this telltale sign. You can recall a half dozen women of the stage and screen who realized the value of keeping the figure young and who have done it well.

Some married women plead having children to be the cause of their loss of figure. But all you have to do again is to recall women of your own acquaintance who have had four, five, and six children and still have kept a waistline and shapeliness below the waist that gave them their young appearance.

It is all in the will to do and doing it.

You will see a surprising number of young women with protruding abdomens, but these are more generally the result of some faddish walk or at least a slumpy one.

Every figure is improved with the correct carriage, even unto the fattest figure. The correct standing posture is maintained by holding the body as tall as possible without actually rising on the toes. In this way the trunk is given its greatest length; there is the largest space available for the organs; the muscles of the front, back, and sides are in perfect balance, none is strained; the head is erect and so poised that none of the muscles is overworked; the chest is high and the abdomen flat. If the posture is not correct the muscles of the abdomen weaken and the first thing fat begins to accumulate heavily.

Now I am giving you a few exercises, as partly illustrated but wholly described above, which, if you practice honestly and regularly every day for ten or fifteen minutes, will enable you to arrive at the 50 mark with a figure that you and all belonging to you will be proud of. Also, among the good works of these exercises is keeping a mind active. It is the psychology of flesh reducing that it improves the mind as well as the body. These exercises are simple and if you have a talking machine in your home you will find it a much more enjoyable thing to practice them to music than without. You can regulate a time, say a two-four, three-four, or four-four time, to practice them by.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. J.: EVERY DAY YOU should eat some crusty food so as to give proper employment to the teeth. Coarse, fibrous foods are cleansing to the teeth whereas highly concentrated foods have the opposite effect. To prevent pyorrhea (a remedy given me by a high priced expert) apply just ordinary table salt to the tooth brush just as you apply a dentrifice and brush the teeth around the gums with it three times a week. Have some rather lengthy instructions on mouth hygiene for which I must ask a stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS K.: THE RIGHT STANDING position? The weight of the body should be on the balls of the feet, the hips are drawn back, the chest held well forward, the head erect, chin drawn in. Common faults are pushing forward of the hips and of the chin and an exaggerated pulling back of the shoulders.

BASEBALL: MANY OF THE UNIversities and colleges have girls' baseball teams. I'm strong for it. It is filled with the zest of enjoyment which is half the good of any form of exercise. You're lucky girls to have the plot in your community and enough girls to fill out a team. Sorry I can not give you the rudiments of the game as it is played by experts, but you must have a few small brothers and big ones among your friends or relatives who could teach you all you would need to know for the sheer fun of the game.

Alice lived with her grandmother and aunt. One day she was unusually trying and her grandmother paid no attention to her. She went to her aunt and said: "Auntie, what is the matter with your mother? She don't pay any 'tenshion to me." L. W.

Everett and Evelyn were twins. On their fifth birthday their father brought them home a small dog, telling them they could own it together. On being petted the dog growled, but finally wagged its tail. Noting this, Evelyn exclaimed: "Everett can have the head and I'll take the tail—it's the most friendly end." M. E.

Jane had been playing church and had just finished singing "Rock of Ages." She turned over a leaf in her book and finally looked up solemnly and said: "Our next number will be 'K-K-Katy.'" A. L. M.

Norma thought much of her dog, Towser. One day when at her aunt's she was asked how many were in the family. "Well," she replied slowly, "there is mamma, daddy, me, and Towser." B. K.

Whenever Stanley was with Carrie he invariably assumed guardianship over her. One day aunty asked: "Wouldn't you like to have a little sister?" "Not much!" flared Stanley. "I has my hands full now with Cousin Carrie 'thout havin' a twin for her." F. J.

Stomach is Quick to Upset When School Children Are Idle

VACATION days are days of over-eating and under-exercising for most boys and girls. They loll around nibbling at light food, unconcerned whether the fruit is green or ripe.

The result is cramps, skin eruptions, pimples, "summer colds," constipation and diarrhea. The basis of such trouble [illegible] stomach, and nothing will [illegible] and quicker relief than the well-[illegible] Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is just a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, a formula evolved some 30 years ago by Dr. Caldwell himself. Syrup Pepsin is now used by millions of people and is today the largest-selling liquid laxative in the world.

It is the mildest and gentlest of laxatives. It regulates the stomach and bowels so well that they can soon work normally again without the aid of medicine. And unlike the harsher physics and cathartics, Syrup Pepsin does not gripe or cause discomfort, even to a tiny baby.

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. A free trial bottle can be had by sending your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

VARIED ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN.

Miss Fern Bauersfield of Missouri is car distributer for the southern division of the Missouri Pacific railway.

Japan is said to spend less for education than any country in the world. Teachers there receive on an average a trifle over $9 per month.

Miss Bessie May Abbott, formerly a well known American prima donna, is now head of the only firm of women engaged in importing oriental goods into the United States.

In the factories of Japan women work with babies on their backs and food is passed to them at the machines so that no time will be lost. The payment for work is usually monthly, but sometimes semi-annually or even annually.

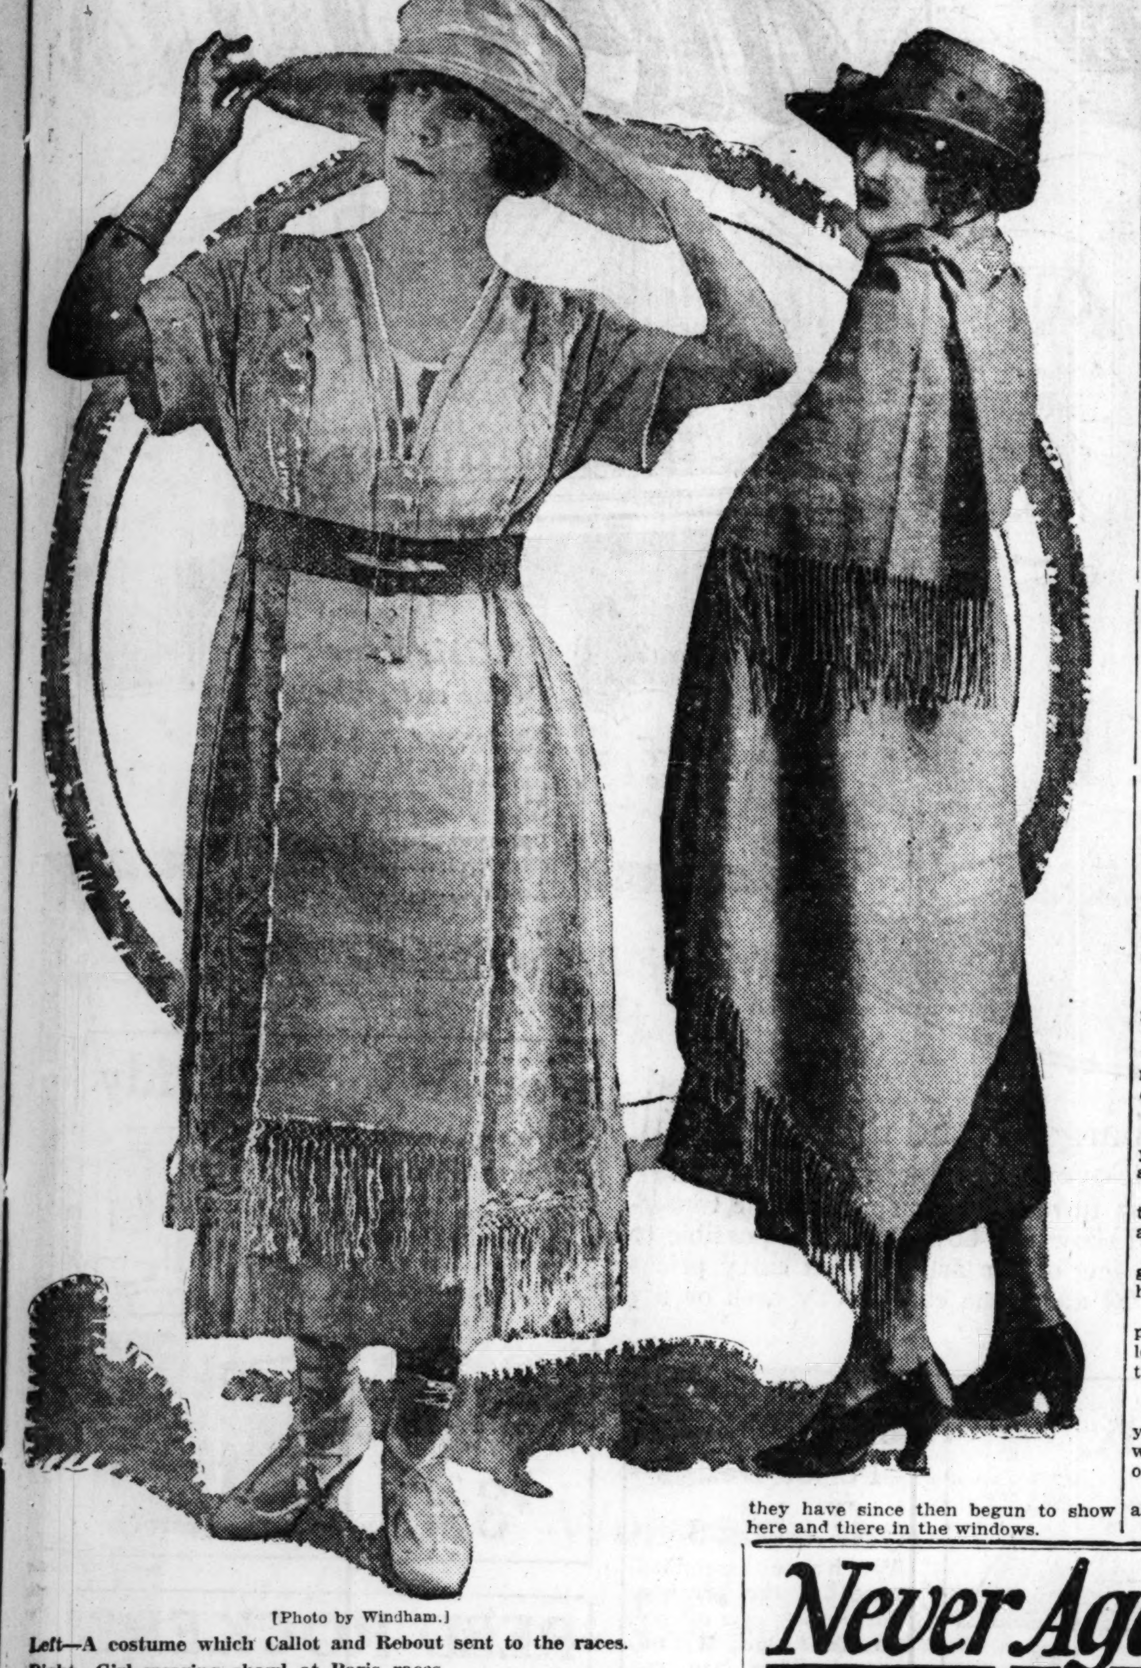
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By MARY BRUSH WILLIAMS



[Photo by Windham.]

Left—A costume which Callot and Rebout sent to the races.
Right—Girl wearing shawl at Paris races.

DISAGREE ON SKIRT LENGTH.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Maybe you read the other day that the Parisians are saying one does not have to read the shipping news to know when a boat from America is in; you can tell by the number of long skirts on the boulevards. The remark has a little challenge in it, a note of disapproval and withal helplessness.

One might as well admit there is a war on between the United States and France over this item, and it has assumed alarming proportions. Most of the American women over here announce that they neither can nor will shorten their skirts. They lift their heads and say as plainly as in words, "I am as well dressed as you are." Nothing is so calculated to get a rise out of a French woman as just that, because she goes a step further even than to think she is the best dressed woman in the world. She thinks no other woman is dressed even passably.

Legend has it that the leading modiste of America decided to launch that long skirt just when he received authoritative information that the French were going to shorten theirs. In the face of all the imprecations, threats and jibes of the French, he put it out and the American woman accepted and stood by the long skirt. Whether this be true or not, the break between the two countries has become serious, and nothing short of compromise will settle it. Maybe the moment of the peace treaty on this point has arrived.

The other day at Worth's there was a fitting, and the pretty, earnest little vendeuse superintending it said to the skirtmaker, "Oh, you must take out that hem and face it." She almost whispered the remainder of her sentence, and she had a little guilty way with her, as if she were telling one of those August opening secrets, which the French would rather die than give away. Still, when one of the big houses is making something between seasons it is a matter of pride with them to get up a creation that will not be passe with the season to come. At any rate, she made the pronouncement: "I offer it at its face value. Skirts will be a little longer this year."

Quite a piece of news that, which the little vendeuse let fall. Lesser items on lesser subjects have affected the stock markets and vast enterprises to an appalling extent. So, too, may this item presently. A quarter of a million of garment workers in New York alone a few years ago would begin a gigantic work on the basis of that statement authoritatively given. Even now, with the skirt war on, I believe it will have its effect. For if the French would only lengthen theirs a little, it seems as if Americans would consent slightly to shorten theirs. Then, if ever, we shall have perfect skirts, and not before, for if the French wear theirs too short, the Americans just so certainly wear theirs too long. Surely nobody can think them really graceful, and they always carry with them a suggestion of dirt picked up off the street and carried into "the house."

Meantime, at the races and on the streets of Paris, the skirts are very short indeed. The girl in the white dress and hat was at the races. The hat is by Rebout and the dress by Callot. The wearer made a very stunning effect indeed.

The dress is of white linen, and those side panels and sleeves that look like filet lace are really the linen done in a drawn work pattern. The fringe is of the same linen, too. The wide linen panel down the front is escalloped. The buttons are a mass of linen threads that act as a cushion, or socket, for white pearl beads. The belt is of black patent leather, and the little spots on it are of gold, like the gold lacquer work on the Japanese trays.

On one of the gray, cold days at the races, while most of the smart women were shivering in their short sleeves and their satin capes, along came a girl displaying a brand new idea in styles. She looked awfully smart as well as comfortable, and what should she wear but a woolen dress and a shawl!

The shawl was draped as nobody short of a Parisian would drape it, and it was about as chic as anything there. It was a magnificent thing, fringed and brocaded. The girl wore it doubled, like a long scarf. On one side the corner of it touched her hem, while the edge of the fringe fell below it. Round her waist she held it close, as one does a cape, and the other end she drew around her chest and threw over her shoulder. Everybody was commenting on her. At the succeeding races shawls appeared sporadically; they have since then begun to show here and there in the windows.

WHAT ONE MAY KNOW FROM HAIR

by Doris Blake

BEAUTY doctors have extolled from time eternal the virtues of the crowning glory, which translated means a luxuriance of hair. But according to folklore contributed from many parts of the globe a heavy head of hair indicates little if any virtue.

The Turks claim women with short intellect have long hair. The Albanians say with more finality, "Long hair, little brains." Other contributors say much hair indicates ungovernable temper and inclination to melancholy.

Even have they gone so far as to say a great abundance of hair meant one were half a fool, as Stevens quotes from Flora. "A tisty-tosty wag-feather, more hair than wit." "If a girl has a great deal of hair," quoth another source, "she will marry poverty, while the girl with little hair will marry rich."

Next in bad grace with the folklore authorities is the enviable curly hair. "It's the sign of a scold," says one. "If the hair falls in little curls at the back of the neck it means an early widowhood."

If one's hair falls in ringlets around the forehead a fever will beset him or her.

Every curl on a married woman's head is a nail in her husband's coffin.

Kinky hair is a sign of a variable and hasty disposition.

Take a hair from your head and pull it between your thumb and first finger and if it curls it denotes a quick temper.

Smooth, plain hair denotes good understanding, peaceable, courteous.

If the hair falls out at the forepart of the head at a comparatively early age it means that one will be easily led.

If it falls out behind he will be obstinate and peevish and commanding.

If a girl's hair has a wide part she will have a kind mother-in-law; if narrow, her mother-in-law will be a crank.

Thin, soft hair indicates riches.

Scorch your hair with a curling iron, you will have a quarrel with your sweetheart.

If the hair stands up on the crown of the head you will be fortunate in love affairs.

The widow's peak, which means hair growing to form a point on the forehead—you will be a widow.

A long life and a peaceful one is promised the owner of hair that grows low on the forehead and retreats up the head above the temples.

A cowlick is a sign of luck.

In the exact center of the crown of your head will be found a hair growing which is that of the color of the hair of your future husband or wife.

Coarse hair indicates humble birth, also a coarse nature.

Black, short, and curly hair indicates uncertain temper, a tendency to alcohol, and an amorous nature, and an unsteadiness about effort.

Thick and straight black hair, fine and glossy, indicates a kind, resolute disposition, true and faithful in love.

Thick, straight, and coarse black hair is the sign of the unscrupulous and improvident.

The darker the hair the more powerful the physical organization.

Chestnut or dark brown hair indicates fairness in dealings, free and rather liberal, devoid of deceit, but unhappy in domestic life.

Thick, straight, and glossy brown hair indicates a robust constitution, much energy, and eager in the pursuit of life.

Thick, coarse, and wiry brown hair shows great determination of character.

Curly brown hair indicates a weak character, but possessing a natural ingenuity and ability.

Dark brown long and smooth hair indicates faithfulness in love, many children, good health, and much happiness

Light brown, long smooth hair indicates a generous temper, affability, and kindness.

If the same hair is kinky and curly it shows an unpleasant disposition.

Men with blonde hair are said to be fickle; men with dark hair deceitful.

Heavy, long, light hair indicates a fairly high order of intellect.

Yellow hair indicates cunning, nonreligious, much given to pleasure.

Auburn hair denotes a passionate and hasty nature, suspicious and jealous.

Golden hair indicates excellent understanding, pride, and treachery.

A girl with long red hair is glib of tongue and vain, domineering, given to love's pleasures, impatient and fiery, and fickle of purpose.

ETIQUETTE

By Elizabeth Van Rensselaer

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

WHEN YOU SEND REGRETS.

TO a hostess, few things are more annoying and unkind than a point blank regret to a party with no reason or excuse offered to soften the blow. Many people do not seem to realize this, and time after time will, when invited to dinner or luncheon or tea, make some apparently—and, more often than not, quite unconsciously—curt reply such as, "Thank you so much, but I really cannot come, I am sorry to say," when an added word or two of explanation—for example, "on account of a previous engagement," or "I am going to be away"—would have been far more courteous to her who gave the invitation.

Circumstances are slightly altered in the case of formal, written invitations, like those to a wedding. At such times there is often so limited a space on one's note paper, and so great a number of replies to be read, that the omission of a reason would not be noted, much less give offense. But, in general, the wisest plan to follow is that which will spare the feelings of all concerned, and give no man or woman cause to regret his proffered hospitality.

How They Fight the High Cost of Living

Have you won in the fight with the high cost of living? Have you worsted the bugaboo of soaring prices? How have you done it? Have you made a schedule of economy? Have you made over your old clothes? Have you found a new way of earning an extra dollar or so? Have you found that some things you considered necessities are only luxuries? Have you taken your pleasures with an eye to saving money instead of spending as much as possible? For each letter printed which tells how you have met the problem of the high cost of living "The Tribune" will pay $1. Address High Cost of Living Editor, "Chicago Tribune."

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Learning How to Live.

In my effort to reduce the H. C. of L. I have worked my garden patch to death, allowing nothing to be thrown away. In previous years much of our lettuce went to seed and we threw away beet tops and such other things as we considered at that time of no especial value.

We now eat less meat and more fruit, milk, and cereals. We bake our own whole wheat bread, which has much more nourishment than white bread and therefore is worth ever so much more. Also we eat cornmeal bread, which we never did before.

We have studied the value of foods, and while I could not give our discoveries here, I can say that it is surprising how much one can save by learning how to discriminate between the essential and the nonessential. Cakes, pastries, etc., made of white flour are expensive and have not enough food value, so we have learned to do without these largely. I used to spend from 15 to 40 cents a day for candy, which I have now given up, and though the amount is not large, it helps my savings grow.

I have saved several pairs of silk stockings by following the advice given in THE TRIBUNE some time ago. I keep my clothes well repaired and thoroughly clean, which I think is quite as attractive as fashion.

And, summing it up, I look and feel better than I ever did before, no doubt because of learning the secret of successful living—how to live for health and efficiency instead of squandering money and vitality on things that are inconsequential and harmful. Also I have that feeling of assurance which comes from true economy and having a little money on the side. EVELYN.

"Easy Marks."

Profiteers are not to blame for the prevailing unreasonable prices. You or I or anybody else would charge all we could get if we thought we could get it. If you are selling to easy marks, why not? I can't think of a thing in the food line the cost of which could not be cut in half in thirty days if we easy marks would stop buying it for about half that time. H.

Your Dollar's Coming.

Last week I bought a buckram shape for a hat, also some remnants of black velvet and black satin, and made a beautiful hat for $2.50, which would cost $10 if purchased ready made, thereby saving $7.50, and if THE TRIBUNE sends me a dollar for this, I will have $8.50 toward the H. C. of L. M. H.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

He Needs Shoes.

"I am disabled with a broken ankle and cannot get around well. I am past 60 years old. I am in need of a pair of shoes. Perhaps some man has discarded a pair that I might be able to use. I wear size 8½, with a broad toe. J. F. W."

Can any one respond to this request? If so, I will send the address of J. F. W. on receipt of a letter asking for it.

Copies of Monologues.

"Have you any requests on file for monologues? I have a number that some young elocutionist could usee. "H. C. L."

I have no requests at the present time, but shall pass on your name to any of the elocutionists who might be interested in your kind offer.

Old Stockings for Carpets.

"Can I please ask through your faithful column for some castoff stockings, any colors? I want them for making carpets. I received favors before through your department and I have done favors for others through it and intend to do more at any time I can. MRS. M. L."

Almost all scrap bags harbor discarded stockings which could be utilized nicely by Mrs. M. L. in her carpet making. I'll furnish the address to any one who writes that they can contribute some.

Have No Icebox.

"Have any readers an icebox which is not in use? I am the mother of four children, and all of them have tubercular glands. I get milk for them every day, but have no icebox to keep it sweet. I will be grateful if some one has a small box we can have. "E. S."

These little children must have their fresh milk. I wish an icebox could be provided. It would be a great relief to this mother.

'Dolls of All Nations."

"I have been saving up the 'Dolls of All Nations' for a friend who is a cripple, and have lost several of the set. I wonder if you will help me, as she wishes to have all of the series. They appeared in THE TRIBUNE, you know. The ones that are missing are series Nos. 2, 3, 4, 7, and the rest up to the American doll. GRACIE W."

If any little girl has a double set of the doll series, may not Gracie's little crippled friend have it?

Instruction Book on Ukulele.

"I wish to ask if there is any one who has any books on how to play a ukulele. Perhaps there is some one who has already learned how to play one, and may not need it. Any books or any helpful suggestions will be gratefully accepted, and I will pay all postage that it will require. "A. M. S."

I do not think you will have the least difficulty in securing an instruction book for this sweet toned and popular instrument.

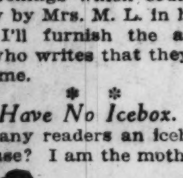
Puppy Wants Good Home.

"Have a dear little puppy about 6 weeks old I will be glad to give to some one who will be kind to it and give it a good home. C. H."

If you wish to be the possessor of this young pet I suggest that you write to me soon for the address of Miss C. H.



Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

No Love Barometer.

"Dear Miss Blake: "I am a young girl of 18, and am much in love with a young man of 22. This young man is away at the present time. How can I tell if he loves me or not? Would it be proper for me to have a date with him when he returns? Does it make any difference if a blonde goes with a blonde or a brunette with a brunette? I am a brunette and he is a blonde. I need your advice very badly. "BROWN EYES."

There is no love barometer, Brown Eyes. If there were, think how many hearaches and sleepless hours could be avoided. It would be all right to accept an invitation from this young man when he returns, if you are so minded. It makes no difference whether he is blonde, brunette or red headed, just so he suits you, my dear.

Would Like Boy Friends.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls, 17 and 18 years of age. We are timid, self-conscious, and therefore lack the ability to carry on a conversation. We are attractive and liked by most all the girls. We would like to have boy friends as well as girl friends. Will you please tell us how to overcome these bad faults and make more friends? B."

There is no cut and dried rule, sad to relate, to succeed in overcoming our timidity and self-consciousness. You are both young and you will probably outgrow a lot of this. Try for a while not thinking about yourselves and your hair and the way your skirt hangs and see if that will help. Another suggestion which has assisted others is that you get a book of gymnastic dancing and practice together or alone out on the lawn or in your rooms. That is all I can offer, girls, except that you be always cheerful and thinking of the things to say and do that will help somebody else, regardless of yourselves.

She's 13, but Looks Older.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am only 13, but nearly every one takes me to be about 15, or 16 years old by my looks and actions. Of course, I wear short dresses, and my hair in curls (which I have been told by many are very pretty), and I try to appear only 13, but it seems impossible. I am keeping up a close friendship with an honorably discharged soldier boy, who is a freshman in a college at the town in which I live. He is a nice boy, and my mother likes him, and so do I. Should this peculiar acquaintance between a college boy and a 13 year old girl continue? DOROTHY."

If you like this boy, there is no reason why you should not continue your friendship with him, though you are too young to be thinking of deeper affection. He probably thinks you are a bright, sweet child, and it is a pleasure to be in your home, where you and your mother make things so pleasant for him. You are right to wish to remain young, Dorothy, and you will lose nothing by it.

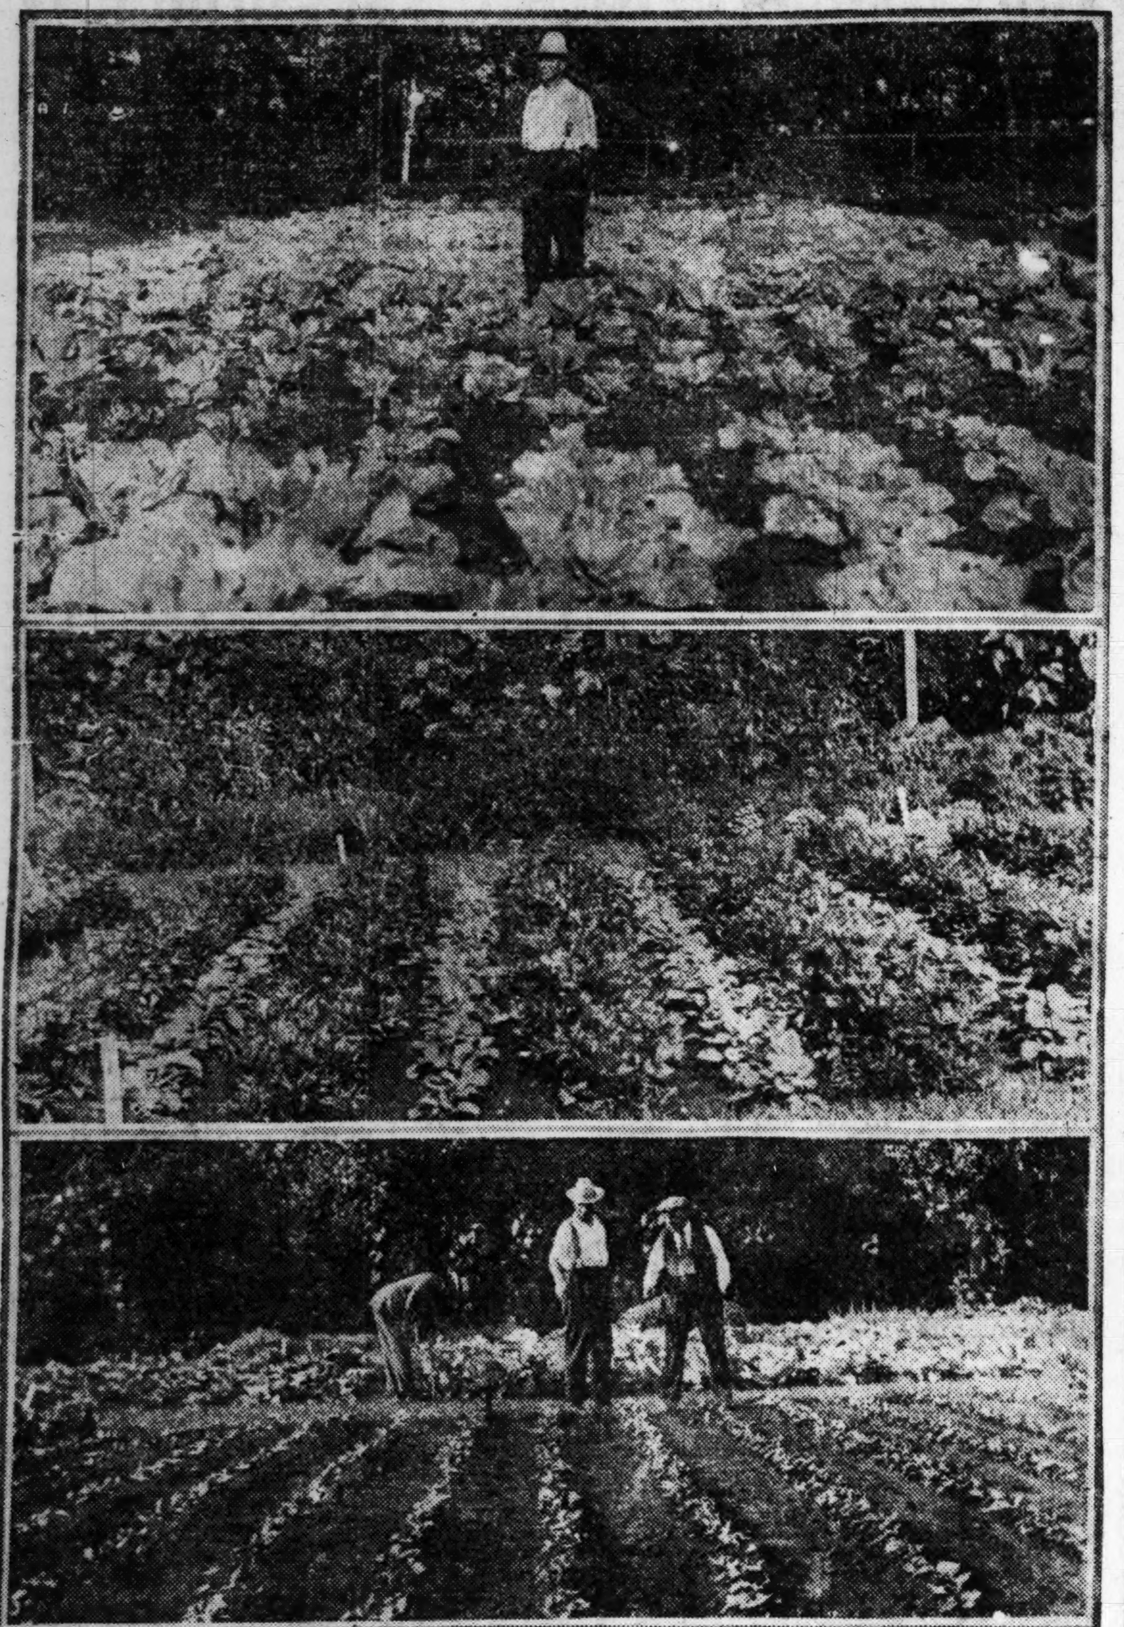
NOW FOR THE FALL GARDEN



TOP: Plot 16 by 29½ feet, on which three crops were grown—first, seven bushels of early lettuce; then 100 head of early cabbage; and 125 late cabbage plants are now growing. MIDDLE: Early and late vegetables grown on the same plot to conserve space. BOTTOM: Crop of late bunch beans grown on a plot where an early crop of vegetables has already been harvested.

By Frank Ridgway.

ANOTHER crop of vegetables may be grown from seed in time to mature in this climate before cold weather. However, there is not much time left and the planting must be done soon. Many people believe that seed cannot be sown at any other time than in the spring, but this is not entirely so, for there are several varieties of vegetables that, if planted within the next few days, may be grown large enough for table use before the killing frost.

Spring grown vegetables have well paid the owner for his time and trouble by furnishing the table with fresh delicacies, and now the fall garden is in order. No gardener should be satisfied unless the home vegetable garden is handled so there will be a regular supply of fresh green food from early summer until late fall. Vegetables are vitally important in the food supply of every family.

The late garden will furnish an abundant and easily accessible supply of fresh vegetables during the autumn months when there is a shortage of green foods on the market, and will greatly reduce the amount of money to be expended not only for vegetables but for many other kinds of essential food supplies. If one does not care to look at it from the monetary standpoint, there is the novelty of having vegetables of one's own growing, which often adds greatly to the pleasure of eating them. Most professional or business men realize much pleasure and satisfaction from spending a little time each day working in the garden.

Not long ago a business man who lives in the suburbs and grows his own garden said: "I have found that the only sure way of obtaining the best quality of vegetables, especially in the fall, is to grow them myself. You know there is a great satisfaction when you sit down to the table and know that the beans you are eating were on the vine at sunrise, the radishes were in the ground only an hour ago, and the peas were in the pods hanging on nice green vines at 8 o'clock in the morning. Then, too, my children enjoy working in the garden, and I give them an opportunity to earn a little money from the selling of the surplus vegetables."

Between Season Planting.

While many vegetables sown last spring are not ready for use until late fall, and while many others have been used at this time, certain kinds of seed may be planted now to fill in the gap. Space where early plants have been grown may be used to grow fall vegetables on. The usual practice of the home gardener is to plant early vegetables which mature by first of August or sooner, they are gathered and the ground is allowed to remain idle the rest of the season. Gardeners should not be limited to such a custom, especially when prices of food products are so high.

In this climate beans may be planted most any time during this month, but it is advisable to get them in as soon as possible. The late varieties of bunch beans usually require from forty to sixty-five days to mature. The Davis White Wax stringless bean is among the best to be recommended for late planting. It is the large green pod kind and is ready for use before frost. The Improved Golden Wax and the Longfellow varieties have given good results in this region and are highly recommended by growers. Beans should not be planted too close together. For hand cultivation plant them about four inches apart in rows twenty inches apart, and cover them with about two inches of fine dirt.

The early varieties of peas are more desirable for late planting than the late ones. Most any of the low growing, quick maturing varieties will do. Drill them in rows three feet between, ten seeds to the foot and two inches deep. Where there is a lack of space they may be planted in double rows six inches apart, with three feet between each pair of rows. The period necessary for maturity varies with the variety from forty to eighty days. Peas may be planted any time this month.

There are numerous varieties of lettuce that grow well during the autumn months, but the black seeded Simpson, Tilden white star and Romani, also called Cos lettuce, do exceptionally well. Lettuce thrives much better in late autumn than it does in midsummer. It may be sown in rows twelve inches apart or broadcast. The leaves are usually nice and tender and ready for use in about sixty days after planting. In some cases it is advisable to provide some form of partial shade for lettuce, but where it is watered frequently and gathered regularly this is not necessary. A good method is to thin or transplant the seedlings and allow the plants to form large rather compact heads and cut the entire plant when ready for use.

Radishes Over Long Period.

Radishes are ready for use sooner than any of the other fall grown vegetables and are easily grown. They require a small space and most growers find it advisable to sow two or three varieties that mature at different times or sow a few each week during the month of August in order to have fresh ones coming on over a long period. Some varieties are ready for use within twenty days after planting, while other require 180 days. Among the most commonly used varieties are the scarlet turnip white tip, early scarlet glove, round or long black Spanish and China rose winter. The scarlet China radish is a long variety that is successfully grown in this climate. Drill the seed in rows twelve inches apart, and as soon as the plants are up thin them slightly to prevent crowding.

A good size patch of turnips should be sown, as they can be stored for winter use. They should be sown broadcast on a rich loose soil, and it is desirable to plant the seed where some early crop has been grown. Turnips are hardy and the roots need not be gathered until after several frosts. Remove the tops at gathering time, and store them in a cellar or a pit in the garden. They should be sown as soon as possible, as they require from sixty to ninety days to mature. There is probably no variety better than the common purple top.

Spinach is another desirable crop that may be grown in the fall and carried over the winter by mulching with straw or leaves. It should be sown the first half of this month. However, it matures within a period of about six weeks. The Savoy is the most common variety grown. Spinach is drilled in rows about one foot apart. No thinning is necessary if the larger plants are harvested first, leaving the smaller ones to develop. It is easily grown and is perhaps the most valuable crop of its kind.

Beets in October.

Crosby's Egyptian beets may be sown this late and mature ready for use within about two months. To insure a good stand it is well to drill them in rows about 18 inches apart, and as soon as the plants are well up thin them to stand about three inches apart.

Early green onions are always welcomed in the spring and may be set during August and carried over the winter if covered with leaves or straw. Growers recommend the Egyptian onion sets for this purpose.

In planting a garden at this time of the year moisture is the most important factor to insure success. Hot and dry weather is to be expected for the next four or five weeks and every precaution should be taken to see that the plants are provided with plenty of water. This is especially important at planting time, as seed must have a sufficient amount of moisture or they will not germinate.

Lift Off Corns!

Doesn't hurt! Lift touchy corns and calluses right off with fingers

Apply a few drops of "Freezone" upon that old, bothersome corn. Instantly that corn stops hurting. Then shortly you lift it right off, root and all, without pain or soreness.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, and the hard skin calluses on bottom of feet lift right off—no humbug!

Beat Them To It.

I was expecting a friend to call on Sunday evening. I opened the parlor door, and, seating myself on the porch, awaited his arrival. When he came we went into the parlor. Hearing a noise, we looked around, and to my chagrin discovered my two pet chickens roosting on the back of a chair.

Surprise for the Boys.

While I was in camp training to cross the pond my wife and 4 year old daughter visited me. Almost all the boys were my old friends. They all called my wife a good fellow and made my baby the mascot. One afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. I called the gang in a side room and told them to keep their eyes and ears open, their mouths shut. In walked the chaplain, who began the wedding ceremony. The boys were stunned. My wife and I were secretly divorced in another state and we married again. The boys didn't know it.

She Never Told.

All the preparations were made for a large wedding, and a large crowd of friends was witnessing the ceremony at the bride's home. As the minister neared the words, "I pronounce thee man and wife," the bride turned deathly pale and rushed from the room. Much to the dismay as well as the humiliation of the bridegroom and relatives, she could not be persuaded to return. The guests departed, and to this day the bride has never told the reason for her apparently strange action.

In Army Fashion.

The minister had pronounced them man and wife, and asked the newly made husband to salute his wife. He saluted his wife in army fashion, instead of the usual kiss, and we could not suppress a titter if we tried.

Ever a Trouble Maker.

The bride was romantic, and insisted the wedding be held in the shade of the old apple tree. Just as the minister was about to pronounce them man and wife an over ripe apple descended kerplunk on his bald pate. As he wiped his head the minister remarked, "The apple caused trouble at the first wedding, and it still persists."

Slightly Disfigured.

Not long ago I witnessed a strange wedding in church. After an hour's delay the couple came in, both limping, the bride's arm in a sling and the bridegroom's eye and head swathed in bandages. On their way to church their limousine had collided with another automobile, but the bride would not postpone the weddin so after receiving medical treatment they had rushed to the church and went through the ceremony as if nothing had happened.

Must Have a License.

My grandmother came from England when she was 24. She worked for a cousin who had a large farm. The hired man fell in love with her and they planned to be married secretly.

One Sunday night when the family were asleep they walked to the nearest town, seven miles, and roused the minister, but he told them they must have a license. Grandmother went back to the farm and her beau footed it to the county seat, thirty-five miles, and returned next day with the license.

After the family retired that night the couple stole away to town again, the minister opened the window, examined the license by candle light, called his wife and daughter to the open window for witnesses, and performed the ceremony with the bride and groom outside.

SQUASHES AND GOURDS.

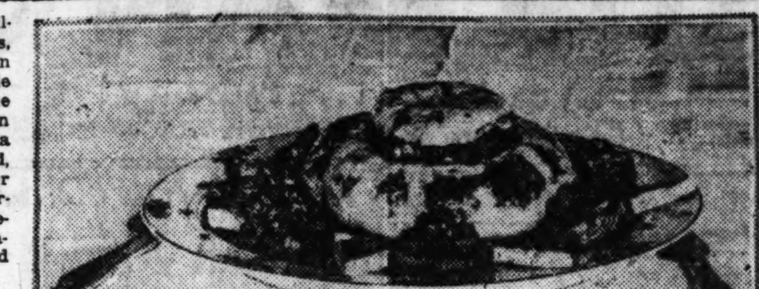
FROM an Italian market we brought away little green squashes of the marrow type, the buds ready to burst into flower on their way to produce other squashes or marrows of this type, and a bunch of the vine itself, on which both grew. The leaves on this latter were a little more deeply scalloped than the leaves of an ordinary squash vine.

The Italian woman who sold me these demonstrated to me in dumb show the method of preparing the vine and leaves for cooking. Taking a pen knife from her pocket, she cut off the heavy knot where a bunch of leaves makes heavy demand of the vine for support. I found later that this knot took much longer to cook than the rest, but she did not indicate that it was to be discarded. She took off the threads from the stems, scraped the most rugose parts a little, and cut these up into two inch lengths, holding all in her hand to show me that it was ready.

When I was ready to cook the bunch of squash vine I dropped it into boiling water for about five minutes, drained off this water, dipped it in cold water, then put it into a little water in a covered kettle over a little fire to cook. Salted lightly, when nearly tender, this makes as nice a vegetable as almost any you could find, and, as in eating any greens, the eater gets more water soluble B, that insurance element for health for long periods of time, than in eating most mature vegetables. This is to be found most plentifully in any green leaf.

Perhaps the crookneck would be more delicate if picked when it was but half matured. The best cook books give the direction for summer squash. "Take half grown squash." This is highly important. We should be able to eat summer squash, skin, seeds, and all, and if it is much more than half grown these are too leathery. In fact, I bought two crooknecks for some cooking experiments in the preparation of this article, and you could no more cook them tender than you could that trigil-like gourd, the luffa, we use in the bath, sometimes calling it "the devil's washcloth." It is first cousin to our summer squashes.

Why any one should wish to make "mock pork" by stuffing summer squash with bread crumbs I cannot guess. In looking through a great number of cook books to find how women in general have stuffed squash, I found one recipe so labeled, and not one in which the stuffing was anything other than bread crumbs.



A Stuffed Cymlin or Pattypan

Bread stuffings, as generally made, do not season desirably, and they do absorb precious meat juices, being veritable leeches of the meat they are cooked with, drying it more than most people realize.

However well the best bread stuffings may go with meats—and it may be guessed that I think there are far better ways of cooking meats than with them—a little reasoning will show why they are unsuitable with the less positive and highly delicate vegetables. The flavors of vegetables are so fragile that only a few people know what a wonderfully cooked vegetable is because they destroy these in the cooking.

To stuff a cymlin more or less after the Italian method, make a vegetable mince. Note by the picture that the cymlin, otherwise called pattypan squash, when cooked, bears a strong resemblance to a patty of pastry, and I am not sure but that it would be excellent made into a chicken patty, preparing it in just the same way as for the filling or mince made as follows:

Take two slices of bacon, cut them into fine bits, and fry out the fat gently. Salt pork may be used, but the whole mince will not have that delicious, half meaty aroma it has when made with bacon. Have ready to put into the pan with the fried bacon, the following vegetables cut fine: One medium sized onion, one tomato, one stalk of celery, one-half of a green sweet pepper, one-half cup of ground carrot. Cook these gently for half an hour, not browning them, but cooking them tender. Turn once or twice with spatula. The pepper and carrot may be put through the food chopper, but the other vegetables are best cut with a knife. Split the stalk of celery once or twice lengthwise before cutting across, at quarter inch distances, as in preparing it for a nice salad. Before cutting the onion across, as in regular slicing, slice down towards the bottom but not quite through, turn and slice down at right angles to the first slicing and then across.

By the way, this preparation may look like a good deal of work, but it may be done in the morning, the mixture of prepared vegetables put into a little cloth bag, dipped in salted water and wrung out and placed on an enameled ware or china plate in the coolest part of the ice box.

As there are a great many ways it may be used besides this of stuffing squash it is worth while to learn to prepare it. It can be used raw with French dressing, using a small portion wit lettuce. It may be cooked and have added to it a chopped and cooked beet or some cold cabbage chopped. It may be put away after it is cooked and be used in all these and other ways. In and around a ring mold of rice this is pretty, especially with a little beet, and good for a one piece luncheon.

Before putting this to cook for a stuffing the cymlin should be put to steam done. Wash it merely and remove any bit of stem. When it is tender cut off the cap in a thin slice, scoop out half of the squash, taking out the center, mash and put this with the cooked mince, and then fill the cup made with the preparation, put on the cover, pour a tablespoon, scant, of butter over the whole and put it in a hot oven until it begins to take color, or it may be, with care, finished under the broiler.

It is not necessary to dry this out, because any wetness will be taken up if it is dipped up like any gravy over the portions served. The filled squash may be cut in portions like a pie. No garnish is needed, but the dish is a little more imposing with some and tomatoes washed, peeled, and cut in halves, salted and peppered and buttered lightly, then baked. These add to that exceedingly pleasant and meaty odor of this dish when served, as well as to the appearance. They also make a delicious accompaniment because somewhat on the pickle or chili sauce order, while being infinitely more wholesome. Just two small slices of toast cut in half, and the halves cut across diagonally, and again diagonally, will make those star points which the French use for a garnish à l'étoile (star). The tomato alone may be used, the toast alone, or the two together, as in the picture. A good many people will find this satisfactory as the main dish of a summer meal.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Chicken or Veal Cakes.

To one cup of cold cooked chicken or veal finely chopped add one tablespoon of rich cream, one egg slightly beaten, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, and a few grains each of celery salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly and shape into six flat round cakes. Dip into egg and fine bread crumbs and sauté in butter until evenly browned on both sides or fry in deep hot fat. Drain on brown paper and dispose on hot serving platter. Pour around one cup of thin white sauce, to which has been added one-half cup of finely sliced celery. Serve corn fritters with chicken cakes and broiled tomatoes with veal cakes.

Corn Fritters.

Beat one egg until thick and lemon tinted, add to one cup of canned corn finely chopped, one cup of flour, sifted with two teaspoons of salt, a few grains of pepper, and one teaspoon of sugar; mix thoroughly, then stir in one-half cup of rich milk and one tablespoon of olive oil or melted butter. Sauté in melted butter until brown on both sides. Fresh corn may be used when in season.

Raspberry Trifle.

Pack an enameled bowl in crushed ice; put into the bowl the white of one egg, one and one-half cups of red raspberry pulp, and one cup of powdered sugar. Beat with a wire whisk until the mixture is stiff enough to keep its shape—about thirty-five minutes will be required for the beating process. Keeping the mixture cold will hasten the task and improve the flavor. Pile lightly in chilled champagne glasses lined with lady fingers and finish each portion with a large red raspberry. If desired (and the seeds are not objectionable), whole berries may be used in place of the pulp. Chill before serving.

Raspberry and Currant Ice.

Make a sirup by boiling four cups of water and one and two-thirds cups of sugar twenty minutes. Remove from range and let stand until cool. Mash raspberries and squeeze through a jelly bag—there should be one cup of juice. Mash red currants and squeeze through a jelly bag—there should be one and one-half cups of currant juice. Combine fruit juices with sirup and freeze, using equal measure of crushed ice and rock salt.

Cream Mayonnaise.

To one cup of mayonnaise dressing add one-fourth cup of triple cream beaten until stiff. Chill and serve with fruit salads.

Cinnamon Crisps.

Cut stale bread in one-third inch slices, trim off the crusts, and cut in three pieces lengthwise (strips should be the shape and size of Saratoga wafers). Toast delicately, spread with butter, and sprinkle with sugar mixed with cinnamon, allowing one teaspoon of cinnamon to three tablespoons of sugar. Serve with afternoon tea.

Sliced Bananas with Boiled Custard.

Arrange slices of bananas in the bottom of a serving dish; sprinkle with lemon juice and pour over soft custard, sprinkle with nutmeg and serve either hot or cold.

Currant Punch.

Make a sirup by boiling four cups of sugar with twelve cups of water fifteen minutes; add two cups of strong freshly made English breakfast tea, four cups of currant juice, the juice of six lemons, six oranges thinly sliced and seeds removed. Mix thoroughly, chill, and when ready to serve pour over a large piece of ice placed in a punch bowl.

Soft Custard.

Scald two cups of milk in a double boiler. Beat the yolks of four eggs slightly, add one-third cup of sugar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, and add gradually the scalded milk, stirring constantly. Return to double boiler, and cook until mixture thickens and is of a smooth and creamy consistency. Strain at once into a cold dish and when cool add one-half teaspoon of vanilla. Should the custard begin to curdle, remove from hot water and set immediately into a dish of cold water and beat briskly with a wire whisk or egg beater. Soft custard can be made with whole eggs, but it is not so velvety. Great care must be taken when making this custard that it is not overcooked, which gives it a curdled appearance.

Veal Stock.

Veal stock, also called white stock is made from a knuckle of veal (formerly sold for 10 cents) and one pound of lean beef taken from the cheaper cuts of beef, flavored with vegetables and seasoned with herbs, peppercorns and salt. This stock when finished is not as clear as chicken stock, not even when clarified with the white of eggs and the crushed shells. It is, however the foundation of many delicious cream soups made with stock, and it is indispensable in a large variety of savory sauces. It is this stock that gives the finishing touch to meats, poultry, game, vegetables, entrees, etc.

Wipe a three pound knuckle of veal with a piece of cheese cloth wrung from cold water; remove the meat from the bones and cut in small cubes; wipe the beef and cut in one inch cubes; set aside. Cover veal and bones with cold water and bring quickly to the boiling point; drain; throw away the water rinse meat and bones with cold water and return to kettle; add beef cubes and one medium sized onion thinly sliced, six slices of carrot, one stalk of celery cut in one inch pieces, one-half teaspoon of peppercorns, one-half medium sized bay leaf, two sprigs each of parsley and thyme, one sprig of marjoram and three cloves. Cover with three quarts of boiling water, cover and bring to the boiling point; let boil gently four hours; drain in a colander and strain the liquor through a double fold of cheese cloth. Use as directed.

The meat left can be used for croquettes, cutlets, creamed dishes, etc If seasoned and moistened with sauce made from some of the stock, there need be no waste here.

The HOME HARMONIOUS

PRETTY PARTY PLACE.

LET us talk about holiday houses—not homes, but just little temporary places in the country, which we may go to once in a while—covers to run to when we are happy or hurt.

To many of us city bred wage earners the possibility of owning a home is remote indeed. The fact of the matter is that our lives are too strenuous. We need to be housed with as little effort to ourselves as possible. We have to be conveniently near to our work. Our working quarters really, represent the scene of our waking hours, and the home is merely a place to sleep in.

But what about our holidays? Wouldn't it be splendid to own a little house party cottage? Imagine a place all your own to go to, to spend the week ends. O girl!

The beauty of it is nowadays that you can build it yourself. This is not a joke. When Uncle Sam took to "housing," some wonderful things were put on the market—labor minimizing devices—and among them is the interchangeable unit building.

Emergency hospital cottages were made of this, packed in little crates, and put up in a jiffy "over there." Not a single nail is used in their construction. They come all ready to bolt together, and women and children can build them, I am told, as easily as a babe can build a house of blocks. Then, too, they can be taken apart and built over, in some other shape, if you choose. Going out in the country for a while? Fine! Take your cottage along with you.

Alluring is a little week end house shown in the accompanying illustration. A glance at the plar shows that it is built in the shape of a cross. The interior arrangement has wonderful possibilities of spaciousness, as the rooms are divided by folding screen doors that may be laid back, throwing the whole free for dancing. A popular bedding plan for such little houses is patterned after Pullman staterooms or boat cabins, all of the beds being double deckers. The rear porch of the kitchen might be used as a breakfast room, and the front alcove either a sunroom or a sleeping porch.

The window arrangement is charming, making the whole house like one great big sunroom. The windows are of the casement sort and the outlook is from every side and angle, as the corners of the house under the main gable are beveled off and a window is placed in each. The roof is in three gables—the main one lying over the living room, dining room, and bedroom, with a projecting roof over the alcove and one over the kitchen and rear porch.

Such a house could be made of interchangeable units, or, if something of greater permanence is desired, of cement stucco, relieved with white window frames, and dark oak trim. The entrance is a plain concrete platform. This could be enlarged and repeated on the other side of the alcove and have pergola beams brought over it to make a pleasant porch. The big fireplace at the end of the living room bespeaks much merriment early and late in the season. Picture this room fitted with window benches. Can't you just make up your list of guests?

The side entry of the back wing has another concrete platform. The plan indcates a good bathroom and some novel features that make for comfort and economy in furnishing. There are a hinged dressing table and kitchen table that fold down out of the way. A drop shelf is a good idea for living room benches and porch breakfast tables.

Altogether, the plan is remarkably commodious for a four room cottage. It has points that make it unusually desirable, either as a year around home or pretty party place.

How I Found The Safe Way To Give My Baby Milk

I AM the happiest woman alive. My baby is on the road to health. Only a mother can know what that means!

Our doctor told me that the safest way to give him milk was to give him Nestlé's Food, which is made out of pure milk modified with just the right amount of sugar and cereal.

He explained to me that making the milk into a fluffy powder breaks up those hard-to-digest curds, so that when you add water and boil just a minute, you have the nearest thing in the world to mother's milk—clean, safe, and almost sure to agree with a baby's delicate stomach.

That is why I am the happiest woman alive—for my baby is well.

I know that if your baby has trouble with his food, the Nestlé Company will be glad to help you. They will send you free, as they sent me, a big Mother's Book on how to take care of your baby and enough Nestlé's Food for twelve feedings. All you have to do is to fill out and send the coupon. Then you can be, with me, the happiest woman in the world—because your baby is well.

FREE! Enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings. Send the coupon!

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

ary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

ABUSE OF PRIVILEGES.

NY girl who is in the real sense of the word a "business girl" does not need to have her attention called to the fact that an is not a place to carry on her al activities, and should under no mstances be used for her friends relatives to congregate.

number of criticisms have come lately about this abuse by men in offices and shops, but the nders are invariably girls who e not been long in the business ld, and who have had no training commercial work.

Generally speaking, employers are inclined to be indulgent in the matter of allowing certain privileges to their office help, such as receiving visitors occasionally, the use of the telephone for personal service, time off for shopping, etc. The experience and earnest business girl appreciates these privileges and takes advantage of them occasionally, but never abuses them. Unfortunately, she is often made to forego them, because some inexperienced girl not endowed with that sense is responsible for having these privileges taken away from an entire office force.

In a letter which I received the other day, one office girl complains bitterly about a fellow worker who by her unethical conduct caused the officials of the firm to clamp on the office some hard and fast rules limiting the privileges of the force.

The offender in this particular case held her position in spite of her unbusinesslike behavior simply because she was the daughter of a friend of one of the members of the firm. Her laxness in regard to the office rules and regulations and her abuse of the privileges during the first few months of her business career were dearly paid for by herself and all her associates by having every office privilege summarily cut off.

She had come to the office with no previous training for a business career and no experience, and as her existence had theretofore consisted of matinees, tea parties, dinners, and dances, she had no conception of the etiquette of a business house, and not being particularly bright lacked the instinct that should have guided her to a proper behavior.

One wire in the office was kept busy either receiving the calls of her friends or transmitting her calls to them, and her conversations consisted of nothing more important than a criticism of her friends and their clothes that was anything but edifying or a recital of the attentions showered upon her by many admirers.

In between telephone calls she either regaled the office in general with her activities of the previous evening or entertained one or more visitors.

Her associates were somewhat amused at her telephone conversations and did not mind hearing her gossip about her friends, but when she began to hold daily receptions for her friends in the office, and when those friends took upon themselves with her connivance the liberty of using the telephones, typewriters, and stationery of the office, they trembled for their own few privileges.

The state of affairs was brought to the attention of one of the officials of the firm, and while she was allowed to remain in the office, due to the influence of her parent, a set of rules was put into effect prohibiting any member of the office force from receiving visitors or of using the telephone for any personal reason, etc. Needless to say the most unpopular person in the office is the girl responsible for the change.

A girl of the above type will never make a success of a business career unless some good influence is able to produce a radical change of manner.

Real Love Stories

WHEN LOVERS QUARREL.

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

ETER'S parents and mine owned adjoining farms in Norway. Ours was the more pretentious place, while theirs included just a few acres. Playmates since childhood, we almost naturally became engaged when I was 19. I was a spoiled and willful girl and our courtship did not pass without tiffs, and one day after a violent quarrel I threw the engagement ring at his feet.

He emigrated to America shortly after. Two years later I eloped with a man from the city, who proved unworthy of my sacrifice. After having squandered most of my inheritance during our short married life, he disappeared, leaving me with a baby boy to care for.

For several years I worked in my native country. Then I left my son in the care of an aged relative and came to America. From my earnings as a servant girl I sent a certain sum home each month for the boy, waiting patiently for the time when he would be old enough to join me in my new home.

Many years had passed, when I entered the service of the wife of a rich building contractor. One day, while looking through a collection of photographs, I came across a picture that was taken when he was a young man, and, to my great astonishment, I recognized my girlhood sweetheart. Behind his Americanized name I had not suspected his identity and I was uncertain whether I should leave his house immediately or see him just once more.

He was away from the city at that time, superintending a big building job, and I made up my mind to stay. I was going under my married name and had changed a great deal since we parted, almost twenty years ago; so when I finally met him, it did not surprise me that he did not know me. His wife had a most unpleasant disposition and I soon found that their home life was unhappy. It was only the growing affection of the children for me that induced me time and time again to stay, when I was on the verge of leaving after an argument with my mistress.

During the time that I worked for this family I sent for my son, and through the aid of kind friends found him a place to live and a position as machinist helper. I never had him come to see me where I worked, but always met him where he boarded.

Nearly four years had passed when the man that I was working for died. When his will was opened it was found that he had left $2,000 to his home community in Norway and $1,000 to myself or descendants. Then I revealed my identity to his widow. Her fury knew no bounds. Deeply insulted and humiliated, I left her house, determined, however, to get my rights. Through appeal to the courts the bequest was finally paid to me.

Now followed happy times for myself and my son. He had grown into manhood and his good income enabled us to live comfortably in the small flat that we had furnished.

Unknown to her mother, Elsie, the oldest daughter, a charming girl of 18 years, would sometimes come and visit me. Soon I noticed that she and my son were taking more than a passing interest in each other. My warnings were not heeded. One day they eloped and got married. When they went to Elsie's mother to get her blessings and forgiveness, she scornfully refused and forbade her ever to enter her house again. So I tried to make up doubly for the love that her own mother had denied her, and we all lived together in happy harmony.

Only when Elsie's first born arrived the mother's strong spirit relented. She came to see her daughter, and, with tears in her eyes, held her first grandchild in her arms. C. M.

Woods and Lakes Lure Society Folk as Summer Wanes

By Mme. X.

IT'S a full twelve days since the contentious katydid gave us exclusive and advance information that in six weeks' time undies would become once more a matter of concern to the average man. The announcement came just after sunset when, in a sky of palpitating gold, the young and extremely silver moon looked down on a band of marauders collecting beets, carrots, tomatoes, and Swiss chard in a particularly attractive and remote garden set on the edge of the Skokie and forming a part of one of the prettiest Lake Forest places.

To be sure, the garden's gardener guided us in our depredations. Vegetables acquire a peculiarly delicious flavor if you yourself pull them out of the earth in the damp fragrance of a summer twilight. Don't you love the smells in a vegetable garden—the pungent scent of tomato leaves, the rank perfume of a bed of cabbages?

But that pioneer katydid half spoiled the adventure. The road up the hill to summer's peak is much longer and slower than the downhill way we're taking now to autumn's shortening days and winter's cares.

Appreciating this, a lot of motor blessed society folk are hurrying off to spend August in riding in their own comfortable automobiles from place to place in eastern summer districts.

On a Three Weeks' Tour.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson left here last Tuesday and, meeting their car at Syracuse, N. Y., set forth on a three weeks' tour which will include visits to their sister-in-law, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, at her country place on Otsego lake; their son and daughter-in-law, the Joseph Ryersons, at Narragansett Pier; their daughter and her husband, the Donald Frosts, at Mattapoisett, R. I., and other relatives and friends in the Berkshires, in New Haven, Conn., and on Boston's famous North Shore.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney are embarking on a similar trip in a day or so and will visit, en route, their son-in-law and daughter, the Henry Stimsons, at Rye, N. Y. Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Pike are touring Canada and will not be back in Lake Forest until the first week in September. Mrs. C. M. Ely and Mrs. George C. Clarke depart today for a three weeks' trip in the Canadian Rockies, making their longest stay at lovely Lake Louise. Mrs. George A. McKinlock, now visiting Mrs. Morris Johnston at her camp in the Wisconsin woods, is going a few days after she returns to Lake Forest.

Pitfalls for Pedestrians.

Although Lake Forest is so flat that that it's almost concave, it's very flatness seems to provide pitfalls for its residents. Some weeks ago Mrs. Howard Linn slipped and dislocated some of the bones in her foot and is still going around with a hobble and a cane. Mrs. George McLaughlin is another victim who needs no precipices or slippery rocks to work disaster for her. She is also on crutches from a bone broken in her foot as the result of a fall on a level road, and has therefore had to postpone until next week her trip to Watch Hill.

Many Chicagoans who have been savoring city delights during June and July are now departing for a mouthful of country air. Mrs. William J. Calhoun is leaving town to visit her brother and his wife, the William S. Monroes, in their summer home in Michigan. The Augustus Peabodys are on their way to motor through Cape Cod's quaint and well paved highways. Mr. and Mrs. George Ingalls have gone to Bar Harbor, Me. Mrs. William Conger and her daughter, Miss Cornelia Conger (who has just returned from canteen service in France) are spending this month in New England.

Along the Maine Coast.

The Chicago colony, which has been a prominent feature of York Harbor, Me., since the middle of June, is gradually dissolving in August restlessness. Mrs. F. S. Eames, Mrs. E. S. Worthington, Mrs. John C. Black, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Blair, Miss Frances Keep, and Frank Cramer have moved en masse (it's a flock that is apt to graze in the same pleasant summer fields) to Bar Harbor, Me., where they find among other Chicagoans already installed the Charles Strobel family, the Harold A. Howards, Mrs. Hall McCormick, Miss Elizabeth McCormick, the Robert H. McCormicks, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen and family, Miss Edith Blair, and Edward Blair.

Still lingering in York Harbor, however, is Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham, Mrs. Henry Dibblee, Mr. and Mrs. John E. May, and Mrs. Bryan Lathrop.

Meekers in Alaska.

Our most adventurous fellow citizens, the Arthur Meekers, who embarked with their guests for Alaska on their yatch, the Dolaura, early in June are reported from Juneau, in the Alaska Daily Empire, as being there entertained at dinner by the governor, Thomas Riggs, Jr., the other guests being, besides the Meeker party, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert of New York, Dr. and Mrs. L. O. Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Jackson and Mrs. P. R. Bradley. That is, these are the names as given in the aforesaid journal, but as the same paper speaks of John A. Spoor as "H. J." Spoor and of Howard Gillette as " S. R." Gillette, it may also be wrong in some of the rest of the list. I didn't suppose there was any spot on the western hemisphere where the name of Howard Gillette could be so mishandled by a reporter.

The same paper quotes Allison V. Armour, a member of the Meeker party, as saying that "the inland passage from Puget sound to Alaska is the ideal yachting water course of the world."

The Dolaura [a combination of Dora and Laura bestowed on the yacht by its former owner, Lord Dunsmuir], is probably now headed southward to enable some of the guests to reach New York, where they are due Aug. 15. It ran westward far enough to get a view of Mount St. Elias [isn't that the highest mountain on this continent?], and on the way visited Skagway and Glacier bay. It is possible that some of the company may stay on board long enough to escort the yacht on the voyage via the Panama canal to New York, which would make a pretty comprehensive cruise, from Alaskan glaciers to tropic palms, an enviable experience!

Onwentsia's Outdoor Dance Floor.

Meanwhile the motorless and yachtless ones, or those otherwise shackled to life hereabouts, will try to make the best of existence in a part of the world where golf links, tennis courts, open air dance platforms and ditto swimming pools abound.

Anything more delicious on a warm summer night than a dance on the big dance platform set out a short walk from the clubhouse by the Onwentsia club at Lake Forest, it would be hard to imagine. Its ceiling is the starry skies. Its walls the leafy trees. The floor is so good that it's an inspiration to the heaviest foot. The music fits the summer night and open air.

What you call a jazz band, when shut up in a room or hall, becomes in a short time an intolerable nuisance to the average mortal. But the same music at night out of doors is quite a different matter. It bursts forth like a flame of sound and its rhythm, unmolested and uninterrupted by echoing walls, spreads far across fields and gardens in diminishing waves of melody.

Grannis Introduces Novelty.

A few weeks ago Uri Grannis, who is in charge of the club's entertainment, introduced a pretty diversion. The dance orchestra stopped playing and out of the darkness, from far across the links came the sound of other music. Searchlights were turned in that direction and shone on a picturesque Italian couple in fancy costume, the man playing an accordion and the woman a violin. They came slowly to the dance platform and in the center of the big white floor, with floods of artificial moonlight turned on them, they sang and played and danced. It was an unexpected and charming interlude.

Saturday evenings are the gay evenings at the Onwentsia when the dining rooms are full of diners and the open air platform colorful with dancers. On Thursday the dance floor is dedicated to the youngsters of 18 and under, who are shut out on Saturday to make room for their elders. The seats around the edge are always filled with spectators. Even from the club terrace and porch one can get a good view of a scene that for color and rhythmic movement it would be hard to better.

Concert at Schweppe Home.

Out of the tragic whirlwind that is Russia today has blown to our inland shores one of the great musical instructors of the time, Auer. He was Heifetz's teacher, and put the finishing touches on many another famous artist. He is mentioned here because one of his pupils last Sunday afternoon gave exceptional pleasure to a company of Mrs. Charles Schweppe's friends in the spacious and stately drawing room of Mrs. Schweppe's Lake Forest house. The player in question was Mrs. Edward Yaggy of Hutchinson, Kas., who was formerly Miss Laura Reid of Chicago.

I wish that she were still a Chicagoan, and that I could hear her every Sunday afternoon play on that wonderful violin she bought from Kreisler just before he went into the war, for no professional violinist ever wooed and won music more deliciously and acceptably than did this dark haired, self-contained young woman. She has no intention of entering the ranks of professionals, and only plays for the love of the playing.

That so much musical talent and understanding should be enshrined in a Kansas ranch and dedicated to an entirely domestic life is a loss to the world. Kreisler must have drenched that violin with his own personality, for it cast a real spell over the thirty or forty guests present.

North Shore Show Place.

The Schweppe house and grounds are among the show places of Lake Forest. One of the most effective features is the great, mirroring pool that occupies the whole circle of the entrance court around which motors drive to reach and leave the front door. In its still and glassy surface all the details of the Tudor architecture of this façade of the house are reflected with accentuating brilliancy. To the east of the house the front on the high bluff overlooking the lake is an effective combination of terraces and lawns, with a stone ballustrade on the extreme edge of the bluff.

The Schweppe place was originally the old Walter Larned place, long known as Blair Lodge, which in its day was considered the handsomest of its kind on the north shore. It is said to have come into existence in rather an unusual fashion. Mrs. Larned's grandfather, old John I. Blair, was a great character in his day, rich and somewhat crochety—as the rich have the privilege of being. His grandson-in-law, the late Walter C. Larned, did some legal work for him, for which he (Mr. Larned) presented a bill. Mr. Blair paid no attention to the bill.

After being gently reminded of it several times he testily said: "I hate to be bothered about such small accounts. Go build yourself a house and I'll pay for it." Which he did, and the abode was most appropriately named for him and inspired the late Maj. Henry Huntington with one of his once famous witticisms. In the Blair Lodge guest book he wrote (as I am quoting from memory I may be making hash of it, but there are few left to set me right):

"Who would not rather a lodge like this Than owe for one in a wilderness?"

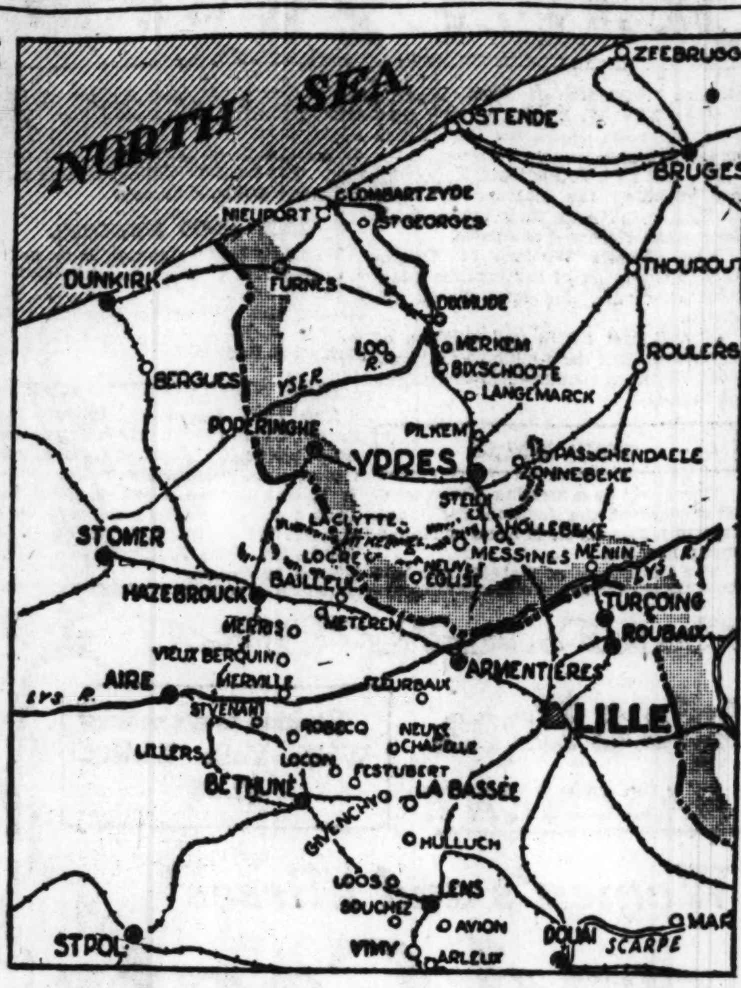
1914—By Field Marshal Viscount French of Ypres



INSTALLMENT XIII.

AFTER leaving the 2d corps I went to St. Pol and had a long talk with Gen. De Maud'huy [commanding the 10th army]. I learned from him that things were not going so well north of Loos. He had been obliged to fall back before the attack of the 19th German corps, which had come up from Valenciennes. He expected to be forced farther west, but promised me to hold a line extending from Bethune to the southeast up to 12 noon on the 12th, if by then the 2d corps could have arrived at Bethune.

De Maud'huy was among the best army commanders that France had produced in the war. I look back with much pleasure and gratification to my long association with him. He was of a most cheerful and buoyant temperament and a bon camarade in every sense of the word. His skill and dash as a leader are well known.

On leaving him I returned again to Smith-Dorrien and begged him to hasten his move. He promised to deploy into his new position as early as possible on the following morning.

On this day [Oct. 10] instructions were sent to Allenby to take the 1st cavalry division to join the 2d near Aire early the next day, and to act on the left front and flank of the 2d corps. The Bois de Nieppe was said to be occupied by German cavalry in some strength.

After a long interview with Foch we concerted together plans of which the following is a brief outline:

It was agreed that by the 13th the British and French troops would be in a position to make a combined advance east. On that day we were to make the line Lille-Courtrai.

The French left was to secure the passage of the Scheldt at Lille; the British center was to be directed on Courtrai, and was to make good the passage of the Lys at that place.

The road Bethune-Lille-Tournai was to be used by the French and all roads north of it by the English.

The 4th corps and Belgians were to be on the left of the advance.

On the evening of the 11th the cavalry had cleared the Bois de Nieppe [south of Hazebrouck], and were in touch with the divisional cavalry of the 6th division east of that place. They extended thence southeast to the left of the 2d corps.

The 2d corps had reached the line of the canal, and I directed Smith-Dorrien to wheel up his left the next morning in the direction of Merville and move east to the line Laventie-Lorgies, which would bring him on the immediate left of the French 10th army.

One division of the 3d corps was moving on Hazebrouck.

Rawlinson, reported that Capper, with two brigades, was still in Ghent. His aircraft had brought word that two division of the enemy were moving on Alost-Termonde-Lokeren, and that five pontoon bridges had been constructed by the Germans at Termonde. He said he had received my instructions and would carry them out as far as he was able to.

The 3d cavalry division was at Thourout.

The French cavalry were very energetic on the 11th. Conneau's cavalry corps pushed back the German cavalry to the line Vermelles-Richebourg-Vieille Chapelle. Mitry's cavalry corps assembled and drove the German cavalry back to the line of the Lawe at Vieille Chapelle and Estaires.

By the night of the 11th the cavalry corps under Allenby had made good a great deal of ground to the north and were halting between Wallon-Cappel, west of Hazebrouck, and Merville. Moving thence on the morning of the 12th they carried out invaluable work during the subsequent two or three days. Allenby liberally interpreted his orders and made a magnificent sweep to the north and northeast, driving the enemy back all the day.

Cavalry Performs Well.

OF all the splendid work performed by the cavalry during the war little can compare in results achieved with this advance. It was surpassed only by their immortal stand on the Wytschaete-Messines ridge on those ever memorable days and nights of Oct. 31 and Nov. 1.

By the evening of the 12th Gough, with the 2d cavalry division, had attacked and captured the Mont des Cats position, which was a strategic point of great importance lying six miles norheast of Hazebrouck. There was great opposition by the enemy cavalry, which was supported by Jager and strong infantry detachments, but Gough carried all before him in fine style.

The 1st division under de Lisle halted before Merris, after severe fighting, which drove the enemy back many miles.

On the 13th the cavalry made a further great advance, driving the enemy before them, and in the evening reached the line Mount Noir-Boeschepe-Berthen. The position of Mount Noir was vigorously defended by the Germans, but they were finally driven out by the 2d cavalry division under Gough, who handled his troops with great skill and determination.

On the 14th the 1st cavalry division reached the area Dranoutre-Messines and pushed advanced detachments to Warneton. The 2d division moved to the Kemmel-Wytschaete area, sending advanced detachments to Werwick.

I sent instructions to Allenby to make a strong reconnaissance of the Lys, from Estaires to Menin, on the 15th, and report the result as quickly as possible to me at the headquarters of the 3d corps.

Late at night on the 12th the 3d corps (4th and 6th divisions and 19th brigade) moved to the area east and south of Hasbrouck. The infantry were moved in motor omnibuses.

On this day general headquarters were moved from Abbeville to St. Omer. On my way there I went to Hazebrouck to see the commander of the 3d corps. Pulteney is a very old friend and comrade of mine, to whom I would like to devote a few lines of this story.

The keenest of soldiers from his early youth, he was adjutant of his battalion of the Scots guards. Thence he sought service in Africa, where he did excellent work, although he suffered severely from the climate.

I had the good fortune to be closely associated with him in the South African war, and there became acquainted with his fine qualities as a soldier and leader of men. I was delighted to find him with me as one of the three corps commanders who fought with the first expeditionary force sent to France.

Throughout my period of commander in chief he wholly justified the estimate which I had formed of his capacity and capability in the field. He enjoyed the full confidence of the officers and men who served under him. Possessed of iron nerve and indomitable courage, he remained imperturbable and unmoved in face of the most difficult and precarious situations. No matter how arduous the task imposed upon him he never made difficulties, but always carried out the rôle assigned to him with energy and skill. It had been my hope to see him in command of an army, for which I feel sure he was thoroughly qualified, but my withdrawal from France prevented my carrying out my intentions with regard to him.

His conduct of the operations which I am just about to describe was characterized by his customary skill, boldness, and decision. The great results which accrued from the first battle of Ypres may be fairly traced back to his initial leading of the 3d corps in the series of successful advances which were the most prominent and important among the opening phases of that great combat.

On reaching Hazebrouck, about 4 p. m. on the 13th, I was told that the 3d corps was engaged with the enemy some miles east of the town. Repairing with all speed in that direction, I came up with the rear of the 6th division, which had been heavily engaged almost up to that moment, but was now preparing to advance. My car got hopelessly blocked amid ammunition wagons and all manner of traffic, and in trying to extricate it we found ourselves badly bogged in a sloughed field.

Watches Battle Progress.

LEAVING the motor to struggle back, I tried to see what was going on from some high ground close by. Rain was falling heavily and the atmosphere was foggy and misty. I watched as best I could for some little time what was going forward, until I felt assured that the tide of battle was flowing very favorably for us. I then got back as quickly as possible to headquarters at St. Omer, where reports were awaiting me. I larned that the town had been heavily bombed by hostile aircraft during the day. Much damage was done to buildings and several soldiers and civilians had been killed and wounded. It was a somewhat unpleasant welcome for us, but the effect of it was completely wiped out by the news I received from Pulteney of the victory he had attained.

The enemy opposed to him consisted of one or two divisions of cavalry, at least a division of infantry (19th corps), and several Jäger battalions. Pulteney found them posted in a strong position covering Baillieul, with their left resting on Bleu, close to Vieux Berquin, and their right on Berthen. The British attack opened at 1:30 p. m., and by nightfall the 6th division had captured Bailleul and Meteren, whilst the 4th division captured and occupied a strong position facing east one mile to the north of the 6th division.

This was an excellent day's work performed by the 3d corps, and the captured ground was of great value in the subsequent operations.

About noon on the 14th the 3d corps continued the advance, and after some considerable fighting secured, by 7 p. m., the line Bleu-east of Bailleul-Neuve Eglise.

On the 15th I directed Pulteney to make good the River Lys between Armentieres and Sailly-sur-la-Lys and endeavor to gain touch with the 2d corps.

By nightfall the 3d corps had made the line Sailly-Nieppe.

Between the 11th and 15th the 4th corps, under Rawlinson, was constantly engaged in assisting and covering the retreat of the Belgian army. During this time the German forces from Antwerp were concentrating westward in even increasing strength. The 7th division, under Capper, retired successively from Ghent to Aeltre, thence to Thielt, from Thielt to Roulers, and from Roulers to the south and east of Ypres.

The 3d cavalry division, under Byng, was at Thourout on the 11th, at Roulers on the 12th, at Ypres on the 13th, and on the 14th connected up with Gough's 2d cavalry division in front of Kemmel, which position the two cavalry divisions captured and secured.

On the 15th the 7th division was east of Ypres, with the 3d cavalry division well out in advance of them in the direction of Menin and Courtrai.

The capture of the high ground about Kemmel proved to be of the utmost importance to us throughout the battle of Ypres.

On the 12th the Belgian army assembled in the area Ostend-Dixmude-Furne-Nieuport, but on the 15th withdrew entirely behind the Yser to the north of Ypres.

The French naval division and other troops which had been covering the Belgian retreat were at Dixmude and Nieuport. A French territorial division from Cassel had been moved to Ypres.

On the 14th it was reported that about 10,000 German troops from Antwerp were moving on Bruges and Roulers, and that another German division from Antwerp had reached Courtrai.

On the 15th the enemy strengthened their line on the Lys, where part of the 19th and 12th German corps were reported to be with their right on Menin, and, finally, the Germans were said to be advancing in four columns to the line Ghistelles-Roulers.

I now turn to the operations of the 2d corps, which, it will be remembered, was on the right of the British forces to the east of Béthune.

I visited Smith-Dorrien at his headquarters almost every day between the 11th and 15th. On each occasion I was more and more impressed by the exceptionally difficult nature of the country in this part of our field of operations.

If we draw a line on the map starting from Lens on the south and following north through Liévin, La Bassée, Fromelles, Armentieres, almost to the valley of the River Douve on the north, the whole terrain for several miles to the east and west of that line strongly resembles the English back country. North of Liévin the ground is very flat, while mining works, slag heaps, factories, and mining villages completely cover the surface in all directions.

There is a large mining population whose tenements [sometimes single houses, sometimes separate rows or cottages] cover the whole area. There are also towns of some size, such as Béthune, Noeux-les-Mines, Nieppe, and Armentieres.

The ground, moreover, was of such a character as to render effective artillery support to an infantry attack most difficult. The roads were rough, narrow, badly paved and very slippery in wet weather, which caused movements by motor to be a work of time and difficulty, particularly in the caso of heavy motor transport ply depots. This marked defect in the roads applied, however, to the whole area over which the British operations extended.

After some severe fighting, particularly by the 5th division, the 2d corps reached the line Annequin-Pont Fix-Festubert-Vielle-sur-Chapelle-Fosse on the night of the 12th.

ON my way to Hazebrouck on the 13th I saw Smith-Dorrien for a short time. He was holding his own, and during the day his left [3d division] made good progress, reaching Pont du Hem close to Laventie.

The French cavalry, which had been operating in advance of the 2d corps, had drawn back to the northern flank of the latter and were at Pont Rigneul. For some days subsequently they held the ground and kept up connection between our 2d and 3d corps.

On the afternoon of the 14th I again visited Smith-Dorrien at Béthune. He was in one of those fits of deep depression which unfortunately visited him frequently. He complained that the 2d corps had never got over what he described as the "shock" of Le Cateau, and that the officers sent out to him to replace his tremendous losses in officers were untrained and inexperienced, and, lastly, he expressed himself convinced that there was not a great fighting spirit throughout the troops he commanded.

I told him that I thought he greatly exaggerated these disabilities. I pointed out that the cavalry, the 4th division and th e19th brigade were all just as heavily engaged at Le Cateau as the 2d corps, but that their spirit and condition, as I had seen for myself the day before, were excellent.

Even if, as I consider, he failed to make the best of it, Smith-Dorrien was certainly confronted with a difficult task. He was on a very extended front, and the situation undoubtedly demanded skillful handling and great determination.

I arranged with Foch that the French should extend their line north, up to the line of the La Bassée canal. When this was done the commander of the 2d corps was able to shorten his line and keep one of his brigades back in reserve.

On this day Gen. Hubert Hamilton, commanding the 3d division, was killed by a shell. His loss was deeply felt by his division, which had the utmost confidence in him.

Hubert Hamilton was an old friend of mine, and it grieved me much to lose him. He was a fine soldier, possessing a most attractive nature, and I do not think he could have had an enemy in the world. I have always looked back with admiration to his leading of the 3d division in that critical period of the war.

I conclude this chapter with the arrival of the last detachment of the 1st corps at St. Omer from the Aisne. There to the last they maintained the fine fighting record which they had earned, for on the 11th, shortly before their departure, they once again gallantly repulsed a heavy German attack with great loss to the enemy.

On the night of the eleventh the 2d division and 16th brigade had been withdrawn from the trenches and had begun entraining en route for St. Omer, being followed shortly by the remainder of the 1st corps.

Before continuing my narrative, which has now reached the opening stages of the first battle of Ypres, let us consider what were the points at issue in this grave crisis in the history of the world. What were the stakes for which we were playing?

Let us suppose that from October, 1914, up to the end of the war the German right flank had been established at Dieppe, instead of at Nieuport. The enemy would have been in occupation of the whole of the department of the Pas de Calais, including the seaports of Dieppe, Boulogne, Calais, and Dunkirk.

How, then, would it have fared with the British empire?

Discussing the question of the channel tunnel at a meeting of the council of imperial defense, in May, 1914, I suggested the possibility of submarines being dispatched in sections by rail to certain ports and there assembled. The expert reply was that this would be quite impracticable. How has the experience of the war borne out this dictum?

It is as certain as anything can be that, in the circumstances I have supposed, the channel ports would soon have been full to overflowing with these craft, which, with such bases of operations, would have rendered the channel a veritable mare clausum so far as any attempt by our navy to prevent invasion was concerned.

If, then, Napoleon entertained high hopes of success when he concentrated an army at Boulogne in 1805 for the invasion of this country, surely the Germans, in such circumstances as I have described, would have regarded such an enterprise with still greater confidence. And they would have been justified in so doing.

Then as to aircraft. An examination of the map will show that London would be within about half the aircraft range of the German aerodromes, as they existed, if these latter were moved to Calais, and its neighborhood. Let those who have had experience of the full effect of air raids on London during the war judge what this might have meant. Had the western channel ports been in German occupation the horrors of these air raids would have been multiplied an hundredfold.

It is only necessary to add that during the war heavy artillery succeeded in making effective practice at ranges greater than the distance between Calais and Dover.

Stakes at Ypres.

I THINK it is reasonable to deduce from this argument that the stakes for which we were playing at the great battle of Ypres were nothing less than the safety—indeed, the very existence—of the British empire.

Now, the Germans had two distinct opportunities of bringing about such a situation as I have contemplated:

[1] To reinforce their right much sooner than they did, even though by so doing they had to make slight and unimportant sacrifices elsewhere, and to take up a line of entrenchments resting on the sea at Dieppe, whence they could have run their trenches east and joined up with their main line before De Castelnau's flank movement could possibly have developed.

My dear Mr. Weber:—

I have found that Liquid Dress Shield gently allays all excess moisture under the arms, leaving the skin charmingly cleanly and cool. Truly, the opportunity to discard uncomfortable and unsightly dress shields.

Cordially yours,

Lady Duff Gordon

Discolored or Spotted Skin Easily Peeled Off

The freckling, discoloring or roughening to which most skins are subject at this season, may readily be gotten rid of. Ordinarily Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. You need not get more than an ounce of the wax from your druggist.

There's no more effective way of banishing tan, freckles, liver spots, moth patches, or other cutaneous defects. Minute, almost invisible, skin particles come off each day, so the process itself doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and you soon acquire a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

BEAUTIFULLY CURLY, FLUFFY HAIR—IN THREE HOURS!

Girls, have you tried the Silmerine method of curling your hair? It's simply grand! Gives you the most beautiful, natural-looking curls and waves—makes the hair soft, fluffy and glossy—and nothing harmful or bothersome about it. The curls will last the longest time—in spite of heat, wind or dampness. You won't have to be continually fixing and fussing with your hair. It's foolish to singe and blister and deaden your tresses with a hot curling iron—and altogether unnecessary now.

Liquid Silmerine is pleasant to use, being neither sticky nor greasy. Get a bottle from your druggist today, follow the simple directions—the first trial will make it your steadfast friend. The wavy effect appears within three hours after the application, though many prefer applying the liquid just before retiring. You will appreciate Silmerine equally as a dressing and hair preservative.

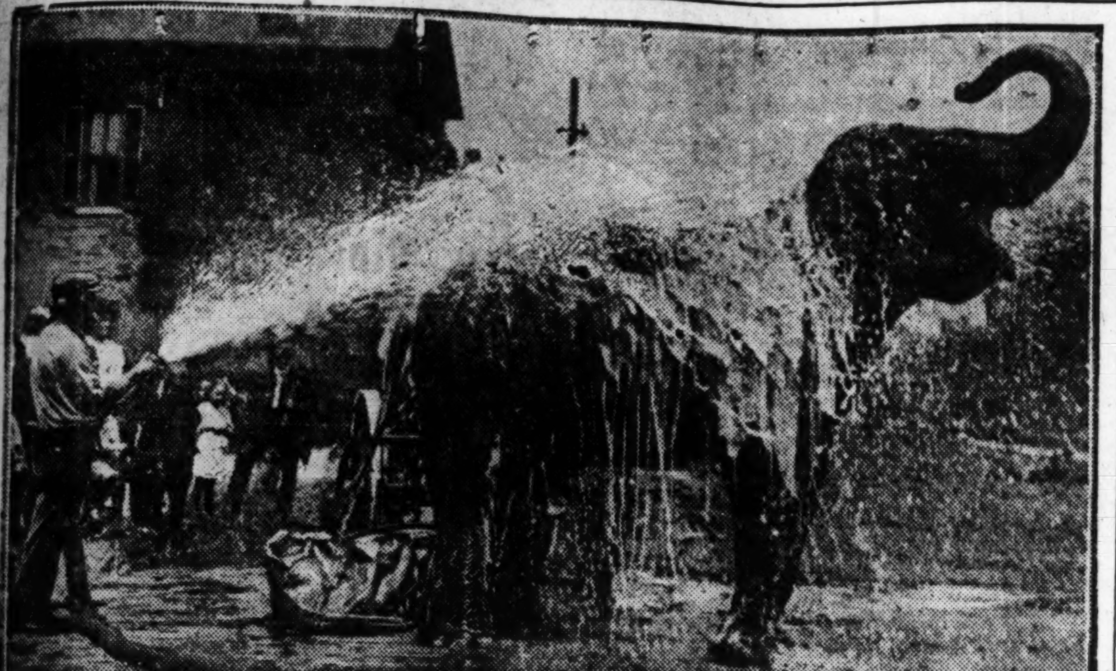
HIS MORNING TUB

"Hero" of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Combined Shows Gets a Bath and Seems to Like It.



HERE is a picture of Hero, one of the elephants of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined circus being given a bath. Every time elephants take a drink they take a bath along with it. They stick their long trunks in a tank of water and draw a deep breath. This fills the trunk. Then they toss the tips of their trunks over their backs and blow.

Of course the elephants waste a lot of water by their way of bathing. It's not half as economical as the tub method. But the circus people could hardly carry bath tubs large enough to accommodate an elephant. So, to conserve water, the keepers do the next best thing—they attach a hose to a hydrant and wash them off as you see them doing in the picture.

There are so many elephants traveling with the Ringling Brothers' shows that all are not bathed in one town. They are given turns. Some have a bath in one city and the others in the next. And so on. This rule, however, will not apply down at Grant park. Keeper Denman can allow the entire herd of forty-one elephants a daily morning bath in Lake Michigan during the nine days that the big show remains on the lake front.

No such number of elephants was ever toured before.

Nearly all will be seen in the street parade here. This procession is the longest ever devised. Everything about the circus is said to be of gigantic proportions. The arenic program lasts almost three hours and hundreds of performers take part in it. The circus will give two daily performances at Grant park for the benefit of the Soldiers and Sailors' Memorial fund. The season will close with the matinée performance of next Sunday afternoon.

Announcement by Jardin PARIS BOSTON

"JARDIN de ROSE"

The French Face Powder Made in America

has made an unparalelled success amongst the women of America. Women have discovered the unequalled merit of "JARDIN de ROSE" and are telling their friends about it.

The result is that my manufacturing facilities are taxed beyond capacity and are now being doubled to take care of your demand.

My regular advertising campaign has already been delayed for some weeks and will have to wait a while longer, owing to your unexpected rush of orders. This is merely an explanation of the delay.

I want to give you prompt service through every dealer before advertising for more business. Dealers who ordered an ample stock in advance can still supply you. Others must wait until we can catch up with our orders, which we are working day and night to do.

A PROMISE

When my facilities have been increased to take care of your business, I promise you the most interesting advertising campaign ever addressed to women. I can say this because it is the women themselves who are really writing it.

Every advertisement of "JARDIN de ROSE" will be based upon the letters of women who answered my request for advice upon how to advertise a face powder.

I ask you to be patient for a while yet, but do not miss these advertisements when they appear. They will interest all women, because they are based entirely upon the advice of women—the best advice, in my opinion, ever given to any man in the history of advertising.

Thank you again for your wonderful co-operation.

WE TURN TO THE NATION.

With astonishing suddenness we discover ourselves, from president down, shouldering aside, for the moment at least, the nebulous quality of internationalism and applying ourselves with unwonted diligence to the affairs of the United States.

We find that after all it is not the benign vision of the league of nations which absorbs us, but the practical problems of this country.

We do not need to be told that it is the prosperity and happiness of the people of this nation which require our first attention.

The brotherhood of the nations pales into insignificance beside the substantial and pressing demand of 2,000,000 American railway workers, whose interests are inextricably bound up—not with the future of the league of nations—but with the future of the United States.

We find that there is only slight comfort in calling upon the "internation" for relief in this emergency; that the actual and living fact lies with us here in America.

We know that we will never restore ourselves to normal conditions by an emotional journey to the end of the rainbow, but that adjustment is a tangible quality which must be worked out by living practical men and women submitting themselves to strict discipline, putting themselves in a common mood for the restoration of normal prices and normal wages.

A few weeks ago we were in the thick of the "internation" controversy because the president, as the head of the government, insisted upon subordinating all other affairs to this universal project. The people were being told that most important in their lives was the covenant of the league, the universal, superlative authority which was to be the documentary Moses leading us out of the wilderness of industrial and political doubt.

How little did the "internation" calculate upon the practical facts of human existence. Today we are talking about the United States, not the "internation"; about the fair and just way to make this a democracy acceptable to all its citizens, not a way to train the ambitions and jealousies and habits of the polyglot universe. In short, we are discovering that far from standardizing the desires of the world we are having enough ado standardizing the requirements of our own national household.

It is not the time to be disputing about leagues. The press of events shows this. The needs of this country are sufficient unto its best minds. We are too far removed from our own American Utopia to be advocating Utopia for the world. First let us establish ourselves.

But, regardless of how little some administrators may desire to attend the nation, preferring to dabble in superpolitics, the fact is here that it is the state of the nation which now engages us and not the state of the "internation." No matter how firmly convinced some may be that world leagues are the best medicines, we are up against the cold truth that the people will what they will, and just at this time it is not an adjudication of international rights, but an adjustment of the plain and everyday problems of living here in the United States that the people want.

At least we are settled on this score, that we want a restoration of normal prosperity. The next move is for all the people to adopt a national morale, a national mood; a mood in which we will all think and act together, in which we will all think of the interests of the whole nation and not of the individual; in which we will, by strict economy and prudent conduct, avoid the iniquity of waste, and by so doing help to restore the balance between supply and demand.

It is in the mood of the nations to conform to an international ideal that the hope of the league of nations lies. If such a thing is to be a future achievement we must demonstrate that it is possible for nations to act as individuals. The world today is not in common mood, but the people of this country must be.

POLICIES TOWARDS RUSSIA.

Those who listened to Winston Churchill, secretary of war for Great Britain, expound upon the virtues of British policy in Russia may be able to take some comfort out of his observations, but it is doubtful if Americans will be able to subscribe very largely to the theory that the best way to allow a nation to settle its affairs, assuming there is a fair chance of such settlement, is to arouse the antagonism of all the factions.

We read of bolshevist losses in the field; yet the bolshevists grow in number, and where they lose some small territory there is a larger gain to compensate. The answer is that foreign policy in Russia, which, as we have suggested, may give comfort in some quarters, is not settling the Russian question save in that it is driving the factions together. The Russians realize that there is only one hope for them; that they cannot be British, nor French, nor German, but must be Russian; that their future is Russia; that to make Russia fruitful and free they must cling together as against aggression.

Leave Russia alone and whatever iniquity there is in bolshevism will filter out in due time. There can be no more prosperity taken out of Russia than is put into it by hard work. The insincerity and unsupported demagogy must fail. The Russians must find this out for themselves. But they cannot fight out their domestic misunderstandings with the other nations menacing them. For mutual protection they must fly to a common standard. For the present that standard may be held up by bolshevism, but bolshevism is not the soul of that rallying point. It is only incidental. The secret of that rally is the love of Russians for Russia.

Russians will not consider the politics of the individual when the nation is in danger any more than will Americans. First to be served is the nation. Then they will iron out their political ruffles.

Mr. Churchill may say the British policy of meddling is the victorious one. But as long as the Russians feel the bayonet point of the outsider they will not be attracted toward it, but be driven back into the resentful Russian mass.

The powers meddled with France when it was in the throes of domestic adjustment and they were sorry for many years thereafter. Let us beware of a Napoleon out of Russia.

WHAT MEXICO OWES THE WORLD.

Adjustment of conditions in Mexico is not an exclusive interest. It is of particular interest to every person, not only in the United States but in the whole world, who owns or derives benefit from the operation of a machine.

Machinery is a world tool. It cannot run without oil. Oil supplies are dwindling. It is a matter of time when we must begin husbanding. Without machinery production lags and with this comes hard times, famine.

So long as oil is essential in production the world is going to have it, at least while it lasts. Public policy will not permit any combination, political or otherwise, to monopolize it or restrict its distribution. The hubs of the world are going to be greased and they are not going to creak while Mexico monopolizes the grease supply. Factories the world over must not be shut down because Carranza puts the lid on the oil wells.

There is no question of the right of a nation to turn its natural resources to its own advantage. But Mexican administration has never showed the slightest inclination to develop oil in a way calculated to confer benefits upon the people. The whole history of oil production in Mexico has been that of individual—that is to say official—graft.

Carranza speaks truthfully when he declares the Mexican people have been despoiled of their inherent rights. But they have been despoiled by their chiefs and not by foreigners. Had the oil industry in Mexico awaited Mexican initiative it would still be undiscovered, and a further proof of the Mexican failure to improve natural resources lies in that the whole oil industry has been developed by outsiders.

It is beside the mark to say foreign interests are after profit. There would be no profit if there were not a world-wide demand for oil. It is this demand for grease for wagon hubs, oil for machinery, gasoline for power—lubrication for the whole system of production—that makes necessary the exploitation of Mexican wells.

It is foolish to suggest that any individual interest has a superior concern for Mexican oil production. The British navy depends on oil, the French navy, machinery the world over. Cut off these supplies and we shall see how much longer Carranza will confiscate.

The Mexican problem is still our problem; will be until the deficiency of oil becomes acute in other nations; then it will be their problem; ours greatly multiplied, for there will be interference in Mexico that we will have difficulty in adjusting.

Mexico is meddling with a world supply of a world essential. As trustee for the meddler we are bound to take action. If we do not, we will find our trusteeship fractured.

SEGREGATING THE MORONS.

Three good thoughts have come out of the conference of experts dealing with the treatment of mental misfits:

A house to house canvass for morons.
Modern legislation.
Publicity.

If we are to deal with morons, it follows that we must isolate them before they have the opportunity of impressing the need for their isolation by new and atrocious crimes. The appeal to the authorities to "do something" does not arise except when the public mind is inflamed by some hideous crime. Then there is a cry for regulation. But this is not the time for a hot headed and intemperate scramble through the city in a search for mental misfits. Violence breeds violence. Real regulation cannot come of indignation, but out of cool advisement.

The isolation of morons should be carried out only after a scientific examination of suspects, thorough and thoughtful. This leads to the subject of modern legislation. Judge Olson says there has been no legislative action with reference to the care of the mentally unbalanced since 1843. Nearly every human regulation has changed since that date. Certainly the complexities of city life have arisen since. The close proximity in which city dwellers are thrown is one of the elements of modern life which contributes to the need for close regulation of disordered persons.

Hinged upon the need for legislation and a canvass for morons is the desirability for publicity as urged by Dr. Harold N. Moyer. In the segregation of morons, as in many other projects, we are prone to the habit of the Arkansan who couldn't repair the roof when it rained and found it unnecessary in fair weather.

Each recurring crime at the hands of a mental misfit arouses us to anger, but when that anger subsides we go along as formerly without giving a thought to the matter. Only when some life is sacrificed do we think.

It is not only necessary to give attention to the segregation of morons but necessary that it be done with care and foresight, and not in the heat of passion. While we may be intemperately prejudiced against the particular misfit who commits a crime, we must not permit that prejudice to operate to the injustice of those whose minds are disordered but as yet innocent of wrongdoing. Society must deal tenderly with them because their affliction prohibits their doing anything for themselves.

Their removal from society to a colony where healthful conditions obtain seems a rational solution of the problem. For on the one hand it is imperative that reasonable and law abiding citizens enjoy the right of immunity from surprising attacks, and on the other it is important that these disordered persons be treated with consideration and given every opportunity to correct themselves, if this be possible.

A SHOPWORN LEAGUE.

[From the New Republic.]

Mr. Wilson is like a man trying to sell the senate a second hand automobile. He admits it has its faults. But instead of discussing those faults in order to determine whether they are vital or trivial, he brandishes the original advertisements showing what a splendid car the unused machine was, and points with pride to the excellent trimmings. But on the question of whether the engine will go or not he is discreetly silent. Yet the purpose of a car is to go, and the purpose of a treaty of peace is to make peace.

HAVE YOU READ IT?

(Letter from Mark Twain to W. D. Howells.)

Vienna, May 12, 1899.

. . . For several years I have been intending to stop writing for print as soon as I could afford it. At last I can afford it, and have put the potboiler pen away. What I have been wanting is a chance to write a book without reserves—a book which should take account of no one's feelings, and no one's prejudices, opinions, beliefs, hopes, illusions, delusions; a book which should say my say, right out of my heart, in the plainest language and without a limitation of any sort. I judged that that would be an unimaginable luxury, heaven on earth.

It is under way now, and it is a luxury, an intellectual drunk! Twice I didn't start it right; and got pretty far in, both times, before I found it out. But I am sure it is started right this time. It is in tale-form. I believe I can make it tell what I think of Man, and how he is constructed, and what a shabby poor ridiculous thing he is, and how mistaken he is in his estimate of his character and powers and qualities and his place among the animals.

So far, I think I am succeeding. I let the madam into the secret day before yesterday, and locked the doors and read the opening chapters. She said—

"It is perfectly horrible—and perfectly beautiful!" Within the due limits of modesty, that is what I think.

I hope it will take me a year or two to write it, and that it will turn out to be the right vessel to contain all the abuse I am planning to dump into it. Yours ever, MARK.

WHY should a humorist yearn to show what a shabby, ridiculous thing is Man? Why? Because even a humorist (or leave out the word "even") loses his sense of humor now and then. A humorist is supposed to deal in the smiles-and-tears stuff. His stock in trade is the shabbiness and folly of the human race. When he leaves this he sets up another shop, and ceases to be, for the time, a humorist.

COSTLY HEALTH LESSON.

WHEN the Boer war was over the British took stock of the national vitality. They were far from satisfied. One royal commission recommended school inspection, school clinics, school lunches, and physical training in school, and a second recommended an anthropometric survey of the people.

The former report was accepted and acted upon, at least to a considerable extent. However, the British have no such machinery for universal physical training as have the Swedes, Norwegians, and Danes, or as the Greeks and Spartans had in their day, or even as the Germans have in their turnvereins for men. The recommendations for anthropometric measurements were pigeonholed.

Now that peace is being declared the British are again taking stock. Their sporting classes have always kept themselves in condition by playing athletic games, but the rank and file have suffered for opportunities for physical development. For one thing they intend to have a national department of health.

When Lloyd George was told by his minister of national service that neglect of health had lessened the size of the potential British army by one million men his mind was made up. He determined to work for a national department of health.

Another effect has been a revival of the report of the royal committee recommending anthropometric observations. One part of the anthropometry consists in measuring and weighing school children. The other part consists in weighing and measuring adults. The principal object in weighing and measuring children is to determine their rate of growth.

We have learned the lessons of baby growth very well. Most mothers know about the rate of growth of a baby for each month of life. Many of them measure and weigh their babies at short intervals. They know that if growth stops the baby is not thriving and they proceed to remedy matters. Knowledge that growth is the best index of well being in children between 2 and 16 years of age is not so widespread. A part of the proposal is that mothers and school teachers watch the growth of the children and that changes be made in diet or whatever else is at fault just as soon as possible after growth stops.

The weighing done during children's year proved that children of the same age are not of the same weight and height and no diet could be given which would make them so. The differences are due to differences in stock. The important thing to know is that it is normal for children to grow. If they stop growing something is the matter.

To determine the rate of growth children should be accurately weighed and measured at least once a year, and preferably more often. A good compromise is to weigh and measure the baby weekly during the first two months, twice a month during the next six months, monthly during the next sixteen months, six times a year during the third year, four times a year during the next four years, and twice a year thereafter.

As the result of a large number of measurements made in various parts of England and Wales by Dr. Arthur Greenwood the following tables have been made up. Percentage of yearly increases in height and weight of boys during the years from 4 through 16:

Year.	In height.	In weight.
Fourth	6.12	8.63
Fifth	5.31	8.14
Sixth	5.28	9.20
Seventh	5.16	9.85
Eighth	5.22	12.07
Ninth	3.78	7.5
Tenth	3.37	7.96
Eleventh	4.21	10.04
Twelfth	3.59	9.41
Thirteenth	2.17	6.52
Fourteenth	3.73	8.53
Fifteenth	4.43	12.07

Year.	In height.	In weight.
Fourth	6.79	10.42
Fifth	5.34	7.89
Sixth	5.17	9.27
Seventh	5.24	8.95
Eighth	4.87	10.28
Ninth	3.77	11.18
Tenth	3.88	8.51
Eleventh	4.76	11.64
Twelfth	4.66	12.73
Thirteenth	2.39	8.81
Fourteenth	3.73	9.63
Fifteenth	2.25	9.23

Perhaps more people are interested in the height in inches and weight in pounds of children of different ages. Greenwood gives a table in which are gathered together the results of ten surveys. The present survey gave the heights and weights of boys as follows:

Age-years.	Inches.	Pounds.
Three	36.5	32.7
Four	38.5	35.8
Five	40.7	38.7
Six	42.8	42.2
Seven	45.0	46.4
Eight	47.4	52.0
Nine	49.2	55.9
Ten	50.8	60.4
Eleven	53.0	66.4
Twelve	54.9	72.7
Thirteen	56.1	77.4
Fourteen	58.3	84.0
Fifteen	60.7	94.1

The same inquiry as to girls resulted as follows:

Age-years.	Inches.	Pounds.
Three	36.0	31.7
Four	38.4	35.0
Five	40.4	37.7
Six	42.5	41.3
Seven	44.8	44.9
Eight	46.9	46.6
Nine	48.7	54.1
Ten	50.6	58.7
Eleven	53.0	65.5
Twelve	55.5	73.9
Thirteen	56.8	80.4
Fourteen	58.9	88.1
Fifteen	60.3	96.2

Roughly speaking, children should gain about two inches in height a year and four pounds in weight a year until they reach 10 years of age. After that the gain in weight increases more rapidly attaining almost ten pounds by the fifteenth year.

Children under 7 years of age are a little more than one inch in length for each pound in weight. Children between 6 and 10 years of age are a little over a pound in weight for each inch of stature. Children 15 years of age weigh one and a half pounds for each inch in stature. By dividing the weight by the height the following table is made:

Age, years.	Boys.	Girls.
Three	.903	.881
Four	.926	.911
Five	.951	.933
Six	.986	.969
Seven	1.030	1.004
Eight	1.097	1.056
Nine	1.137	1.110
Ten	1.187	1.160
Eleven	1.256	1.236
Twelve	1.324	1.331
Thirteen	1.380	1.415
Fourteen	1.444	1.495
Fifteen	1.554	1.597

Boys are more solid than girls in every age period up to 15 years of age. This probably is because they have larger bones.

The recommendations for anthropometry include proposals for adults as well. They would weigh and measure them for one thing. The measurements include not only height and weight, but sitting height as well. The height is made up of the length of the legs, of the trunk, of the neck and the height of the head above the lower tip of the ears.

By measuring the height of the body in the sitting posture the length of the legs is eliminated and the length of those members has nothing to do with force and vitality. The height in the sitting posture should always be taken.

A further requirement is practiced by closer observers. They measure the distance from the navel to the pubic bones and that from the navel to the tip of the ensiform. The ensiform is the cartilage which projects toward the navel from the point where the ribs meet in the pit of the stomach. A third measurement is that of the distance from the ensiform to the notch at the top of the breastbone.

The sum of these three gives the distance from the top of the breastbone to the top of the pelvic bones in front and is the length of that part of the trunk containing the vital organs. The upper part gives the length of the chest barrel. It is in this space that the heart and lungs lie.

The mid-section gives the length of the upper abdomen. In this space lie the liver, the stomach and the greater part of the kidneys, pancreas and spleen and a portion of the large intestine. The organs of this area have to do with digestion and nutrition. In the lower segment are the remaining organs of digestion and nutrition.

The neck is on a par with the legs. There is no important organ in the neck except the thyroid gland and that is too small to be reckoned with in making measurements. The circumference of the chest is taken before and during expansion. This measurement is commonly given more attention than it deserves. The circumference of the chest is of importance if account is taken of its length, otherwise it is liable to be misleading. A great expansion is largely a trick learned by practice and does not denote either wind, endurance or great lung capacity.

In some tests the amount of air which can be blown from the lungs is measured by a spirometer. Blowing the spirometer is also a good deal of a trick to be learned and, therefore, not a measure of lung capacity.

A better method is to take the pulse and respiration rates while quiet and again after the doing of prescribed stunts. The real test of wind is the increase in pulse rate and breathing rate and in type of breathing and of pulse after considerable physical exertion.

Another part of the proposal is periodic physical examination and testing of organs. And another is examination for disqualifying defects. These proposals are not so radical as they seem. Many industries are using them and have been for several years.

TAKE UP WITH ALDERMEN.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Argyle street between Lincoln and Robey streets is in teribile condition. What steps can be taken to have some improvements made? C. A. B.

Argyle street between Lincoln and Robey streets is an unimproved street. I would suggest that he take the matter up with the aldermen of the ward, to institute proceedings for the improvement of same by special assessment.

F. S. MITCHELL,
Superintendent of Streets.

A HOLDOVER TENANT.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—On May 1, 1917, I rented a flat and signed a lease running for two years expiring April 30, 1919. About May 1 this year the landlord notified me if he did any cleaning he would have to raise my rent, and if I did my own cleaning I could have the flat for the same price as the previous two years. Nothing was said about a lease.

About May 10 I notified the landlord I would do my own cleaning and he accepted rent for May. About June 1 the landlord said he wanted the flat Sept. 1, 1919. I have not at any time received any written notice to move and have paid my rent and got a receipt each month.

Can the landlord force me to move by Sept. 1, or how long can I stay? A. R.

You are a tenant holding over, and are in the premises as a tenant from year to year, we assume, in which case you cannot be compelled to move before the end of the year. To terminate the tenancy at the end of the year, either party will have to give sixty days' notice. The statute only covers the notice required to terminate.

THE FRIEND OF THE SOLDIER

The Friend of the Soldier will coöperate with the war risk insurance bureau of the treasury department, 1307 Stock Exchange building, Chicago, and with the committee of the Chicago Bar association on legal assistance to soldiers and sailors, 105 West Monroe street.

Address inquiries to Friend of the Soldier, "Chicago Tribune." Answers to as many as possible will be published in this department. To insure a personal reply an addressed and stamped envelope should be inclosed.

No attention will be paid to anonymous letters.

INSURANCE EFFECTIVE.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 6.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I am going to convert my insurance to a twenty year endowment policy, and want to know when I would have to start to pay the new premium. Can you tell me, too, if the twenty year term starts from the time I convert my insurance or in five years after peace is signed, or from the time I took the war insurance in the army? B. I.

Premiums are due on the first day of each month.

The insurance takes effect on the first of the month succeeding the month in which the application is made for the converted form, provided the premium on your present term insurance, which is payable on the first of the month, has been paid. If the premium on the term insurance has not been paid on the first of the month, the converted insurance will take effect on the first day of the current month, provided that the premium for the converted insurance for this month has been paid.

PREMIUM DUE.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—I was discharged in July; now is the premium of my insurance paid for August or was a payment due Aug. 1? I am carrying another insurance, so have decided that a thousand dollar policy is all I can afford to keep up with the government. I am going to convert my policy to a twenty payment life; am 26 years old. Please give me the rate of payment if you have it. Suppose I should pay it by the year, will they make any reduction? How much? D. W.

The premium was due Aug. 1. On a twenty payment life policy for $1,000 your premium rate would be $1.95 per month. There is a small difference made in paying by the year; the annual premium is $23.40 if paid by the month, but if paid in a lump sum it would be $23.04.

COMPENSATION TO CHILDREN.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—A case has come to my attention where a man died in the service leaving two children, who are both too young to work. They are being taken care of by relatives who want to know if the children are not entitled to some compensation from the government. The mother of the children is dead. Will you please give me this information, as I am anxious to be of service to the children of an old friend. H. L. J.

As the deceased left no widow, but two children, the war risk insurance act provides that the children be paid a total monthly compensation of $30. We suggest that you communicate with the compensation section of the bureau of war risk insurance, Washington, D. C., stating the case briefly and giving as many facts as possible about the man's rank and organization to which he belonged, also his army serial number, present address of the children, etc.

CAMP SEVIER.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Who was Camp Sevier named for? Near what city in South Carolina is the camp located? We always addressed any mail just to the camp without the name of the city. What troops trained there during this recent war? L. B. K.

Camp Sevier gets its name in memory of Col. John Sevier, a member of the North Carolina militia in 1777-1781, who was later brigadier general in the United States army. He distinguished himself in the battle of Kings Mountain, N. C., in 1780, and was a member of congress from that state and then the first governor of Tennessee.

The camp is located at Greenville, S. C. The 30th division trained there, which was composed of troops mainly from the states of Tennessee and North and South Carolina.

ANSWERS.

George Franklin—The 5th and 6th regiments of marines will probably be demobilized in Quantico, Va. The 5th regiment landed in New York Aug. 3 on the George Washington.

Ethel Rice—The 303d railhead supply detachment is not a part of any division, but is assigned to the service of supply. It is not ordered home yet.

Rena Haines—The 1st ammunition train belongs to the 1st division, which will probably be the last one to come home.

Frances Johnson—The 501st refrigerating plant company is demobilized. It came home the early part of July.

Kenneth L. Dooley, Charleston, Ill.—Bakery company 314 was stationed in Nevers, France, but has now come home and the men have all been released.

COOK COUNTY ROADS.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—THE TRIBUNE in an editorial under the title "Build the Road Wide Enough" stated among other things, that "some of the Cook county roads are so narrow that it is with extreme difficulty that two loads of hay are able to pass. In Iowa, under the new road program, highways are to be of standard width at eighteen feet, with a shoulder or dirt extension of three feet. On some Cook country roads to permit a wheel to run off the concrete is to invite disaster."

From the above it appears that the impression prevails that the standard width of road of Cook county is less than eighteen feet, and that the standard shoulder or dirt extension is less than three feet.

If there is such an impression, I wish to correct it, and to inform you that the standard width of pavement in this county is eighteen feet, and no road has been paved by Cook county of a width less than eighteen feet.

The standard width of shoulder or dirt extension is six feet, and only in exceptional cases has this been reduced, and then reduced to a minimum of three feet. In one case, on Dempster street, a pavement was being laid under a state contract, and the contractor abandoned the work before he constructed the shoulders. In this case, however, work is now resumed by the state, and shoulders are being constructed at a width of four feet.

GEORGE A. QUINLAN,
Superintendent of Highways.

"WHO'S LOONEY NOW?"

Chicago, Aug. 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—July 1st has passed and gone, and August is with us, and yet the Utopia which was expected to arrive with the advent of national prohibition—that is, by the prohibitionists, reformers, religious fanatics, and others—seems missing somewhere.

On the contrary, under "dry rule" we have had one of the worst months for a very long time.

Murder, strikes, race riots, and general industrial unrest, have marked the first month of prohibition.

I rather fancy our esteemed friend Samuel Gompers is quietly saying to himself, "I told you so," and many of us who were in thorough sympathy with his article in McClure's Magazine, would like to add "Who's looney now?"

One Gompers is worth fifty Bryans to this country today, and the sooner these idealistic reformers wake up to the fact that the word "prohibit" has no place in the constitution of the United States, the better it will be for them—and all of us. H. G. W.

PRAISE FOR THE ALGONQUIN CAMP.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It was my good fortune to pay an unexpected visit to the Algonquin Camp and Convalescent Hospital recently. The natural beauty of the location was enhanced by the immaculate housekeeping, both indoors and around the cottages. There was an excellent demonstration that flies may be avoided, even in the region of stables.

Many of the working force of twenty-nine have been at some time women who have been sent out for a holiday or convalescence. It is a striking, practical course in domestic science and home sanitation to live there for two weeks, to know the luxury of an individual bed with clean sheets, to have fresh air and good food, to see and to be a part of the good management of this camp.

The executive genius in the organization and detail is undoubtedly the superintendent, Mrs. Collar.

SARAH M. HOBSON, M. D.

CO-OPERATION AS A WEAPON.

Albert Lea, Minn., July 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Why don't your food committee adopt something practical if they want to reduce the high cost of living? It may be notoriety is what is wanted. It is believed the people want something practical.

Coöperation has cured the evil of profiteering to perfection in one town of this county. The people have their coöperative bank, stores, creamery, grain elevator; every kind of business is conducted on the coöperative plan and has been for over twenty-five years. They started the first creamery in Minnesota on the coöperative plan and it never has been unsatisfactory to any one, members or not. The name of that village is Clarke's Grove, Freeborn county, Minn. Your mayor can verify what I say by writing there.

C. H. FARNSWORTH.

AMERICA AND COLOMBIA.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wish to take exception to the editorial entitled "Paying Colombia and Smirching Roosevelt." No matter how much we boast about the good we did for the world when we built the Panama canal, it is certain that we did Colombia an injury.

When the city wishes to gain control of a piece of land which is privately owned, does it forcibly oust the owner of the land and force him to give up his property without recompense? No. Such actions are conceded to be unjust. The city always pays the owner what it considers to be a fair price for the land. Yet in the case of Colombia, we did what amounts to the same thing as taking her land away without paying her for it. It is true that she acted hoggishly when she refused the offer we first made her; but that in no way justifies us in the way we finally took the land. Colombia has some recompense due her, and $25,000,000 is not too much—in fact it is $15,000,000 less than the amount we thought the land was worth, back in 1904.

And as for smirching Roosevelt—is it impossible for a human being to make mistakes? And, once made, are we to uphold those mistakes simply in an effort to make him appear infallible?

DONALD E. BEAM.

THE KAISER'S DEFENSE

By Carl W. Ackerman

[Copyright: 1919: By Public Ledger Co.]

FOUR years ago, on the 31st of July, William of Hohenzollern, the "all highest war lord" and German emperor from his headquarters in Charleville, France, gave a "manifesto to the German people," in which he said:

"One year has elapsed since I was obliged to call the German people to arms. An unprecedented time of bloodshed has befallen Europe and the world. Before God and history my conscience is clear. I did not will this war."

This year, on the fifth anniversary of the beginning of the greatest war in history, Wilhelm the coward, exiled in the castle of a Dutchman at Amerongen, stands indicted before the world, "for a supreme offense against international morality and the sanctity of treaties."

Guilty, according to the verdict of public opinion in allied and associated countries, formed after five years of careful consideration of the evidence presented by Germany and nearly every government in the world, what will be his defense? Who will defend him? Will he submit to a trial? What proof does the former king of Prussia and German emperor have that he did not "will this war"?

Of course, it is a simple matter to argue "around the circle" about the guilt of the ex-emperor. He started the war, caused the neutrality of Belgium to be violated, ordered the Lusitania torpedoed, was responsible for the execution of Edith Cavell, sanctioned ruthless submarine warfare, and ruled and reigned in Germany during that nation's four years' activity as a belligerent outlaw. Therefore, we are inclined to argue, he is guilty of the charges preferred by the peace conference. He will be tried, convicted, and punished. His trial will set an international precedent, and for the first time in history the rulers of all countries will learn that they are responsible to a higher tribunal than any within their own countries.

In deliberately setting out to write about the kaiser's defense, however, my object has not been to suggest probabilities or possibilities, but rather to interpret recent events within Germany as they bear upon the proposed trial of the former emperor; to state what may be some of the chief questions of the defense; to indicate some of the officials and personages of Germany and Austria who may be witnesses for the accused, and to show how the hand of death has removed already from the hall of justice of Europe some of the chief witnesses, old associates of the kaiser.

"When he takes the witness stand," may appear a rash prophecy in view of the reported statement of William II. that he would commit suicide before submitting to the humiliation of a trial. And did not the former crown prince remark that "one's honor, you know, might compel father to do it"? All of which reminds one of Peer Gynt, who says in act IV. of Ibsen's great drama:

Now I have fathomed my destiny's riddle.
Now 'tis but persevering through thick and thin!
It's excusable, sure, if I hold up my head,
And feel my worth as a man, Peer Gynt.
Also called human life's emperor.
I'll never more tread in the paths of the living.
The present is not worth so much as a shoe-sole;
All faithless and marrowless the doings of men;
Their souls have no wings and their deeds no weight.

But Peer didn't take his own life, and as for Wilhelm—well, he is like his former troops. They did not like to die alone, but rather preferred it en masse, which they called "mass formiations." The modern "human life's emperor" will, if he has not already, change his mind as Peer did and finally conclude that "a conscience at ease is a pillow of down" and face the court of international justice to rest his own mind.

SUICIDE is not only a short cut to eternity, but a quick proof of guilt, and, judging from the "activities" reported from time to time from Amerongen, the former emperor is not preparing to do anything startling or sensational to himself. What he is doing, when not making souvenirs of logs, is preparing his defense.

Almost all indications from both Holland and Germany point to this conclusion, and the fact that the German assembly at Weimar originally voted 237 to 138 to sign the peace treaty with reservations regarding the proposed trial of the emperor and Germany's guilt show how strong is the movement within Germany to make the kaiser's case at the trial that of Germany. This is the first important step in the kaiser's defense plans. In preparing for his trial he could not have had a more auspicious and encouraging beginning.

Of the three essentials to Germany during the war—people, business, and army—two remain. The result has been that, with the exception of the president and premier, most cabinet officials, members of the peace delegation, and diplomats appointed since the armistice by the new government have been men who served previously under the kaiser.

From Count Rantzau, who was the imperial minister to Denmark, and Haniel von Haimhausen, former counselor of the Germany embassy in Washington, to the advisers of the peace delegation, Dr. Bernhard Dernberg, Dr. Solf, Count von Bernstorff, and others, the representatives of the German republic have been appointees, in the past, of the former Hohenzollern monarch. The most noticeable thing in the new government has been the entire absence, with the possible exception of Field Marshal von Hindenburg, of any military officials from that powerful group of men who surrounded the kaiser before and during the war.

These former officials of the kaiser who now serve the new government have been and are still at heart loyal to William II., while the majority Socialists, who nominally control the government, have never, until the day of the revolution, been against him personally, although they have been antagonistic to the military influences which surrounded him. The business interests, also, which supported the kaiser, are lending their assistance to the new republic, perhaps only because of selfish reasons, but these organizations, such as Krupps, the A. E. G., Siemann-Schuckert, Kunst & Albert, Deutschebank, Dresdener bank, Thyssen, and the former big steamship companies, which were the financial and organizing power behind the kaiser, remain today the chief backbone of the republic.

Even before the United States became a belligerent and throughout the two year period I was in Germany from 1915 to 1917, as a correspondent, one heard almost daily and among all classes of people the saying that "the army will win the war and the diplomats lose it." The military always opposed the foreign office and officials of the latter always held the leaders of the general staff in contempt.

This division of opinion within Germany was one of the foundations for the American policy of separating the Germany government from the German people, and throughout this controversy the kaiser was the butt of all opposition and condemnation because every dispute was carried to the ears of the former imperial master. Until December, 1916, the kaiser attempted to play both factions against each other, supporting at first the diplomats and then his military advisers, but in January, 1917, he "cleaned out" his official household; surrounded himself only with military advisers, and appointed Count Hertling as chancellor, to be a pawn in Gen. Ludendorff's hands.

AT the time the United States entered the war the kaiser was completely under the influence of the military party, and he remained the puppet of the warriors until he motored into Holland as a defeated war lord.

Immediately the foreign office group of politicians and leaders came to the forefront and since then they have been the political mainstay of the government, advising, guiding, and directing the Socialist executives. With his army defeated and discredited on the battlefield and throughout the world and limited in size and power by the terms of the peace treaty William the Second, to obtain witnesses in his favor must return to the diplomats and foreign office and take a public stand against his own military party if he has any intention of justifying himself and his reign in the eyes of the German people, or presenting a case in self-defense at his trial. There is no other alternative and the ex-kaiser knows it.

This situation is what makes the recent dispatches from Holland significant. These reports relate of visits to Amerongen by former Secretary of State Zimmerman, who was under secretary of state previous to and almost throughout the entire war, and by Dr. Kriege, the aged legal adviser to the foreign office. Zimmerman and Kriege know more about the diplomatic events leading up to the declaration of war; they probably know more of the secret history of modern German diplomacy than any other men in Germany, with the sole exception of Von Bethmann-Hollweg. They have been and are, undoubtedly, still loyal to the old monarch, and their visit to him in exile must mean that the former kaiser is "sounding" the foreign office as to the attitude the diplomats will take toward his defense.

With the national assembly, the business interests, and the foreign office "lined up" on his side, William the Second will be ready for trial. He will be prepared to make his defense the defense of Germany, his trial the trial of Germany, his cause the fatherland's. And if he succeeds in this it does not matter what the verdict and punishment are, for William the Second will go down in German history as "William the Martyr," not as "William the Coward."

In reading some of the documents which I brought from Germany I find on the first page of the War Chronicle, an official monthly propaganda magazine published by the former German government in August, 1914, this paragraph:

"The name by which this war will become known to history is already recognized. It can only be called the German war, and the position of Germany as a nation is its object."

In another issue there is a speech by Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the former chancellor, in which he is quoted as saying:

"The world must know that no one shall harm a hair of a German head with impunity."

It was in the reichstag he was speaking.

"The exterior responsibility must be laid in the hands of the men of Russia, who ordered and carried out the general mobilization of the entire Russian army; the interior responsibility, however, lies in the hands of the government of Great Britain. [Lively applause.]

"The Belgian neutrality, which England pretended to protect, is a sham." [Renewed lively applause.]

THE former imperial chancellor is quoted at this point because he is not only the most unpopular man in Germany but the man upon whose shoulders German statesmen, from the kaiser to Zimmermann, are preparing to place the responsibility, shifting it from the ex-emperor and all others. Did not the German memorandum itself, which was presented at Versailles, attempt to place all blame upon Von Bethmann-Hollweg?

Of all German statesmen now living who served Germany prior to and during the war, no one man possesses more information and evidence about the kaiser than his former chancellor. What should be more natural, then, than for Von Bethmann-Hollweg to come forward and ask the president of the peace conference to try him instead of the ex-emperor?

This is the cleverest and most important move in the defense of the former monarch. By placing the blame upon the former imperial chancellor the kaiser expects to escape himself, and by having Von Bethmann-Hollweg voluntarily offer to assume the burden of defense in the trials against German statesmen and German policy, the former ruler intended to delay the prosecution of himself until he thinks the world demand for justice will lapse.

Of course, Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg will be called to testify. He was present at virtually every important conference before and during the early days of the war. He knew all the information in possession of the government. He received all reports, military and political, and, above all, in 1916, he led the fight against the military party around the monarch.

He knows the final decision in all matters of state were made by the ex-emperor. He knows who influenced the ruler. He knows whose reports reached him. He was the official spokesman of the kaiser and his government. He made all explanations and signed all public and private treaties and documents.

Either as a witness for the kaiser or as the man to assume all responsibility he is destined to be the chief figure at the trial next to his imperial master.

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, at 62 years of age, is to be made the "goat," according to the kaiser's plans of defense.

To a greater degree than one might expect after a revolution, William of Honhenzollern also has a loyal press in Germany. The Lokal Anzeiger, the so-called "kaiser's paper," published by his intimate friend, August Schorl; the Tages Zeitung of Count zu Reventlow; the Kreuz-Zeitung, the Taeglische Rundschau, the Cologne Gazette, Hamburger Nachrichten, and the Germania of the Catholic party, all may be expected to back him in his defense, just as many of them are already advocating his return to Germany and to the throne.

FORTUNATELY for the kaiser-who-was, death already has removed many of the leading men whose testimony might be exceedingly incriminating, especially under cross-examination. Count Stefan Tisza, who was minister president of Hungary and the dominating power behind the former Emperor Franz Josef, the man who ordered Count Berchtold, the Vienna foreign minister, to send the ultimatum to Serbia, who was assassinated during the Hungarian revolution.

The German ambassador to Austria-Hungary, who transmitted all communications between Vienna and Berlin, and who was sent to the former dual monarchy with full instructions in the days when the two kaisers were preparing for war, is dead. So is Gen. Von Moltke, former minister of war and chief of the German general staff, who was present with the emperor at all conferences at the beginning of the war, and who had charge of all military preparations for an European war.

Alfred Ballin, former director general of the Hamburg-American line, an intimate adviser of the former emperor, died only recently. Count Czernin, former Vienna cabinet official, adviser of Franz Josef, and the late Emperor Charles, and Admiral Von Holtzendorff, former chief of the German admiralty staff, have passed away from the political stage of Europe since the revolution, and the two governors-general of Belgium under the occupation, Von Bissing and Von Der Goltz, are no more among the living.

But there still remain innumerable men who may testify at the trial both for and against the chief defendant. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, still the idol of Germany; Gen. Ludendorff, Gen. Von Falkenhayn, chief of the German general staff during the battles of Verdun; Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz, Field Marshal Mackensen, Gottlieb Von Jagow, secretary of state for foreign affairs throughout the controversy with the United States; Dr. Karl Helfferich, minister of finance; Prince Henry of Prusisa, and the crown prince remain to face the international tribunal which will fix the responsibility for the war and pronounce the punishment.

The kaiser's reply to the indictment of the international tribunal to be appointed to try him will be of course, "Not guilty."

All criminals make that their first plea. William of Hohenzollern will not be an exception. But what proof will he have to substantiate his plea? The question is easily answered. He will have all the mass of "evidence" which the German government used to flood the world throughout the war to "prove" Germany's innocence. He will have opinion upon opinion of German "international law" experts and testimony of his companions and associates, who are still loyal, but "All the king's horses and all the king's men will not be able to put Kaiser Wilhelm's realm together again." For the ex-emperor will be convicted by the testimony of other Germans, scores, if not hundreds, of them, who know that his decision was final in all questions, such as Prince Lichnowsky, Herr Muehlon of Krupps, and others.

He sanctioned the policies of the foreign office. He approved Gen. Von Moltke's plans for the invasion of Belgium. He gave his authority to the orders of Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz, and although the man who commanded the submarine which torpedoed the Lusitania is dead, Von Tirpitz is not, and he can bear witness.

"GUILTY," says the world today. "Guilty," it will repeat tomorrow. "Guilty" will be the sentence of the court and "guilty" will be the verdict of history.

The kaiser has been a strategist all his life. Even in Holland, an exile, he is still a strategist. With the same cunning he displayed in plotting the domination of Europe he is now planning his own defense. Already he has made the following moves in an effort to checkmate the world in its attempt to charge him with moral responsibility for the war:

First—He has won a majority of the national assembly, as indicated by the first vote on the peace treaty.

Second—He has caused Von Bethmann-Hollweg to assume officially the blame.

Third—He has the support of the business interests.

Fourth—The military party has pledged its support, through the officers' union, and has already urged the Dutch government not to turn him over to the allied and associated powers.

Fifth—The leading newspapers of Berlin and other German cities support him.

Sixth—Foreign office diplomats are ready to back him.

Seventh—Death has removed some of the most objectionable German witnesses against the kaiser, such as Count Tisza of Hungary.

And with these seven accomplishments the kaiser is now endeavoring to escape appearance at the trial entirely so he may never have to take the witness stand.

But despite all these preparations for his defense, William of Hohenzollern stands today convicted before the bar of public opinion of the world, and all that is necessary is for the court to pronounce the verdict to make this the official pronouncement of history, and the defense of the ex-emperor will be the last opportunity of any monarch to justify past practices of unlimited autocratic power before the "rising tide of democracy" of today and tomorrow.

FROM Lieut. Harlan Kauffman, who always keeps tab on the Tabloid, I have received a copy of John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln." The play has been the sensation of the London stage this year so far as the "intellectuals" are concerned. How it has been acted I can only judge from the criticisms which I have read and from the wholly sincere reactions which Lieut. Kauffman records. He, as a typical Illinoisian, devoted almost sentimentally to Lincoln and in a lesser way, but no less sincerely, devoted to the almost uncannily fine life of Lincoln which Lord Charnwood wrote, was a trifle upset at the play as it was presented. Charnwood, very sensibly says that after all the play gives to an English audience a sense of the grandeur of Lincoln's character and therefore accomplishes its mission. That sense of grandeur is not breathed forth from the play as one reads it, although there is a definite atmosphere of the sincere admiration which the dramatist must have had for Abraham Lincoln. It is obviously an acting and not a reading play. It has an impossible Negro character in it, who talks, as Mr. Kauffman says, "perfect half-breed redskin," and many of the other characters talk a cross between good London English and the kind of American that Englishmen who haven't been in this country think we talk. But Mr. Drinkwater disarms criticism by a pleasant note preceding the play, in which he says that he is writing not as an historian nor as political philosopher but as a dramatist, and that as an Englishman and not "a citizen of the great country that gave Lincoln birth" he makes no attempt to achieve local color.

The Houghton Mifflin company has brought out an American edition of the play, and arrangements have been made for its productions as a play in New York in the fall.

"Okewood of the Secret Service" [McBride], by Valentine Williams, is a real thriller. Though tales of German agents, secret service scrapes, unwilling but beautiful spies, and "the papers" aren't so convincing as they were a year ago, they are really quite as stimulating to the mind that takes its thrills on paper. Valentine Williams has done a good job of gathering sticks to light under our old Dobbin minds.

You are right, RD. C., "The Years Between" [Doubleday Page] would have attracted attention even without Rudyard Kipling's name on the title page. It is a volume of poetry which is composed of many bits of devastating shrapnel, hand grenades of high explosive power, but you are wrong, I think, in saying that it will live as a monument to Kipling even higher than the "Departmental Ditties." The Kipling of "Departmental Ditties" was neither a protagonist nor a proclaiming philosopher. He was a young man, scarcely turned 20, with a zest for life and a martial sense of rhythm. What he wrote in that mood—both prose and poetry—will always be the finest things he has done. With his acquisition of a staid English squiredom his martial sense of rhythm became a bit mechanical, much less spontaneous, like the precise military stride of the old army man as compared with the conscious snap of the young officer's walk, and his zest for life became a zest for better life. For many years now he has been, in his poetry, at least, consciously working for reform of one sort or another, keenly critical of whatever seemed in need of remodeling. After all, however, poetry is so much a matter of what the individual reader prefers that nothing but the sum of the preference of the readers of Kipling can settle the question of the comparative permanent value of the two volumes.

Bertrand Russell's "Proposed Roads to Freedom" [Holt] is quite safe for you to read, Elsa B. It won't convert you to bolshevism! Mr. Russell has written a remarkable and a sound book on the essence of Socialism, Anarchism and Syndicalism.

You know those clever advertisements of a smart monthly magazine that picture a dinner table of a futuristic smart set open mouthed with interest at the golden—one suspects that they are of a more precious and rare metal even than the metaphoric gold—words flowing from the tongue of the guest who was forehanded enough to read that particular smart magazine and thus equip himself for any fate or dessert. Read "Fin de Siecle" or "The Compleat Wrangler" and you're the Jack Dempsey of all comers. Now comes Amy Lowell and gives us a "Bookshelf of Modern Poets" and settles all our groping questions about modern poetry. Fifty-four volumes, English and American, are included in the collection, and although it isn't a list which I would choose in its entirety, I must admit that it is a comprehensive and a fair one. "A Bookshelf of Modern Poets" will soon be on sale, sponsored by the Doubleday-Page company. Of course, one may buy the separate volumes one lacks to make the shelf complete. You will probably find that you already own many of the books. If you would like the full list, you may get it from Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, New York, or I will send it to you if you send a stamped, addressed envelope.

"The Life of the Party" [Doran], another of the Irvin S. Cobb tabloid books, is just the proper pill to dull one's senses to a beastly short trip in a stuffy train. It is the story of a man, who, as a replica of himself at three [years, not a. m.] finds himself at three [a. m., not years] a wanderer on the face of New York's globe, minus his charitable overcoat, robbed and a sniffling cold. His adventures are too good to spoil by even suggesting a Rx. Dose. Take complete at one time.

Do you remember Biltmore Oswald, the demon sailor boy? He's said his last say. In "Out O' Luck" [Stokes] he tells how he was out o' luck in not getting in the real fight and how he was out o' luck in not getting out o' the navy. It's just as funny as Biltmore Oswald, and no funnier. J. Thorne Smith Jr. isn't one of the world's greatest humorists.

THE STARS AND STRIPES, the official newspaper of the A. E. F., which made for our army in France a spot in the week which was forever U. S., is now only an indelible memory. The cartoons which C. LeRoy Baldridge as official artist of the Stars and Stripes, drew with such rare skill, amounting at times to undeniable genius, with such keen forward-looking observation, with such sincere convictions of the horror of destruction and the beauty of the love of man for his fellow men, are to be preserved in a volume which will bring back to the soldier the days both glorious and ghastly, and will give to the civilian a remarkably vivid picture of what he might have seen if he had been there. "I Was There," the book is to be called. Roy Baldridge—as all of us who knew him here in Chicago must always think of him—was peculiarly "there."

Roy went over to Belgium the first year of the war and followed the German path of horror. The sketches he made were not remarkable. He was too torn and anguished by it all to make creation possible, I think. He came home loathing war and yet fiery with the knowledge that he must do something about it and that immediately. He went over to France in the American ambulance service, and, characteristically, elected to drive a camion instead of an ambulance because few wanted to drive camions. He served there until his talent was discovered by the French, and he was made an official battlefront artist by the French. When the United States went into the war he became a private in the infantry—another characteristically splendid choice. He has come home, by the way, still a private in the infantry of the United States army, because he felt—as all of the working staff of the Stars and Stripes felt—that their work on the newspaper should be without the reward of commissions. His work as official cartoonist took him along the entire American front and through all of the big American engagements.

Roy Baldridge is now on his way to China for six months to forget the last few years. Just before he sailed he wrote to me one of the most gripping paragraphs about war that I have ever read. I share it for its honesty and fineness. "I'm still not quite easy about that book of mine. I'm always afraid that the person looking over those sketches will get an idea that war is picturesque and that soldiers look happy. I haven't shown enough mud and rot and dead men. And I haven't shown the inside of the minds of those soldiers. I haven't shown rotten barrack room taps conversation, and boredom and Prussian-American officer and wasted years of life. I remember after the Chemin-des-Dames battle going near where the old Fort Malmaison was before shells from both sides had reduced it to powder, and seeing shell holes, big craters, filled with decaying men, Germans and French all mixed up together, legs and arms and heads. And brains. Flopped down in the mud inside their clothes like loose dirt in gunny sacks. No anatomy left. Toes where heels ought to be and chins underneath breast bones. Especially awful to an artist who had made a study of beautiful bodies. My hands were paralyzed and my mind numb. How could I draw a mass like that? It was too terrible to represent. Yet THAT was war. And a grinning doughboy is not war."

"I Was There" is going to be, unless I'm a poor prohpet, the most popular book of sketches ever printed. "I Was There" will be out Oct. 1.

Robert M. McBride & Co. will publish this fall a book called "The New Decameron," by Various Hands. (No, it isn't a ouija board product.) Guy Holt, the man who tied the bell to Cabell and who, with Harry Steger, was the original booster of Joseph Conrad and who is now the editorial head of the McBride company, says that he was telling a man in Cleveland about the book the other day and the man said: "The New Decameron, that oughta be interesting. But say! I thought this guy Bocasho was dead!"

Dr. Oscar Levy, the editor of the English translation of the complete works of Friedrich Nietzsche, has written a book of essays which Alfred A. Knopf will publish this year. Dr. Levy has not been since 1913 a particularly popular writer in Germany. After the appearance of the introduction which he wrote to "The Renaissance," by Count Gobineau, in which he predicted the war and its outcome, Dr. Levy was furiously attacked in Germany.

William T. Clowery, who stole a leather bound set of O. Henry "because he was hungry," and who was sentenced by Judge Newcomer to the house of correction, said he had one fault to find with the proceedings. He resented being accused of petty larceny. He said that seriously reflected upon the artistic understanding of Chicago police.

"Rezanov," by Gertrude Atherton, and "Poems and Prose," by Ernest Dowson, are the newest additions to the modern library [Boni and Liveright]. "Rezanov" contains an introduction by William Marion Reedy, in which he says he likes this story best of all her books. The Arthur Symons Memoir introduces the Dowson volume.

PAINT-PALETTE CRITICISM

By James Gibbons Huneker

CONSIDER the painters. Time and time again we read or hear of the indignant denunciation by some artist whose canvas has been ripped up in print. If the offender happens to be a man who doesn't paint, then he is called an ignoramus; if he paints, etches, or sketches, he comes well within the Balzac definition—a man who has failed, and, miserable imbecile, is only jealous of work which he could never have achieved; hence his criticism, not creation. As for literary critics, it may be set down that they are ever "suspect." They write; ergo, they are bound to be unjust. The dilemma has branching horns. Is there no midway spot, no safety ground, for that weary Ishmael, the professional critic, where he may escape retaliatory sting?

Let us come to Sir Joshua Reynolds, whose "Discourses" are invaluable and to be taken well salted, for they are incrusted with fine old English prejudices. A magnificent saying of his and one appreciated by the entire artistic tribe is his ejaculation: "Damn paint!" Raphael Mengs wrote intelligently of his art. We wish that Velasquez had left us some record of his procedure. What William Blake said of other great artists threw much light on the mental processes of William Blake. Ingres uttered criticisms, principally in a rage, of his contemporaries. Delacroix was a thinker. He literally anticipated Chevreul's discoveries in the law of simultaneous color contrasts; furthermore, he wrote profoundly of his art. He was an intimate of Chopin and appreciated his original music before many critics and musicians—which appreciation would have been an impossibility for Ingres, though he played the violin excellently. Delacroix, too, was kind to the younger men.

NEED we add that Degas, not a writer, was a wit and a critic? Rousseau, the landscapist, made notes, and Corot is often quoted. If Millet had not written another such a sentence as "There is no isolate truth," he would have been a critic. Constable with his "A good thing is never done twice," and Alfred Stevens' definition of art as "Nature seen through the prism of an emotion," forestalling Zola's more pompous pronouncement in his "Experimental Novel," are both noteworthy.

To jump over the stile into literature, Wordsworth wrote critical prefaces, and also Shelley—beautiful prose they are. Poe was a critic. And what of Coleridge, who described painting as "a middle quality between a thought and a thing—the union of that which is nature with that which is exclusively human"? On the side of the angels there are plenty of examples. Whistler—what a critic, and wielding a finely chased rapier. Thomas Couture discoursed as well as wrote of his art. The talks of William M. Hunt were fruitful. So were those of John La Farge, the painter. Gigoux, said to have been the consoler of Balzac's widow, has a book on art to his credit. Rodin was easily coaxed into the expression of his opinions.

There are French, English, and American artists who write and paint with equal facility. Since the cubists a deluge of pamphleteers has threatened critical sanity. Theorizing and daubing sometimes go hand in hand. But the chiefest among all painters, alive and dead, one who shines and will continue to shine when his canvases are faded—for they are fading—is Eugène Fromentin, whose essays, "Maîtres d'Autrefois" are classics in criticism. I can register only one defect in this clairvoyant volume—it misses Jan Vermeer, but there is excuse for that omission. When Fromentin went to Holland the name of the great Dutchman—today we say Rembrandt and Vermeer—was suffering from an eclipse. Much of his work was credited to Ter Borch (Terburg) and minor masters. I agree with Philip Hale, the painter-critic, that Vermeer was the greatest painter who ever used a brush—great in the technical sense, of course, for he had neither the apocalyptic imagination of Michelangelo nor the crepuscular vision of Rembrandt. A serene, daylight mind was his.

MR. HALE is a modern instance. His appreciation of Vermeer bids fair to become a classic, like Stevenson's study of Velasquez. The late Kenyon Cox was a sound critic; Prof. Clausen of London is a temperate one. MacColl, my favorite among the English art writers, is brilliant and was revolutionary during his younger period. The critical temper in Clausen and MacColl is not dogmatic. Seurat, the French impressionist, has defended his theories, and Paul Gauguin will live if for nothing else but his defiant "In art there are only plagiarists or révolutionists," which pronouncement is on a par with Ibsen's "Brand" and his fatalistic "All or nothing."

The number of talented Frenchmen who paint well and write with style as well as substance is amazing. Rossetti, if alive, would no longer be a rare bird in this time of piping painters, musicians who are literary, sculptors who are painters. Now and then an unfortunate critic writes a play or an opera—but why tread on contemporary corns? I admit the theme is painful to me. ('Ware the waste-basket, Sir Critic!)

Let us swing round to the obverse of the medal. A goodly showing. We may begin with Winckelmann or Goethe—we refer only to the critics of art—or run down the line beginning with Diderot, Blanc, Gautier, Baudelaire, Zola—more polemical than discriminative—Goncourt, who did much toward initiating Paris, that is to say Europe, in Japanese art; and Roger Marx, Geoffroy, Huysmans, Camille Mauclair, Charles Morice, and Octave Mirbeau.

In England, John Ruskin too long ruled the critical roost; like Isaiah, full of thunder words, his eloquent vaticinations led astray a younger generation. He was more prophetic than critical, and a victim to his own abhorred "pathetic fallacy." Henley was right in declaring that until R. A. M. Stevenson appeared there had been no commanding art criticism in England. This cousin of Robert Louis Stevenson has given in his Velasquez a marking stone in critical literature, one that will be preserved when "Lewis" the maker of picturesque sentences, is forgotten. It is the one big book by a big temperament that may be set up as a rival to Fromentin's critical masterpiece. I say "critical" advisedly, for Fromentin's fiction "Dominique" is a masterpiece in another field.

SHALL we further adduce the names of Morelli, Sturge Moore, Roger Fry, Paul Konody, Perkins, Royal Cortissoz, W. C. Brownell, Frank Mather Jr., Lionel Cust, Colvin, Ricci, Elizabeth Luther Cary, John Van Dyke, Bernard Berenson, and George Moore? Mr. Moore said of Ruskin that his uncritical blindness regarding Whistler would constitute his passport to fame, adding that "the lot of critics is to be remembered by what they have failed to understand." Certainly, this Irish critic didn't fail to understand Manet, Monet, Degas, and the new men of Paris in the '80s.

Walter Pater wrote penetrating criticism, which is also beautiful literature. If Ruskin missed Whistler he is in good company, for Sainte-Beuve, prince of critics, practically missed Balzac, Stendahl, Flaubert, and to Victor Hugo was unfair. (Cherchez la femme.) Yet count the literary Osrics embalmed in the amber of Sainte-Beuve's style. He, like many another critic, was far more gifted than the subjects he dissected; and that is fatal to the waterflies of art or literature.

In wonderment George III. demanded how the apples got inside the dumplings. How dare a critic criticize a creator? The looker-on writing about the man who does things! Nevertheless, he criticizes, and art and artists owe him much. Neither in "inkhorn terms" nor in an "upstart Asiatic style" should the critic voice his opinion; but he must be an artist temperamentally, and he must have an artistic credo. As his primary appeal is to the public, he need not be painter to write of painting. He is the interpreter, the vulgarizer, the middle man.

THE written and reported words of artists should be precious alike to professional critic and layman. That artists prefer painting or sculpture to the written word is but natural; so might the critic if he possessed the pictorial gift. However, as art is art and not nature—a truth that Goethe enunciated—criticism is criticism and not art. Criticism professes to interpret the works of the artist and at best mirrors his art, though mingled with the personal temperament of the critic. At the worst the critic lacks temperament (artistic training is, of course, understood), and if this is the case heaven help the artist.

As the greater includes the lesser, the artist may permit the critic to enter with due reverence his artistic domain, without vanity the one, sympathetic the other. Then the ideal collaboration of the creator and the observer ensues. Sainte-Beuve has said that "criticism by itself can do nothing. The best of it can act only in concert with public feeling. . . . We never find more than half the article in print—the other half is written only in the reader's mind." And Sir Walter Raleigh would further limit the gentle art: "Criticism, after all, is not to legislate nor to classify, but to raise the dead." Occasionally it raises the devil, who is never dead.

1914

By Field Marshal Viscount French of Ypres

[2] By successfully attacking the British and French forces to the east of Ypres and driving them back to the sea.

This latter alternative, as we know, is what they actually attempted—which mighty effort, together with our successful and prolonged resistance, constituted the first battle of Ypres.

No one who has done me the honor of reading this book so far can suppose that I did not realize this danger.

I am free to confess, however, that on Oct. 15, 1914, the day upon which I date the opening of the battle of Ypres, I thought the danger was past.

I could not bring myself to suppose for one moment that, with such resources as the Germans afterward showed they had at this time in reserve, they could have let slip such an opportunity as we afforded them by our long delay on the Aisne and our perilous disregard of the danger on the north. One of their punishments will be the corroding contemplating of the "ifs" and "buts" of their stupendous gamble.

In my inmost heart I did not expect I should have to fight a great defensive battle. All my dispositions were made with the idea of carrying out effectively the combined offensive which was concerted between Foch and myself.

There was only one reservation in my mind, and that concerned the danger of leaving a gap anywhere in our long line, or of failing to give a sufficiently close support to the weary but most gallant army of the king of the Belgians. As will presently be shown, I had to run a terrible risk to safeguard against this danger, but I hold that the risk was justified.

Many of Napoleon's great campaigns developed in a totally unexpected manner, quite different to his original conception, but he always claimed that his constant success was due to the initial correct direction and impulse which he always imparted to his armies. Tolstoy states that the only directions he gave at Borodino, three in number, were never carried out. I have not verified the great Russian novelist's statement, but it may well be true. History relates that in the Jena campaign of 1806 Napoleon, in three days, made three erroneous calculations of the Prussians' doings.

"On the 10th," says Hamley in his "Operations of War," "he thought Hohenlohe was about to attack him; on the 10th also he judged that the Prussians were concentrating on Gera; and on the 13th he mistook Hohenlohe's army for the entire Prussian force. Still, his plan, made on these suppositions, was, in the main, quite suitable to the actual circumstances. And this, as is mostly the case, was owing to the right direction given to the movements at the outset. The preliminary conditions of a campaign seldom offer more than three or four alternatives, an attack by the center or either flank, or some combination of these. If the enemy has made such false dispositions as to render one of these alternatives decidedly the best, the general who has the faculty of choosing it thereby provides in the best possible way for all subsequent contingencies. A right impulse once given to an army, it is in a position to turn events not calculated on, or miscalculated, to advantage."

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE TOILER AND THE CAPITALIST.

The Toiler and the Capitalist
Were walking on the strand
(You glean, I trust, the two were not Advancing hand in hand).
I state it parenthetical;
So you may understand.

"We want a raise or out we walk,"
The Toiler loudly cried.
"Our contract has two years to run,"
The Capitalist replied.
"I don't believe," the Toiler said,
"I've seen a wetter tide."

"Our contract has two years to run,
But if it doesn't suit
We'll raise you fifty-five per cent
And something more to boot."
"I seem to hear you calling me,"
Replied the Toiler, "Shoot!"

A coupla weeks had come and gone
Again upon the strand,
The Toiler and the Capitalist
Perambulated, and
Again I'd have you note the two
Had nary hand in hand.

"We want a raise or out we walk,"
The Toiler loudly cried.
"I raised you fifty-five per cent,"
The Capitalist replied.
"And that was but a week ago."
"I know," the Toiler sighed.

"But the following day the rent went up
Some eighty-five per cent,
And meat and eggs they also ris
With similar intent,
The raise we got last week from you
Now hardly pays the rent.

The Capitalist he raised again,
And again the prices flew.
And the Toiler struck and both of them
Their battle did renew.
Where is it leading us all, you ask?
I do not know, do you?

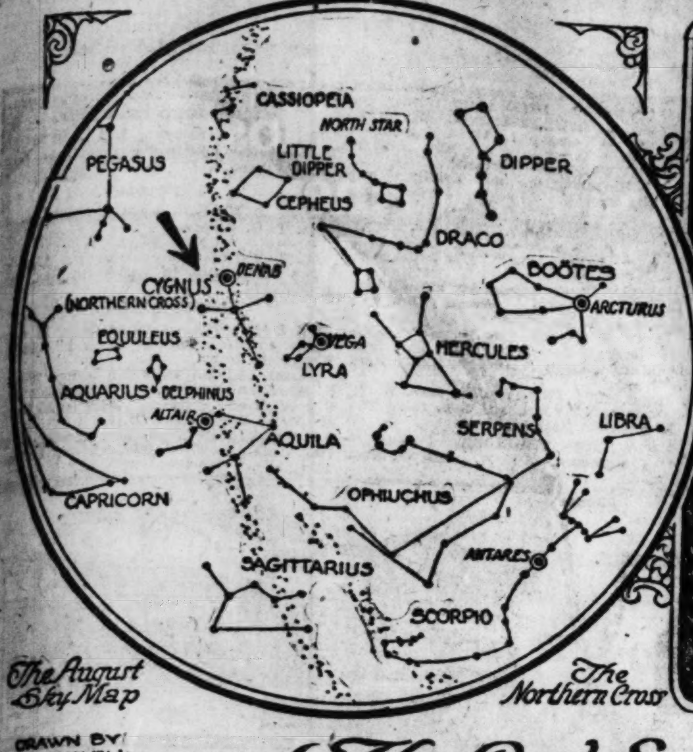
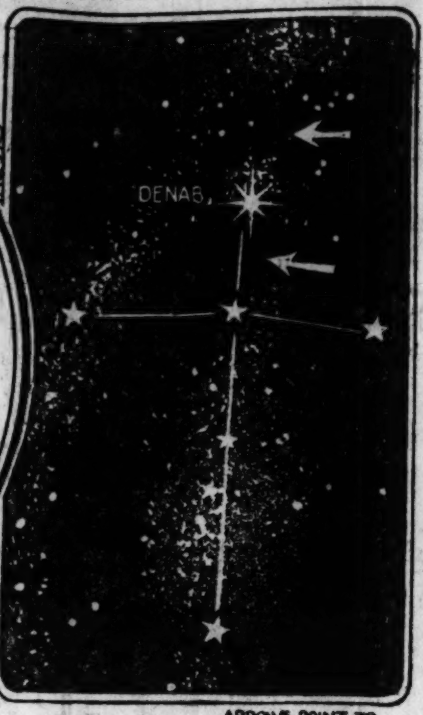
ASTRONOMY



The August Sky Map

DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL



The Northern Cross

ARROWS POINT TO THE COAL SACKS

The Coal Sacks

STARS INVISIBLE.

Two travelers were watching an array of pulsing flashes that intermittently lit up the northern quarter of the sky.

"That looks like it might be an aurora borealis," said one. "See how the light flits back and forth, and comes and goes like a phantom."

His companion stood watching the phenomenon for some minutes before he replied.

"I don't think that is an aurora. Admittedly, it pulses like the northern lights sometimes do, but, at the same time, it doesn't look quite like them."

"Well, what is it, then?" queried the first.

"I think it is lightning. There undoubtedly is a thunder storm going on fifty or sixty miles away from us to the north. We can't see any of it, not even the highest clouds, because the bulge of the earth gets in the way, but the flashes of the lightning light up the air for many miles around, and it is this that we are seeing. Such an appearance is often called "heat lightning."

"But suppose it should turn out that there was no storm over there. Then you would be all wrong?"

"No; I still have a good reason for believing that it is not the aurora. You notice those little clouds down there, just over the tree tops? They are standing out plainly against the darker sky. If that were an aurora we wouldn't be able to see them that way. Instead of being white, they would appear black against a lighter sky. You know that the aurora is caused by a luminescence in the upper air, 100 or more miles high, while lightning always flashes between low hanging clouds and the ground beneath.

"The clouds, being nontransparent, brought out a portion of the auroral light, because it is trying to pass them and so appear dark, but these same clouds are illuminated by the distant storm, and reflect its light to us, and appear white."

"Your explanation sounds reasonable, I must say."

"Yes, and there is another wider application of this same rule of background illumination that I can show you. Look up here in the sky, high up, in the milky way. You see seven stars almost overhead, in the shape of a great cross. This is the constellation of the Northern Cross. Now, if you look sharply, you will see two black holelike spaces in the midst of the galaxy, near the head of the cross. These are the famous coal sacks. The milky way all about them forms a soft white background which renders their blackness all the more conspicuous. These coal sacks are actually great clouds of dark stars which give no light. We are able to see them only because they arrest the beams coming from the bright myriads of suns in the milky way, far beyond, and to our eyes they appear inky voids."

When Ulster and Munster grow chummy,
When the sea gives up its dead;
When New York's guessed there are people west
Of the Hudson river bed;
When it's hot as June in December
And cold as December in June,
Then the land of Wun Lung will get back Shantung—
And the cow will jump over the moon!

News of the Religious World

Noted Speakers to Address Winona Lake Conference

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

GOV. FRANK O. LOWDEN of Illinois, Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas, and William Jennings Bryan will be among the speakers at the international and interdenominational Bible conference at Winona Lake, Ind., which begins Aug. 22.

The conference will celebrate this year its twenty-fifth annual session. The cessation of the war has made possible the return to America of some of the ministers and evangelists of England. Among those who will speak will be Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, Gypsy Smith, Dr. John McNeill, Dr. A. C. Dixon, Dr. J. Gregory Mantle, and Dr. John A. Macdonald, editor of the Toronto, Canada, Globe.

Among the other speakers will be Dr. J. Campbell White of the interchurch world movement, Dr. Wilbert W. White of the Bible college, New York; Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Chicago; Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, Detroit; Bishop Henry H. Fout, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. George R. Stuart, Dr. Len G. Broughton, Dr. Ira Landrith, Dr. W. B. Riley, Prof. Robert E. Hume, Union Theological seminary; the Rev. Roy L. Smith, Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston, and Dr. George W. Taft of Chicago. The three colored ministers who preach to the largest colored congregations in their denominations—Dr. J. W. Holley, Augusta, Ga.; Dr. Charles W. Tingley, Philadelphia, and Dr. L. K. Williams, Chicago, will be the speakers Aug. 30.

There will be over seventy evangelists present. They will assist in the music and in other services. All of the larger denominations and many of the smaller ones will be represented on the program.

For one week preceding the Bible conference, beginning next Friday, Billy Sunday, the evangelist, and his singer, Homer Rodeheaver, will conduct a trail hitting evangelistic campaign. Winona is the home of Mr. Sunday, and he has in other years preached a sermon or two during the Bible conference, but never before in the history of Winona has he conducted a week's meeting after the manner of the tabernacle campaigns which he has held from ocean to ocean.

Mr. Rodeheaver will also lead the singing during the Bible conference, and other members of the Sunday party will be present. Several hundreds of ministers and thousands of church people have indicated their purpose to attend.

The Rev. Luther Little will preach next Sunday and the two following Sundays in the Second Baptist church, Jackson boulevard and South Lincoln street. The church bulletin says, "Dr. Little comes from the south and is one of the ablest preachers in America." Today the Rev. Robert Neil McDonald, pastor of the Garfield Baptist church, will preach in the Second church.

The Rev. Austin Hunter

The Rev. Austin Hunter will celebrate today the tenth anniversary of his pastorate of the Jackson Boulevard Christian church, Jackson boulevard near Western avenue. The church is the oldest church organization of the denomination in Chicago now in existence, although it was not the first of the churches organized.

During the ten years Mr. Hunter received into the church membership 1,276. A mortgage of $8,000 on property has been paid, and the property adjoining the church has been purchased and converted into a social center.

Mr. Hunter came to Chicago from the pastorate of the North Park Christian church, Indianapolis. For four years he was president of the Indiana Missionary society. He has been for the last seven years president of the national board of Christian Endeavor of the Disciples of Christ.

The Jackson Boulevard church is beginning to face downtown problems. When Mr. Hunter became pastor 93 per cent of the membership lived within a radius of two miles. At present only 67 per cent live within the two mile radius.

The church supports its own missionary, Miss Ora Haight, in Johnsi, India.

The Rev. Charles A. Lippincott, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, South Bend, Ind., has resigned to take charge of welfare work in the South Bend, Detroit, and Walkerville plants of the Studebaker corporation. He will seek to secure coöperation between the employés and the factory management.

Next Saturday will be presentation day at Cedar Lake conference under the auspices of the Moody church. On that day the Monon railroad will present the deed to a twenty acre tract. A. M. Johnson of Chicago will present the south park, on which has been erected a hotel valued at $30,000, which will also be presented by Mr. Glendinning. The hotel will be dedicated with special exercises. The conference on city missions began on the Cedar Lake grounds yesterday and will close next Sunday evening. The Rev. Paul Rader, pastor of Moody church, is in general charge. Dr. A. C. Dixon, former pastor of Moody church, will be among the speakers at the conference.

The Chicago Church federation, following the race riots in Chicago, went on record in a statement which said: "Let us resolve, in view of the condition obtaining within the last few days, to recognize our colored neighbors as Americans who have always been loyal to America in the face of bad treatment; let us recognize them as fellow citizens entitled to the rights and protection of other citizens; let us treat them as men and women entitled to share fully and equally the boasted opportunity of America; let us do this in a friendly spirit worthy of Christians and Americans." The statement was signed by Herbert L. Willett, president; Walter R. Mee, secretary; Robert McMurdy, Mary McDowell, S. P. Breckenridge, Mrs. G. M. Mathes, the Rev. Father Joseph McNamee, Graham Taylor, and George H. Mead.

KILL THE FEAR OF STAMMERING
RE-EDUCATION THE KEY

Fourth Year in Chicago

M. L. HATFIELD

I permanently cure more cases of stammering than any other man in America. Please remember, I have ample proof to substantiate my claim. If you are puzzled in choosing the RIGHT school for the correction of your impediment, you owe it to yourself to look into the merits of my work. Such antiquated remedies as time-beating and sing-songing might appeal to those who know little or nothing about this distressing affliction, but surely those who have given the subject serious thought KNOW that a remedy to be permanently effective must be NATURAL.

For many years I was a severe stammerer. After you have read my book, "How to Stop Stammering"—a treatise on "The Science and Art of Correct Speaking"—you will KNOW that this must be so. This book contains an outline of my method which is thoroughly SCIENTIFIC and along the lines of RE-EDUCATION. It is by far the most accurate and dependable work ever written on the subject. A free copy to those who call.

Students are not hoodwinked into taking this course thru false, alluring, seductive advertising. They rely on information obtained from ex-students who have been taught to speak normally. Hundreds endorse this method over all others.

The big idea in this Institute is to render QUALITY SERVICE. If you are looking for that type of school, make no mistake. TALK WITH ME.

The SCHOOL COUNSELOR

Are you going to send your boy or girl to college this fall? If you feel that you cannot afford the expense of sending them away to school, there is no reason why they should not secure two years of college work in Chicago.

There are a number of opportunities for free college training in the city. The board of education maintains these colleges.

There is the Crane Junior college, which offers two years of college work. There is the College of Commerce and Administration, which offers two years of university training for leadership in business. There is the Normal college, which trains for the teaching profession.

Four years of high school work at some accredited high school is necessary for admittance to these colleges.

Brains are needed in the great industrial world today, and brains are capable of development the same as muscles, and there is nothing which develops brains any faster than systematic study.

FREE COLLEGE TRAINING.

IN mentioning the free colleges which are maintained by the board of education for the advantage of high school graduates, the Crane Junior college may be mentioned first.

The courses offered by this college have been given in detail in previous articles in these columns. In brief there are four departments and these departments are as nearly equivalent to the corresponding courses at the state university as is practicable. Courses successfully completed at the Crane Junior college are credited at the state university and students are enabled to proceed with the work of the junior year at the state university on exactly the same basis as students who have spent their first two years there. Similarly pupils have been credited at the state universities of Michigan and Wisconsin and at the University of Chicago.

The four departments include engineering, premedical, literature and arts, science and business administration.

In the engineering courses those who plan to take up technical courses are able to do the work of the freshman and sophomore years of the engineering courses in institutions of the rank of the University of Illinois.

In the premedical courses the students may do the two years of medical work that are required by the medical colleges of the best standing for admission to their freshman year.

In literature and arts students do the first two years of work leading to the degree of B. A. or B. S. and satisfy the requirements of the best law schools.

In science the work of the first two years of college courses with science as the major subject is done. This course would be taken up by those specializing in chemistry, ceramics or biology.

The college of commerce and Administration, in the Medill High school, has as its purpose the training of youth for leadership in business. The old method of training through experience only is coming to be looked upon as wasteful both in time and effort and practically every university in the country has an organized department for the study of the principles of business. This department is in every way on a par with the departments which teach the principles of law, medicine, engineering, etc.

In this course business organization is taken up, accounting, business psychology, industrial geography, labor conditions and problems, market structure and market functions, financial organizations and institutions, French and commercail Spanish.

It can hardly be pointed out too strongly how this age is the age of the specialist and how every boy should make up his mind to be as expert as possible in his particular specialty. No man should know more of your specialty than you do yourself.

Perhaps the really vital need of this specialized business training is evidenced by the fact that thousands of young people all over the country are willing to pay high tuition fees at the various institutions in order to secure such training.

The Normal college, which is now over fifty years old, has the immediate aim of training competent teachers for any department of instruction in the elementary schools of Chicago. Its course is accepted as the equivalent of two years' college training and the Normal college extension provides instruction of senior college and advanced grade for active teachers in Chicago.

There are elementary and kindergarten training courses, industrial arts training, household arts training, oral instruction for the deaf, and also the manual training courses, which are open only to those who have completed the manual training course in the high schools.

These colleges open in September, when the public high schools open. The fact that for residents of Chicago there is no charge adds to the advantage that they are located in Chicago and that the boy or girl does not have to leave home to attend.

(For all information on schools and education write the School Counselor, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"Is there any place in the city where I can obtain instruction in college mapping and typographical drawing and in home architecture and sanitation? I cannot afford to pay anything right now for instruction. Later on I shall be able to. L. K."

In the drawing courses offered at Crane Junior college training is given in the above. This work starts in the fall.

"Will you give me an outline of the four year architectural course offered in the city high schools? H. F. M."

I am sorry that I haven't the space to give you the information you ask. It includes a good deal of mathematics, much free hand and architectural drawing, architectural design and building, and cement construction. If you will send me your address I will send you a detailed outline of the studies which the course contains.

Below is the list of courses which will be offered in the Chicago high schools beginning in September. Have you' boys or girls already started on their high school course or have you boys and girls entering in the fall?

Are you in doubt as to whether or not they are pursuing the right course? There are over twenty courses to select from. Are you sure what line of work your boy or girl is best suited for?

There are also three free colleges, maintained by the board of education which will open at the same time that the high schools do.

Do you wish to secure complete details in regard to these colleges? We shall be glad to answer any questions pertaining to public or parochial schools, to public or private education. We want to help you to secure the best the city offers in the way of training and education for your boy and girl.

Copies of these courses will be mailed on application and detailed information given in regard to them. The courses desired should be specified and a stamp inclosed.

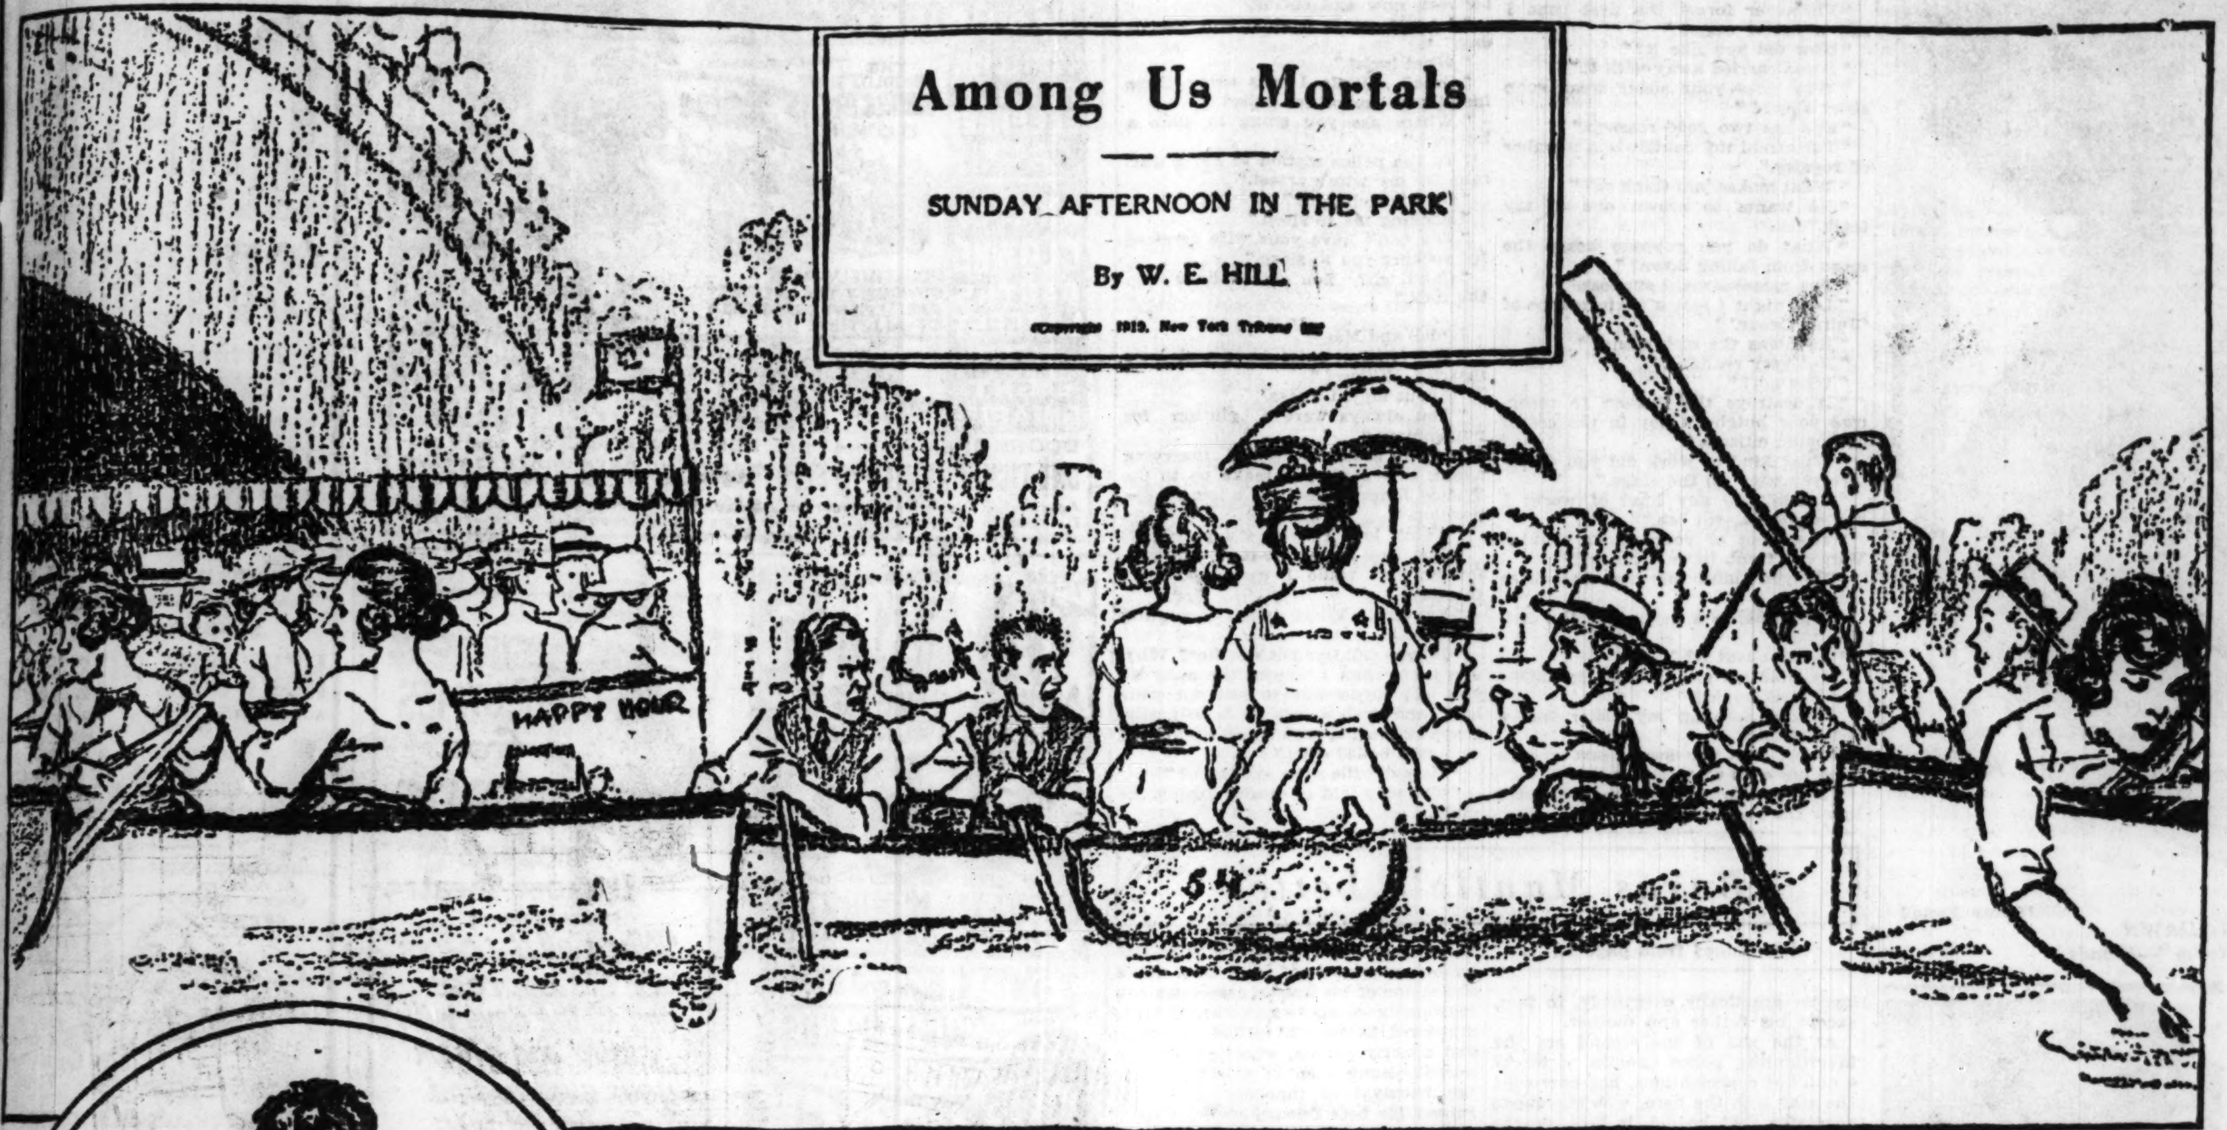
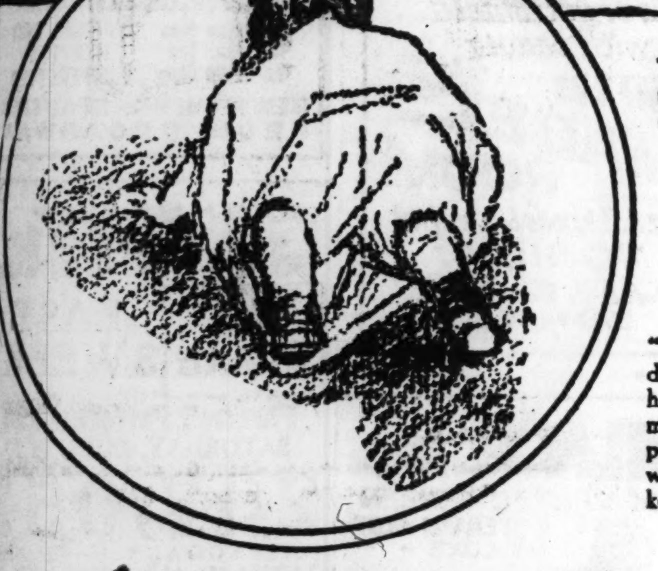
SUNDAY AFTERNOON IN THE PARK

By W. E. HILL

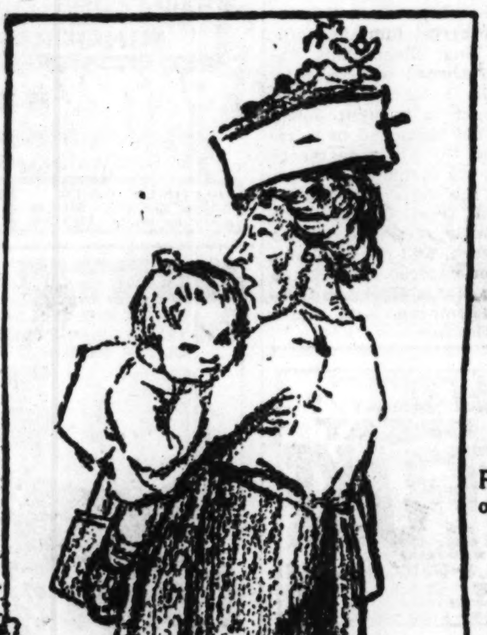
©Copyright 1919, New York Tribune Inc.



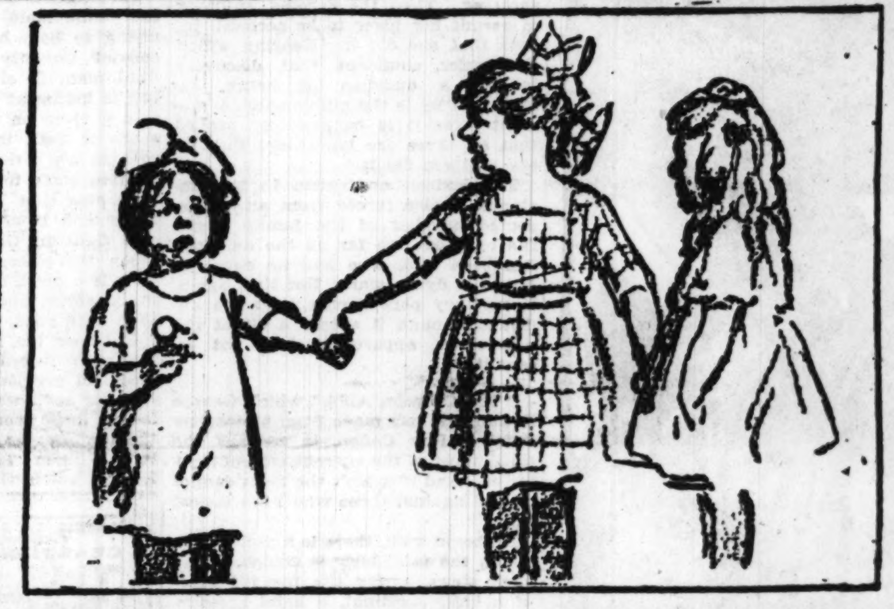
The center of the lake on a fairly quiet Sunday afternoon, showing the usual Sunday rowboat tangle, and the "Happy Hour" launch coming along at just the wrong moment.



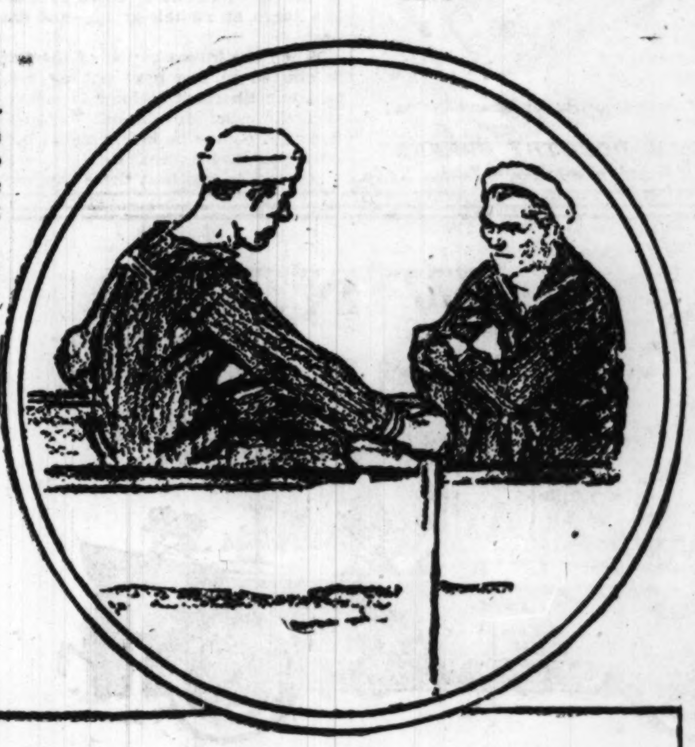
Alvin goes exploring on his own account.



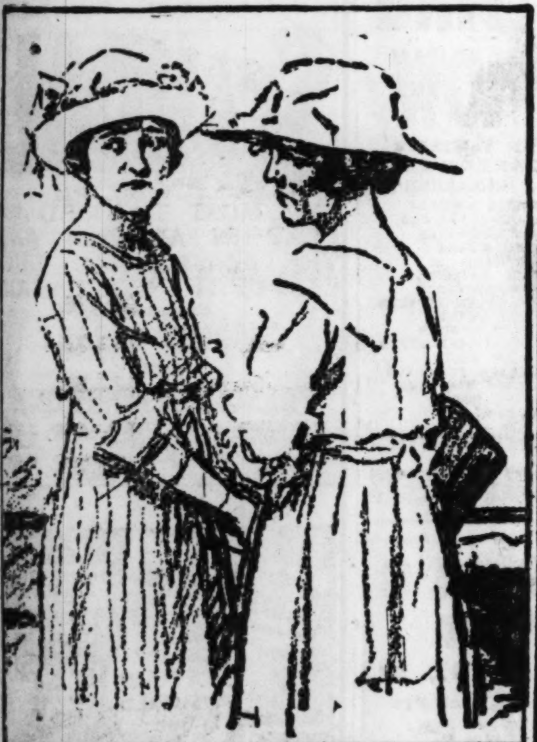
"Hermie, if you don't stay right here with mamma, I'm going to put you right in with them monkeys!"



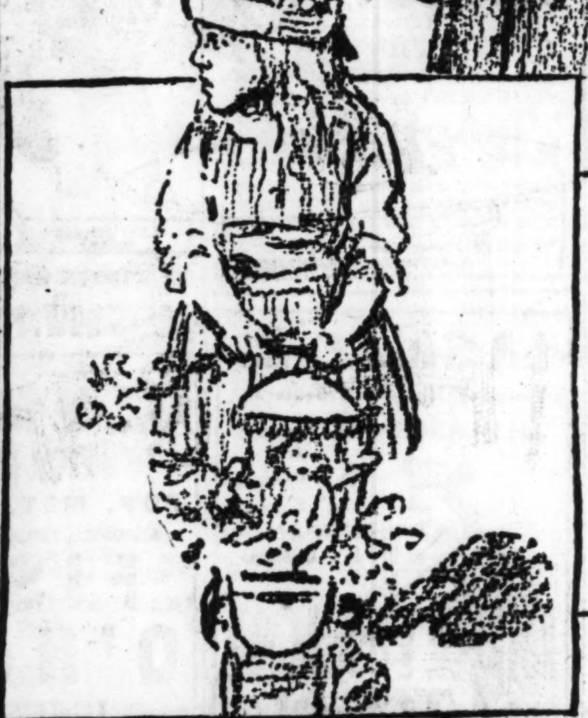
Playing house. "Now, youse are supposed to be my two little babies—and we're going out to the store now!"



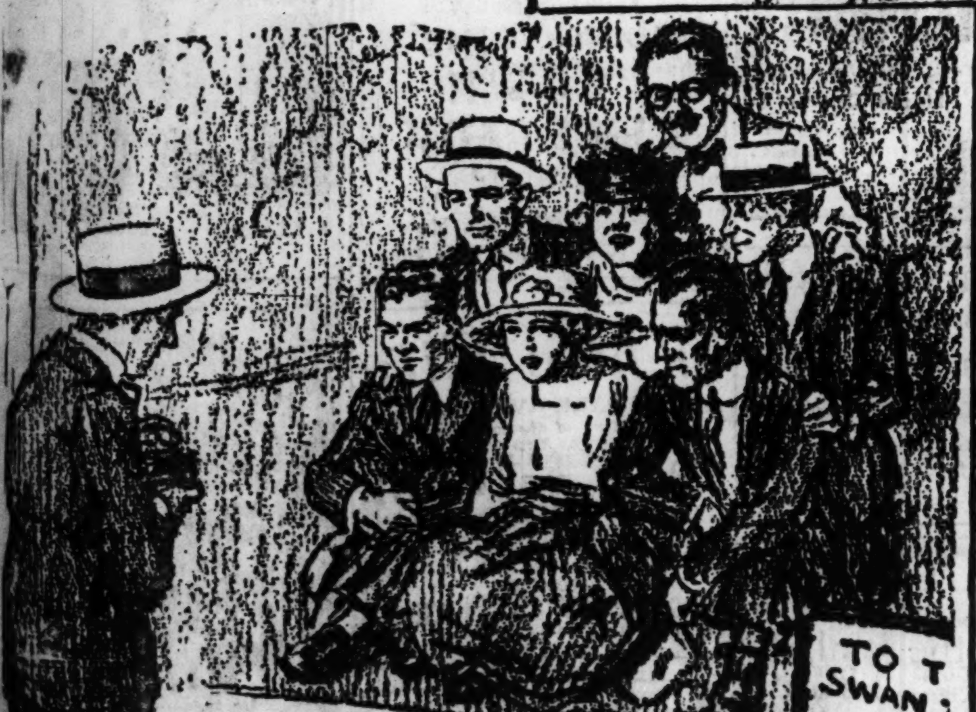
Just why two sailors on shore leave should elect to spend the time rowing on a park lake is a puzzle.



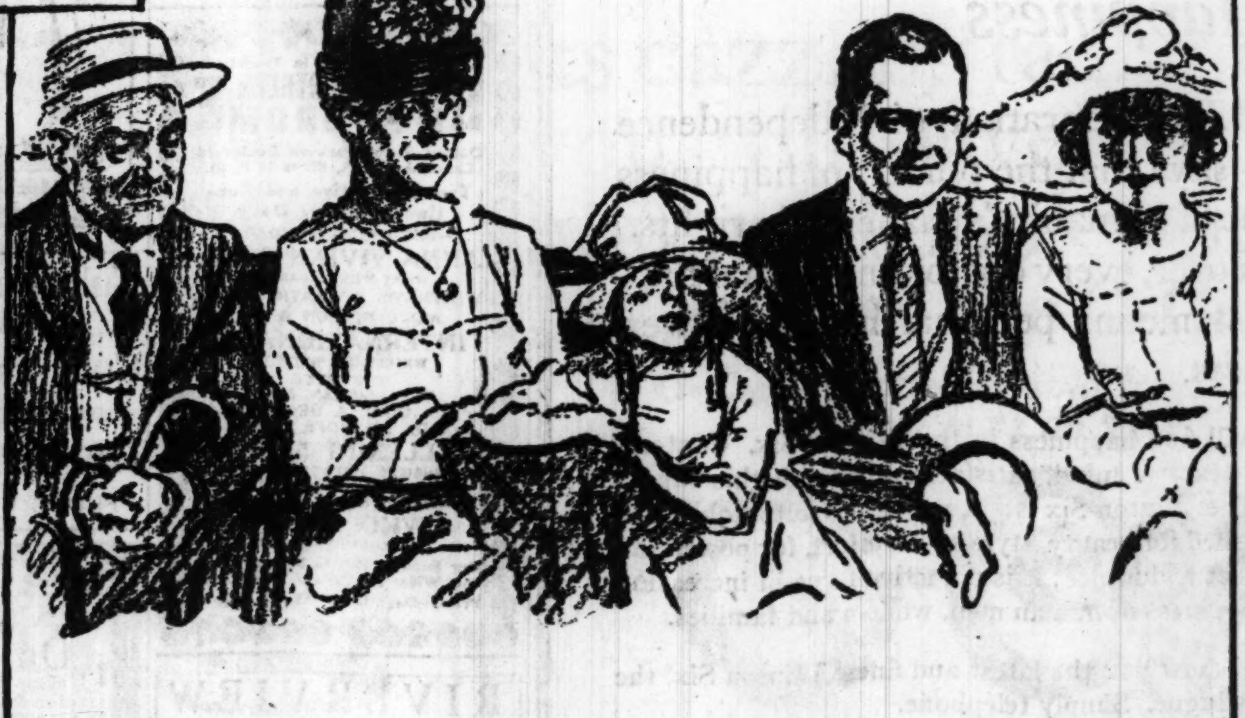
"They picked up them soldiers—I can tell by the way they're sitting!" Woman's intuition at work again.



Annie has been picking flowers from the park shrubs, and it seems just as well to avoid the policeman at the gate on the way home.



"Hey, Jonesy, we ain't sitting on cushions!" "Jonesy" is doing his best to get a group picture of seven people on a two and a half by two and a half film, set for a time exposure.



The band concert. "The Holy City" (cornet solo) is encored, and the leader obliges with "Good-by, Wild Women, Good-by," which meets with even greater applause.

The Theaters

JOSEPH KLAW, son of his father and the cause of the estrangement between K. and E., will soon produce "Double Harness," a comedy by Edward Paulton and Maurice Marks.

"Tea for Three," which is an imminent La Salle prospect, will be played by four companies this season. Arthur Byron and Margaret Lawrence are to be in the Chicago troupe, and other companies will be led by Charlotte Walker and by Cecil Spooner.

John Cumberland, Zelda Sears, and Charles Ruggles are among those who will act in Avery Hopwood's "Naughty Love Birds," which, judging from its title, is an enterprise of A. H. Woods'.

Miss Tallulah Bankhead, daughter of the Alabama statesman, is acting the first rôle in Rachel Crothers' "39 East," and is said by New York newspapers to be pretty good.

"Three Wise Fools," which impends at Powers', is distinguished as the only play in years which ran simultaneously in New York, London, Australia, and Honolulu. In Hawaii it is reported to have broken all previous local records.

The Rev. Thomas Dixon's bolshevik play, "The Red Dawn," was revealed in New York last week and didn't make precisely the intended impression. One reviewer reports it to have been "so hopelessly clumsy and preposterous" that the audience "gave way to helpless and honest merriment." It is further intimated that the drama is "violent and incredible" and is not likely to survive long enough to be brought to these parts.

William A. Brady announces the production of "Little Women" at Manchester, England, on Oct. 6, with an American cast.

McIntyre and Heath, the veterans of blackface comedy, will emerge from the varieties this season to be the chief performers in a Shubert production called "Hello, Alexander."

Miss Gilda Leary has replaced Miss Phoebe Hunt in the cast of "A Prince There Was," at the Grand. Miss Leary will perhaps be remembered as Chauncey Olcott's leading woman last season in "The Voice of McConnell."

A. H. Woods has signed with several American playwrights contracts which will give him full control of their output for the next five years. The playwrights are Bayard Veiller, author of "Within the Law," and "The Thirteenth Chair"; Willard Mack, who has "Tiger Rose," "Kick In," and other successes to his credit; Wilson Collison, who helped write "Up in Mabel's Room," which comes to the Woods tonight; Ralph E. Dyar, author of "A Voice in the Dark," now under way in New York, and Marjorie Blaine, who wrote "The Unknown Woman," in which Miss Marjorie Rambeau is to be a star. Mr. Veiller has already delivered a new play whose title and nature will be announced later, and Mr. Mack is now making a Chinese melodrama out of the "Fu Manchu" stories of Sax Rohmer.

The indefatigable Hattons, it is announced, have undertaken the task of dramatizing "Cap'n Warren's Wards," a novel by Joseph C. Lincoln, which Oliver Morosco proposes to use as a vehicle for Tom Wise when he gets through playing the old ship magnate in "Cappy Ricks."

Miss Blythe Daly, daughter of Arnold Daly, is off for London to play the leading rôle in an English production of Frank Craven's "Too Many Cooks."

Miss Nan Halperin, a notable of the varieties, is to appear in the forthcoming musical version of Clyde Fitch's comedy, "Girls." The entertainment will be revealed in October.

From Mr. Kaufmann's column in the New York Times this morning:

Cohan and Harris, ever mindful of the popular state of mind as regards plays, are disinclined to risk their murder mystery drama in New York at a time when the public is already being invited to bestow attention upon a trio of similar pieces. Thus "The Acquittal," instead of coming into the Cohan & Harris theater in September, will go to the Grand Opera house in Chicago, a city which has not been having any murder plays of late, and is presumably ready for one. Later, when the market for this variety of play has eased somewhat in the metropolis, "The Acquittal" will be given its chance.

The news from Los Angeles is that "Civilian Clothes" is in its sixth or seventh week of stock prosperity. This is Thompson Buchanan's returned soldier comedy, now in rehearsal here, and scheduled for production at the Morosco theater on or about the first of September. Mr. Morosco is also intent upon the production of "Seven Miles to Arden" at present, and in connection therewith announced during the week that he is seeking another Laurette Taylor. However, so are all the other managers.

The 1919 Hitchcock revue is about ready to be revealed to the populace, an event which will take place in Atlantic City in another week. Mindful of the claims of Mr. Ziegfeld that "The Follies" is "a national institution," Mr. Hitchcock stamps his own entertainment "a national necessity," and lets it go at that.

The union of Messr. Erlanger, Dillingham and Ziegfeld, announced during the last week, is not a new alliance in the theater. Mr. Dillingham and Mr. Ziegfeld have a bond of sympathy in their adventure at the Century theater, and, together with Mr. Erlanger, they came to the rescue of Raymond Hitchcock a year ago when that comedian's revue threatened to crack under the strain. The new firm promises to embark upon the production of plays on a stupendous scale, and it appears that all that is required of the playgoer is patience.

It is a rare week which sees no olden comedy exhumed from its resting place for the edification and enriching of the librettists and composers. This time it is Mark Swan's Seltzer-Bottle farce, "The Third Party," which is to be made over into a musical comedy called with or without apologies to O. Henry, "Strictly Business." Frank Fay will be the leading comedian, and a late fall production is planned.

Burns Mantle's Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—I suppose Bayard Veiller and his blessed "Thirteenth Chair" are really responsible for the rush of mystery plays that have settled on the early season like a swarm of singing locusts. Not so much because of the success of that combination, but rather because the Veiller technique served to spear the interest of other playwrights, and that writing mystery plays intrigued them as a sort of game, a challenge to their inventiveness and their ingenuity. If Bayard could do it, simply by sticking a knife in the ceiling and asking the audience first to find it and then to guess who had thrown it there after murder had been done, why couldn't they? Why, indeed?

Now we have three of the resulting crop of mystery plays already established on Broadway, one or two dead from strain, and several more on the way. The three current samples are "A Voice in the Dark," "The Crimson Alibi," and "At 9:45." You pays your money and you takes your choice, so far as this unbiased observer is concerned, for essentially they are as much alike as peas in a pod. In each of them the playwright kills some one in the first act, or pretends to, and then blandly asks the audience to guess which of the persons introduced in the cast is guilty of the crime.

Of course he hides the real evidence from you, and he could as credibly fix the crime on the stage director, or the man in the box office, or on one of the usherettes as on the person he at last forces to stand for it. But the audience does not seem to mind, so the mystery play continues a success.

The newest of the lot, called "A Voice in the Dark," has a touch of novelty the others do not command. In it the important evidence in unraveling the mystery is submitted by a deaf woman and a blind man. During its presentation the audience sees what the deaf woman saw but hears no sound and hears what the blind man heard without seeing anything, the one scene being acted in pantomime and the other in the dark.

It is a clever touch. The pantomime illustrating the deaf woman's story is not at all illuminative as pantomime, though it is well done by the actors, but it does most interestingly suggest the fallibility of circumstantial evidence. A young couple, running away to be married, are followed into a wood by the sister of the girl. The sister, facing the young man, protests earnestly, and he answers her defiantly. They apparently exchange heated words; their lips move but make no sound, and they rush from the stage, with the deaf old lady watching them from her place of concealment.

Soon, though no shot is heard, they dash back again, the young man clutching wildly at his heart, the young woman holding a revolver. The boy sinks to the ground and dies.

That is what the deaf woman reports to the police. When the girl is called upon to give her version of the meeting the scene is reënacted, but this time with the spoken dialogue added. Thus the audience learns that the girl's reason for objecting to the elopement was that she herself had previously been led into an affair with the would-be bridegroom and knew him to be a rotter she did not intend her sister should marry. The boy is defiant because he does not believe the sister would dare confess her acquaintance with him.

The evidence is all against the heroine until the blind man—a news agent at the railway station—overhears in the dark scene the confession of the real murderess, a girl the audience has had no reason to suspect, who tells her brother that she had done the shooting from ambush to avenge her own betrayal.

The author, of course, takes every advantage, and calls frequently upon the long and elastic arm of coincidence as an aid. But the audience, though it may sneer knowingly, acknowledges itself interested, and that, so far as the mystery play is concerned, is the answer.

Ralph Dyar, a newspaper man working on the Spokesman-Review in Spokane, Wash., got the idea for "A Voice in the Dark" at a movie show, worked out the plot of it, and sold it to A. H. Woods by sending him a synopsis. When the script was sent on Willard Mack took charge of rehearsals and is credited with having done much for the perfected version. Olive Wyndham and William Boyd play the leads, with William B. Mack, Anne Sutherland, Florine Arnold, and Stewart White assisting.

In "At 9:45," which I found tripping along to capacity business at the Playhouse when I came back from a vacation, Owen Davis plays similar tricks with his audience, but depends on the dramatic strength of his story rather than on its novelty to carry it.

In this instance, at 9:45 of an evening a certain gay young gentleman who had had his way with many women was found shot in the back and shut in a closet. When the door is open his body falls out—and the police are summoned. Who, then, shot him?

So far as the evidence of the spoken dialogue is concerned everybody in the cast had cause to wish him dead—the heroine, because he had jilted her and kept her love letters; the hero, because he had tricked him out of the heroine; the aged butler, because of indignities publicly forced upon him; the family chauffeur, because of an unpaid loan and other

Ravinia's Seventh Week of Opera

THREE operas of the modern Italian school are listed for revival in Ravinia park's seventh week, starting tonight. Two are the well known stage works of Wolf-Ferrari, "The Secret of Suzanne" and "The Jewels of the Madonna"—operas whose American career has had peculiarly to do with Chicago, where they were sung for the first time in this country. The third revival of the week, to be effected on Wednesday night, is of Montemezzi's "The Love of the Three Kings," which, in the lingo of the musicians, is familiarly referred to as "L'Amore." All three works were placed into the Ravinia répertoire a year ago.

Florence Easton's right to be regarded as a well equipped répertorist is to be further illustrated by her singing the principal woman's part in each of the three operas. She has not been heard in Chicago or vicinity in any of the rôles. Her week will be her busiest of the summer at the park. Not only will "L'Amore" be repeated on Saturday night but a repetition, on Thursday night, of "Pagliacci" will involve her as the Nedda, a rôle which she first sang in Chicago on the occasion of Lucien Muratore's first appearance as Canio, nearly three years ago. The casting of "Pagliacci" this time will make use of both Orville Harrold and Thomas Chalmers instead of Morgan Kingston and Millo Picco. Mr. Harrold's Canio was the unbilled feature of an earlier Ravinia performance of the opera and was, it is said, liked immensely. As to Mr. Chalmers, he has been singing Tonio at the Metropolitan Opera house, in succession to Scotti and Amato.

The list of the week's operas is complete with a repetition, on Tuesday night, of "Thaïs," with Edith Mason.

"The Love of the Three Kings" is not a type of opera customarily to be found in summertime répertoire, regardless of the quality of the singers; but its inclusion last August in Ravinia's growing list of works was an interesting venture. The revival may now be of additional interest to devotees of the theater and of music from the fact that both the composer, Montemezzi, and the librettist, Sem Benelli, are soon to be represented in Chicago by other works. Montemezzi's new opera, "Le Nave" ("The Ship"), is to be sung in the autumn. Its libretto is D'Annunzio's like named play, known to readers of the poetic drama as a stirring brief for Italy's nationalism. Benelli is the author of "The Jest," in which Lionel and John Barrymore, reunited as stars, have been acting in New York, and they are scheduled to play in it in this city in the first half of the coming season.

The American, and especially, the Chicago, annals of "The Love of the Three Kings" make an odd record for any stage work. The opera was imported in 1913 for mounting by the Boston Opera, a costly enterprise whose career ran parallel with the first years of the Chicago Opera. Edouardo Ferrari-Fontana was brought to this country for the part of Avito; indeed, returning tourists credited with judgment had insisted that the Italian success of the opera depended wholly upon this tenor. When, later, the Metropolitan Opera decided to try the piece, that institution also engaged Ferrari-Fontana.

The demand on him for the rôle did not end with that engagement. When the trade mark, trappings, and troubles of the Boston Opera were taken over for a venture which had Pavlowa, the great dancer, as backer and nonsinging star, "L'Amore," with the striking settings made for it by Josef Urban, was part of the impedimenta; and when the opera was first sung in Chicago, in October of 1915, Ferrari-Fontana was the Avito. And still later in the same season, when the Chicago Opera mounted Montemezzi's work, that tenor was to the fore in the part of the faithless young king.

A third hearing of the opera that season, in April of 1916 in the Blackstone theater, had Zenatello, "Tom" Chalmers, and José Mardones as the three kings and Luiza Vilani as Fiora. She, Georges Baklanoff, and Adamo Didur had been with Ferrari-Fontana in the Boston-Pavlowa performance in the Auditorium; and Campanini's singers in their respective rôles were Louise Edvina, Graham Marr, and Clarence Whitehill.

And with those three sets of performances, a few months apart, Chicago heard the last of "L'Amore" until it was revived last summer out at Ravinia. The Metropolitan, too, laid the opera aside for some seasons, and then restored it for the special purpose of providing a new part for Caruso. Both of Ravinia's singers of Fiora, Claudia Muzio and Florence Easton, have been vis-a-vis with Caruso in the opera down in New York City.

This is the arrangement of operas and singers for the new week:

8:15 tonight—"The Secret of Suzanne," first time, with Miss Easton, Millo Picco, Francesco Daddi, followed by the garden scene [second act] of "The Jewels of the Madonna," also for the first time, with Miss Easton, Philine Falco, Morgan Kingston and Mr. Chalmers. Conductor of both operas, Mr. Papi.

8:15 Tuesday—"Thaïs, second time, with Miss Mason, Miss Falco, Leon Rothier and Louis Dorman. Conductor, Mr. Hageman.

8:15 Wednesday—"The Love of the Three Kings," first time, with Miss Easton, Miss Falco, Kingston, Picco, Rothier and Dorman. Conductor, Mr. Papi.

8:15 Thursday—"Pagliacci," fifth time, with Miss Easton, Orville Harrold, Mr. Chalmers, Louis D'Angelo and Mr. Daddi. Conductor, Mr. Papi.

8:15 Saturday—"The Love of the Three Kings," second time, with the cast of Wednesday night.

Tomorrow night's classical program by the Chicago Symphony orchestra will include Beethoven's "Leonore" overture known as No. 3 and his fifth symphony, and will have Harry Weisbach and Enrico Tramonti as soloists. Mr. Tramonti will be the soloist of Friday night's semi-classical concert, in which Frederick Stock's arrangement of the love scene from the second act of "Tristan and Isolde" will be played. Other concerts of the week will be "pops" today and Saturday at 3 o'clock, one for the children on Thursday at 3, and one for the Great Lakes sailors and the Fort Sheridan soldiers on Friday at 3. Henry Roethog, a magician, will contribute an exhibition to the children's program on Thursday.

They Laugh at this in Vaudeville

RIALTO.

Hanlon and Clifton:

"Go much to the theater?"

"Considerably."

"Ever see 'Oliver Twist'?"

"No, but I've seen Fatima wiggle."

"I'll never forget the first time I saw a patrol wagon."

"How did you like it?"

"I was carried away with it."

"Why does your sister wear such short skirts?"

"She has two good reasons."

"I'm afraid my dentist is a member of royalty."

"What makes you think so?"

"He wants to crown one of my teeth."

"What do you suppose keeps the moon from falling down?"

"The moonbeams, I suppose."

"Last night I saw a performance of 'Julius Cæsar.'"

"How was the mob scene?"

"Not very realistic."

"Why not?"

"It destroys the illusion to recognize your butcher's boy in the crowd of Roman citizens."

"What kind of work did you do before you went on the stage."

"I didn't do any kind of work; I had a government job."

"That coat of yours looks shabby. Why don't you have it turned?"

"Do you think this coat has three sides?"

"My father is a veteran of the civil war."

"What about it?"

"O, nothing, except that my father has a hickory leg."

"That's nothing; my sister has a cedar chest."

"Why does my sweetheart always close her eyes when I kiss her?"

"Study your photograph and you'll know the reason."

"I hear Miss Mason is going to marry you."

"Yes; but there's a condition attached."

"What is it?"

"That she doesn't get a better offer between now and spring."

"I went on a fishing trip yesterday."

"What luck?"

"Great. While I was away three installment collectors called."

"Where are you going in such a hurrry?"

"To the police station to get a warrant for my wife's arrest."

"On what charge?"

"Rocking me to sleep."

"You can't have your wife arrested for rocking you to sleep."

"Can't, eh? You should have seen the rock."

Lydell and Macy:

"How many times have you been married, Wilbur?"

"About nine, I guess.'

"You always were a glutton for punishment."

"If you are thinking of marrying again, why don't you make up to the Widow Jones? She's got a lovable disposition."

"'Tain't love I want; it's patience."

"Just look at all the medals I have for bravery while I was captain in the navy."

"Bravery! What doing, strangling the fish?"

"Do you call this hot weather? Why, one time when I was in the navy all you had to do was to put out your hand and grab a fish all boiled; why, I went up to the crow's nest and found two hard boiled eggs."

"How did the eggs get there?"

"The ship laid to during during the night."

Burns Mantle's Letter

lapses—practically everybody, in fact, except his father and mother.

At the end of the second act the investigating police captain, a bit of a dub but conscientious, has narrowed the search to the hero, who thereupon confesses that he did, in fact, do the shooting. Then the heroine, refusing to permit her lover to be accused, insists that she did it. Hearing which the butler, confident that discovery is but a question of hours, insists that he is the guilty one. A moment later it is conclusively proved that all three are lying, and that no one of them did it.

The last-act confession in this instance is also forced from an unsuspected member of the family circle, the only one, so far as the audience has been told, who had no cause to hate the dying man. But this, again, is mystery play license, and the audience, though it sneers a bit at the conclusion, apparently does not resent it.

"The Crimson Alibi," which George Broadhurst has made from a story by Octavus Roy Cohen, is perhaps the thrillingest of the current crop of mysteries. And if it isn't the fault cannot be laid against those who have staged it.

To begin with, there is a prologue in which the fatal blow is struck. On a dark stage, under the focused glare of a baby spotlight, a hand appears. Slowly it grasps a silver dagger; stealthfly hand and dagger move across the blackness; there is a sudden lunge, an audible groan—and darkness.

When the investigation of the crime is started in the next act a certain amateur Sherlock Holmes is asked to take the case. He doesn't want to do it, but of course he is fascinated by its mysteries and agrees.

He, too, learns that there was every reason why the murdered man should have been murdered, and that not a single one of his known associates can reasonably escape suspicion. He (the murdered party) was an old and cruel and miserly person, who had sent innocent young men to prison, sought the betrayal of innocent girls, and ruined his best friends in business.

The dramatic interest centers around the young maid in the house who is trying to help her lover, an escaped convict unjustly imprisoned by the dead man, to elude the police. The boy is hiding at a certain tough hotel—in a room on the third floor. This scene is built up three stories high, so that when the officers and the detectives come to arrest him the audience sees that long, silent climb upstairs and is afterward witness to a gun fight in the hotel lobby below, when the prisoner is brought down. This is a good, old fashioned melodramatic effect, and the audience reacts to it with good, old fashioned shivers.

But here, too, the confession of guilt is finally forced from a gentleman who had previously seemed quite too nice for such work, and the audience laughs itself good naturedly out of the theater. Bertha Mann, Harrison Hunter, William Thompson, and Thais Lawton are in the cast.

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1918

By Maj. Gen. Sir Frederick B. Maurice

VIII.

ON none of the three fronts of attack, which made up Foch's great battle, was it easy to gather the fruits of victory. In Flanders King Albert and Plumer, having crossed the ridges, had behind them ground over which the tide of war had ebbed and flowed for more than four years, and now that the tide had been finally turned back it had left a morass of stinking mud which had obliterated every road and track. Behind the main British battle lay the deepest zone of devastation on the whole long front.

From Vimy Ridge to the eastern outskirts of Amiens, and then through St. Quentin northwards by Cambrai to Douai, in an area of over 1,000 square miles, there was hardly an intact house to be found, no village which had not been gutted; the surface of the ground was torn and blasted by shell fire, the vegetation withered by poison gas; the roads had been destroyed, the railways torn up, and all bridges over the many rivers and canals blown down. Behind Gouraud in Champagne lay a somewhat narrower but equally horrible belt of desolation. In the rear of the Americans were the battlefields of Verdun.

Therefore, on all the fronts the repair of the communications behind the armies was a stupendous undertaking, which not all the skill and tireless energy of the engineers and working parties could complete quickly. Without food, ammunition, and military stores the victorious troops could not get forward even against a badly shaken enemy, and these could not be brought up to them until the roads and railways had been to some extent restored. So everywhere progress was for a time slow.

The Belgians were within two miles of Roulers by Oct. 1, but it was not until Oct. 14 that King Albert, having bridged the muddy gulf behind him, was able to advance and enter the town. Cambrai had been enveloped north and south by British troops on Sept. 30, but the Germans were not completely cleared out of the town until Oct. 9. Debeney with the 1st French army had entered St. Quentin on Oct. 1 but by the 10th he was only eight miles east of the place. Gouraud had by Sept. 29 advanced about six miles through the German lines, but by Oct. 9 his men were only one and a half miles farther forward.

Neither his advance nor that of the Americans between the Meuse and the Argonne had been sufficiently deep to force the Germans out of the Argonne forest. Now that forest runs roughly from northeast to southwest along a series of rough ridges which separate the valleys of the upper Aisne and the Aire. These forest clad ridges gave the Germans splendid vantage ground from which to harass with artillery and machine gun fire the allied troops on either side of the Argonne and if these troops were to get on there was nothing for it but to clear the forest.

By Sept. 28 the American left had penetrated some three miles into the Argonne, but on that date the center was nearly five mile ahead on the outskirts of Exermont and was being worried by the German guns firing from the Argonne heights into their flanks and rear. To clear these heights and enable the center to advance, the American left had to force its way forward through nine miles of the most difficult country on the whole western front. Under modern shell fire woods become an almost impenetrable tangle of fallen timber, which afford ideal nests for the enemy's machine guns.

This tangle was made still more difficult by cunningly placed wire entanglements and stretches of rabbit netting. The forest is cut up by deep ravines with almost precipitous sides, which made it very hard for the infantry to keep touch, while tanks could be of no help to them, and even the most experienced artillery would have been put to it to give them support. It was a question of hard slogging infantry fighting and the American infantryman did slog hard; and after eleven days of continuous grim, slogged effort, by Oct. 10 he had won his way through.

Simultaneously with the advance in the Argonne which fell to the left of the 1st American corps, the right of that corps and the 5th and 3d corps worked their way forward to the latitude of the northern edge of the forest, while east of the Meuse sufficient progress was made in conjunction with French troops to safeguard the flank of the troops west of the river.

Heavy American Casualties.

IN all this fighting the casualties of the American 1st army were very heavy and the hardships imposed on the troops severe. It is difficult to see how this could have been avoided in the circumstances in which the battle was fought. There was undoubtedly lack of coöperation between the infantry and the artillery, and between the aircraft and both. It is equally true that the eagerness of the American infantry to get forward landed them in awkward salients in which they suffered very severely and that attempts to rush machine gun nests by direct attack had to be paid for at a heavy price.

In fact, the experience of the American army in this their first great continuous offensive battle was very similar to our own experiences in the first battle of the Somme. No one will maintain that the quality of the infantry of the British army which in the summer of 1918 drove the Germans across the Somme battlefields into and through the Hindenburg line can be compared with the quality of the infantry who two years before won their way up the Somme heights. Then the pick of the manhood of the British empire fought and fell, while in 1918 the ranks were filled with middle aged men and boys.

Yet in 1916 we gained comparatively little at a great price, and in 1918 we won much with far less sacrifice of life. The deterioration in the quality of the German troops in those two years does not account for the change. The essential difference in the two battles is that the first was won by sheer inexperienced valor, the second by valor combined with skill. We have learned in this war that it is possible to train the individual soldier and get him to meet the terrible conditions of the modern battlefield in far less time than had been supposed to be necessary.

The clerk from the counting house, the plowman from the fields, and the hand from the factory have all shown that with a few months' instruction they can acquit themselves, under conditions such as man has never been called upon before to face, better than the best of the soldiers of old, provided they are sent to take their places in an organization which has been perfected and of which all the parts are working smoothly together. Contrary to general expectation, the great war has shown that civilization and education by developing intelligence have improved the fighting powers of the race, that the trained will can triumph over the weaknesses of the flesh.

Army Trained as a Whole.

BUT the war has also shown conclusively that the experience of the past still holds good in that the training of the individual is a very small step toward the making of an army. It is even a shorter step today than it was in the past, for the organization of the modern army is infinitely more complex than was that of the armies of old. In 1918 all the parts of the British army had learned by long and bitter experience to work together for a common end. Commanders of all grades had learned their jobs, the staffs knew their business, infantry, cavalry, artillery, engineers, trench mortars, machine gunmen, tanks, and aircraft, knew each what the other could do and what the other needed.

Sir Douglas Haig has often been accused of having maintained an extravagant organization behind his front at the cost of the fighting ranks. He was looking forward confidently to the day when he would get his enemy on the move and when that day came he was ready. It was the perfection of the organization of the services behind the British lines, a perfection which was the outcome of long experience, and the scale on which these services were equipped, as much as the increased skill of the fighting ranks, which enabled the British army to fight continuously and victoriously for three months and keep up that succession of hammer blows to which Foch has paid a generous tribute.

The American army had had none of the long and costly war training which had taught the British army the lesson. Many of the divisions which fought in the Meuse-Argonne battle went then into action for the first time. That being so it was inevitable that there should be defects in coöperation and that a high price should be paid for victory. I have already described the difficulties of the ground over which the American troops fought. The difficulties which confronted the services of supply were not less formidable.

On the stretch of eighteen miles between the Meuse and western edge of the Argonne, a front of battle occupied by nine American divisions in the first line, equivalent to eighteen British or French divisions, there were only two main roads, running in the direction of the advance, one of them on the extreme right flank, along the valley of the Meuse, exposed to artillery fire from the heights in the hands of the Germans on the east bank of the river, the other on the right flank along the eastern edge of the Argonne, exposed to artillery fire from the forest.

Between these on the front of the main American advance there were only narrow cross roads connecting the villages and these roads had been shelled to pieces. The hilly and wooded nature of the country made the task of constructing new roads, of repairing the existing ones, and constructing railways very laborious, and consequently there was great congestion of traffic, difficulty in relieving the troops in the front line and in bringing up to them food and ammunition. With greater experience the American infantry would have learned to overcome the German machine guns with less loss of life and the services of supply would have worked more smoothly.

Had the American army waited to gain that experience the war would certainly have been prolonged by at least six months and the cost in life would certainly have been far greater than it was. Pershing must have taken all these factors into consideration when he threw in his vote for fighting the great battle which began on Sept. 26. He decided that the vigor and valor of his troops would more than counter balance their lack of battle experience, and his troops more than justified his confidence in them.

From Sept. 26 until the Kriernhilde system was finally broken, Pershing, by making the fullest use of his man power—close on three-quarters of a million of American troops were engaged in this battle—continuously menaced the Metz-Mezieres railway and forced Ludendorff to employ forty divisions in an ineffectual effort to stem his advance. Without this contribution to the general plan Foch's scheme of victory could not have been realized. The slow, strenuous struggle on the American front which lasted from Sept. 28 to Oct. 28 was inevitable in the circumstances in which the 1st American army became engaged, and the American soldier came triumphantly through the ordeal of that struggle.

This accumulation of difficulties along the allied battle front gave the Germans time to pull themselves together. It appears from the altercations between Ludendorff and his government that after the breaking of the Hindenburg line on Sept. 29 he conveyed to them the impression that all was lost, and it seems probable that that represented his real feelings at the time. A week later, however, he began to change his mind, for he began to see a prospect of getting his army together on a new line and of holding out for reasonably favorable terms of peace.

At the end of the first week of October he had in front of the Americans and of Gouraud just north of the Argonne and along the Aisne the southern section of his Hindenburg line still intact. Between the Aisne and the Oise he had a line east of the St. Gobain Massif and of Laon to which he could withdraw his center. Opposite the main British advance he had between the Oise and the Scheldt south of Valenciennes a strong natural position along the river Selle, which had been partially prepared for defense.

In the north, if he could come right out of Flanders and get behind the Scheldt from Valenciennes through Ghent, and rest his northern flank on the Dutch frontier, he would obtain a much shorter line and place in front of his troops a water barrier which would shelter them from the attacks of the dreaded tanks. This plan was attended with a certain measure of success. By the 14th of October, when King Albert was ready to attack again in Flanders, the arrangements for the German retreat were well advanced and that retreat was on the whole well conducted, though the enemy had to abandon numbers of guns and great quantities of stores of all kinds.

Roulers fell to French troops on the 15th. Thourout was occupied by the Belgians on the 16th and the next day they entered Ostend. Plumer meanwhile had occupied Menin and Courtrai and crossed the Lys. On the 18th of October the 5th British army farther south had found Lille evacuated by the enemy, and four days later the whole of the Belgian coast was in our hands and the Germans had reached the line of the Scheldt from Valenciennes to Ghent, along which they proposed to stand.

British Hustle Germans.

ON the main British front the German retreat was considerably hustled by the 3rd and 4th British armies, the latter of which had the 30th American division again in its front line. Throughout the 8th, 9th, and 10th of October the Germans were driven back to and across the battlefields of Le Cateau, where the 2d British corps had fought Von Kluck in 1914, during the retreat from Mons. In this fighting the Germans lost 12,000 prisoners and 250 guns, but succeeded in establishing themselves in the Selle section.

The retreat of the German center from the St. Gobain Massif, Laon, and the Chemin des Dames and the neighborhood of Reims was carried through in fairly good order, though about Rheims it was hastened by the transfer to that neighborhood of the 2nd and 36th American divisions in succession. On Oct. 13 the French entered Laon and two days later found themselves confronted by the enemy in his new positions. Opposite Gouraud the Germans withdrew into their strong lines along the Aisne, from the west of Rithel through Attiguy to Vouziers, just west of the northern edge of the Argonne.

On the American front, however, there was no retreat, for the Americans were now getting very near the Kriernhilde line and Crown Prince William's object was to keep them at a distance from it as long as possible. Therefore, here it was a question still of slow progress and a dingdong struggle in which the Americans gained a little ground each day, until by the 15th of October they were almost everywhere in close touch with the Kriernhilde position and the 32d division in the center of the 5th corps had forced its way through. Six days before this Pershing had handed over command of the 1st American army to Gen. Liggett, for the continued arrival of American troops had made it necessary to form a 2d American army of the troops occupying the Woeuvre front east of the St. Mihiel salient and opposite Metz.

Up to Oct. 16 Ludendorff appears to have been fairly well satisfied with the progress of his retreat. His left and center were by then back in their new positions, which were strong, and his losses during the retreat, if heavy, had not been overwhelming. His left had not yet completed the retreat from Flanders behind the Scheldt, but he had good reason to believe that it would be able to do so.

Accordingly on Oct. 17 he spoke much more boldly to the German cabinet than he had done on Sept. 29. He then proposed that negotiations should be continued with President Wilson, but solely with the object of obtaining favorable terms of peace. He expressed himself willing to fight on if the conditions of the allies were unfavorable and appears to have had in mind a slow and orderly withdrawal to the Meuse, where he hoped to be able to stand for the winter and reorganize his shattered forces.

But while he was actually pressing his views upon the German cabinet another blow had fallen upon him, and his new front had been broken.

The German position along the River Selle, which was the connecting link between the river Scheldt and the enemy's lines south of the Oise, was formidable. His left flank opposite Debeney's army rested on a series of very defensible wooded heights which divided the valleys of the Selle and the Oise. On the front of the 4th British army the Germans held the eastern bank of the Selle and had occupied the line of the railway which connects Le Cateau and Solesmes.

This railway line runs through a series of embankments and cuttings, which provided the German infantry with excellent cover and their machine gunners with positions from which they could sweep the valley, while the rolling heights behind gave their artillery splendid opportunities for dominating the approaches to the river. In front of the railway line a single, and as compared with the entanglements of the Hindenburg line, not very formidable belt of barbed wire had been erected, but the Selle, ordinarily an insignificant stream, was in flood, and in itself constituted a serious obstacle to infantry, which would have to force its way across in face of machine gun fire.

The sites for a strong trench system had been marked out by digging down to a depth of about one foot, but the German infantry and engineers, weary and dispirited by their defeats, had not the energy to complete these trenches in the time at their disposal. None the less, the attack of such a position was a serious undertaking.

Where Do They All Go If you could walk through our extensive Bicycle Plant in Birmingham, England, and then visit our large retail store in Liverpool, England, and from there step over to our six-story manufacturing plant at 168 to 174 N. Clinton St., Chicago, and then call at our large six-story building at 33, 35, 37 and 39 N. Canal St., you would be amazed beyond measure. You would say "WHERE DO THEY ALL GO?" Our answer is—PEOPLE ARE RIDING BICYCLES TODAY MORE THAN EVER.

On the fourth floor of our large plant, corner Washington and Canal Sts. (just opposite the Northwestern Depot), we have a full display of all models we manufacture, with a large stock in reserve ready for immediate delivery and salesman ready to show and explain everything and advise you as to your needs.

YOU would not run your motor dry. You provide it with the very best oil obtainable. Your tires are your greatest automobile expense. Why do you not procure for them the most efficient help in the performance of their work? Do not run them dry.

Mica is a flake-like formation. The flakes are so smooth in U. S. ORIGINAL MICA TIRE POWDER that it acts as a dry oil.

U. S. ORIGINAL MICA TIRE POWDER will not cake under any conditions; even though water reaches it in washing or running on wet pavements, it will keep this original flaky form.

Users of U. S. ORIGINAL MICA TIRE POWDER average 14,000 miles with a set of ordinary tires. One-quarter can should be used every time a tire is mounted. U. S. ORIGINAL MICA TIRE POWDER comes in a handy shaker top tube at 15 cents a tube.

Use O-Cedar Polish the O-Cedar Polish Way

First, remove mud, dust, etc., from your car by washing with water in the usual way.

If you have used oils, or wax, it is best to use Ivory Soap to remove them.

Pour about 4 ounces of O-Cedar in a pan and add a quart of warm water. Saturate a clean cloth in this and go over the body of the car. Do not attempt to clean too much at a time—take one side of the body or a fender first. Follow by rubbing with a dry cloth. But little rubbing is required to produce a hard, dry, lasting lustre.

Right off the Reel

By Mae Tinèe.

IN a recent issue of a weekly publication, Harry Leon Wilson takes an awful rap at the pictures. He does it as only Harry Leon Wilson can do that sort of thing—literally laughs them to death, and while he laughs he rough houses. He tickles the poor old films in the ribs; he tweaks at their factory curls, revealing, ludicrously, bald spots that have remained hidden from many of us; he gives them a punch in the jaw and their false teeth clatter upon the floor. And then with a final dexterous movement of utter contempt he knocks the wooden legs out from under them and leaves them nothing at all to stand on. It is pathetic.

While my private opinion is that Mr. Wilson wasn't really feeling so terribly funny when he wrote the article, but quite possibly had a grouch on, still it must be admitted there is some reason in the gentleman's discourse. The stories the movies have is what started him on this particular har har. He lams the director right and left for directing the life out of things, but comes down to the real pith of his article when he says:

"The director is not entirely to blame. It is not wholly his fault that you are unable to watch the average picture play without suspecting yourself to be half witted. He is doing the best he can and often enough he does it cleverly. What more can he do with the stories he gets? And where does he get the stories?"

I quote him again:

"From the factory sweatshop of the manager. Come with me, then, to the film quarter of Los Angeles and linger outside one of the factories as the noon whistle blows. See those throngs of pale, hollow cheeked, undersized scenario writers as they come blinking into the sunlight. See their little ones run to them with their dinner pails and their bottles of cold coffee. Watch yonder gaunt workman in frayed garments wolf a chocolate eclair from the low corner cafeteria. The poor fellow is a piece worker on plots dealing with the honest young ranch foreman who goes to the great city in woolly chaps and wins the love of a pure young cabaret dancer with the eyes of a child and the mind of a Madonna.

"Watch the other workers gesticulate excitedly with their bloodless hands. A radical in the group insists they should strike for an advance of 50 cents a day on all plots in which a society crook is reformed by the love of a good woman whose husband misunderstood her. Another agitator urges immediate affiliation with the east side garment workers of New York." And so on.

There can be no doubt about it but that Mr. Wilson has put his finger on the sore spot. The companies do have forces of scenario writers and these men and women in order to earn their pay must turn out just about so much stuff in so much time. And I don't care who the writer is, it is an impossibility for him or her to be always clever—or even credible. The little old brain goes just so far, then slumps.

Judging from Mr. Wilson's article, he has been the unfortunate and frenzied observer of the results of the brain slumps, for he hasn't a word to say regarding the good things that have been screened, and we all know that sometimes we do see good pictures. So perhaps he has not been quite fair. But the story is the thing. Producers are beginning to realize this. And now we are beginning to see screen versions of the world's great novels, plays, and short stories.

Bill Hughes, who runs a motion picture theater in David City, Neb., is short on a refrigerating system but long on psychology. He held a group of men on an east bound train interested the other day by telling of his experience with the theater audiences during the hot season. He said:

"In hot weather people may want to see pictures, but somehow they just can't seem to be able to sit still. I put fans in my theater, did everything I could, but the attendance dropped off, and I saw that if Bill was going to make money Bill would have to get busy. I lay awake all one night thinking it out. Next day I went to the ice company and bought some chunks of ice. I put one big fellow on one side of the stage and another on the other. Then I filled the orchestra pit with ice. Then I took my little old electric fans that hadn't been doing any good and set them playing over the ice. Fine business!"

"Did it cool off the theater?" one of the men asked skeptically.

"The audiences all came back," said Mr. Hughes.

"Did it cool off the theater?" insisted the questioner.

"Well," was the answer, "you could feel the cool breeze for thirty or forty feet. After that you could look at it. It was the psychology of the thing," said the astute Mr. Hughes.

Goldwyn has instituted a "title jury," who will supervise the titles of the photoplays brought out by this company. The press agent writes: "The jury comprises those with a literary training and others without any training of the kind." If a mere motion picture critic may be permitted an opinion, it would be well if both those with the literary training and without the literary training could spell.

Here is a story Mary MacLaren is telling:

A little boy said to his mother: "I want a dime to give a lame man."

"You shall have it, dear, and who is the lame man?" asked his mother.

"O, he's the doorkeeper at the movie show," was sonnie's reply.

Eugene O'Brien is all upset because of a letter just received from an admirer in which the writer declares she had heard that he was dead. My goodness, if they only think he's dead he should worry! He should hear some of the things they think about some of his colleagues!

Fritzie Brunette will play opposite J. Warren Karrigan in a coming feature.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

BETTY W.: Your much underlined epistle received and glad to get the same. Dustin Farnum did play in "The Squaw Man." The picture version in which Elliott Dexter appeared was not the same one. I haven't space here to give you a list of the various pictures in which Mr. Holt has appeared. The first work he ever did was to jump off a cliff into a rushing river, which act of bravery he performed in the interests of Universal, I believe. His part in "The Little American" was practically his first big lead. There are a number of good moving picture magazines. Afraid I can't give you my opinion as to the best in these columns. It takes a stamped and self-addressed envelope to make me get real personal.

MRS. L. H.: We'll see what we can do.

JAY DEE LEE: Afraid it will be hard for me to get my hat on tonight. Just the same, I loved your letter. Seeing a picture under pleasant conditions certainly has much to do with your enjoyment of the production. If I don't like a picture I don't know anything else to do but slam it. Do you? Or should I lie to please you?

JERRY S.: I'd like to oblige you if they'd only give me a little more space, but they're terribly stingy with their white paper these days. You say you'd give $10 to the fatherless children of Liberia to know my honest to goodness name. What would you give me to tell you?

A. M.: Best little enlightener you know! They assume the western lope, wear dress suits that never fit, and change their gowns to destroy statues in the pictures so that the educated movie fan may haste to write the lady critic, who wouldn't have a job if somebody didn't ask her questions. Otherwise, why do they do it—search me!

HELEN G.: Yes, I think Monroe Salisbury would be glad to send you a picture of himself. Address him in care of the Universal company, Universal City, Cal.

CATHERINE H.: My dear, pictures of all the people you mention have been printed in the rotogravure section of THE TRIBUNE. It's a shame if you have missed them! Watch the paper and you may see them again some day. Getting a collection together is lots of fun, isn't it?

F. M. A.: Yes, I'll be "kind enough." Address Richard Barthelmess in care of the Los Angeles Athletic club, Los Angeles, Cal.; Wallace Reid, care of Lasky, Hollywood, Cal.; Dorothy Gish, 4500 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal. Yes, Norma and Constance Talmadge have the same address. It is 318 East Forty-eighth street, New York. You're entirely welcome.

BEERY ADMIRERS: Sounds funny—but what's in a name anyhow. I'll try and do that little thing for you.

BUD: Glad to. Address Lila Lee in care of Paramount, Hollywood, Cal.

L. A.: Yes, there is an Al Jennings Production company in Los Angeles, Cal. It is located at suite 619, 430 South Broadway.

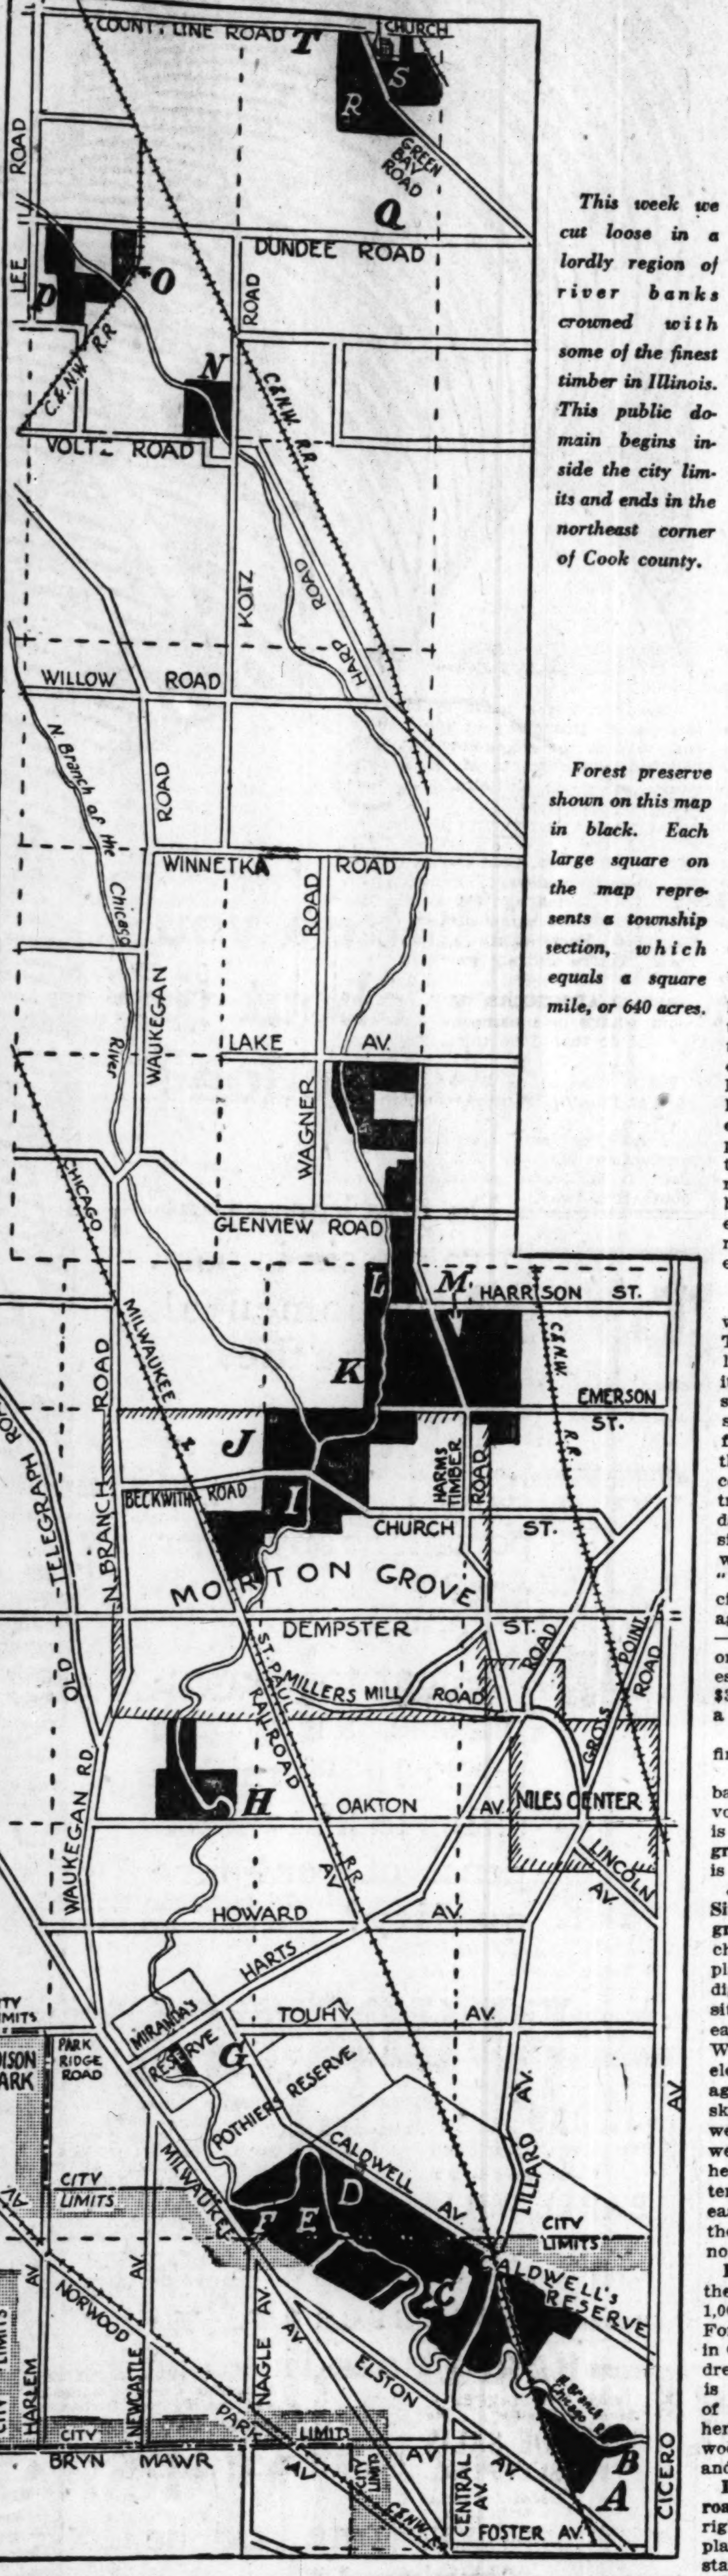
THE SIGHTS OF THE FOREST PRESERVE AND HOW TO FIND THEM

IV. North Branch of Chicago River Preserve (1,390 Acres) and Detached 120 Acre Turnbull Woods Tract.



This week we cut loose in a lordly region of river banks crowned with some of the finest timber in Illinois. This public domain begins inside the city limits and ends in the northeast corner of Cook county.

Forest preserve shown on this map in black. Each large square on the map represents a township section, which equals a square mile, or 640 acres.

BY EYE WITNESS.

THERE is everything for your body's good and your soul's satisfaction, from baseball diamonds to a church, on the north branch of the Chicago river tract of the Cook county forest preserve. It possesses all the advantages that a playground meant for the city pent ought to possess.

Part of it lies in metropolitan area and can be reached by an 8 cent fare. Car lines and railroads skirt it and in some places cross it. It contains every variety of prairie scenery from beauty rolling tracts to mystical marshes of the Skokie which artists love to paint and the elusive charm of which Von Hofsten has caught with notable success.

Its historical associations are rich and definite. Within its borders are the sites of Indian villages, burial grounds, and chipping stations, and, best of all, the well and traces of the house of good old Billy Caldwell [Chief Sauganash], who was a friend to this community at a time when it direly needed friends. University experts on forestry have proclaimed some of the timber in this region to be unexcelled by any other in northern Illinois. Its picnic groves are well kept and well supplied with water. It is deficient in firepits for steaks, but that deficiency is being remedied as fast as Chief Kennicott and his men can get around to it. Next spring it will contain a free eighteen hole golf course.

Some of this noble preserve is actually in the city; much more of it is bordered by a rapidly densing suburban residential district. But its full glory is still to be, for it will fulfill all its possibilities of rest and refuge when the day comes, as it surely will come, that the whole north shore area from Lake Michigan to the north branch and north to the county line is city. Then it will be an oasis of woods and waters for a clientele that will number a million or more, and that clientele, looking back to the second decade of the twentieth century, will realize how wise were their forefathers in that decade in creating the Cook county forest preserve. Then every one of the present 1,400 acres will be worth a hundred times its present value. Indeed, within a few years this tract will be far larger, for the purchases required to complete the north branch preserve are not finished.

The present acreage of this preserve lies in Chicago and in the townships of Niles, New Trier, and Northfield.

The district foresters in authority here are Messrs. Maclean and Froehlich. Mr. Maclean is a son of County Commissioner (and Forest Preserve Commissioner) William H. Maclean, a fact that may cause you to think you sniff nepotism. Perhaps you do, for that weakness is one of which the county board is not invariably innocent (see political note under letter B in the subjoined guide), but the fact remains that young Maclean is a good public servant. An enthusiast in forestry and a university man, he brings both culture and zeal to his work, and he is making good. In the war he was an ensign.

Mr. Froehlich is a hummer and dares to discharge incompetent and lazy labor. This courage of his is a desirable asset to the taxpayers, because Froehlich's jurisdiction comprises area reached on an 8 cent fare. Hence it is cheap and easy for commissioners so inclined to send men worthless when it comes to a day's labor, but useful as ward heelers in campaign time, out to Froehlich. But it isn't easy to keep them there, for immediately he takes their measure he sends them packing.

Now we explore as follows—the letters referring to the accompanying map:

A—Forest Glen Station. Entrance to southern end of north branch of Chicago river preserve and stopping place of Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad's trains. River very pretty along here and the terrain given variety by "kettle valleys," or sunken stretches of woodland and prairie, which were especially beloved of the Indians.

B—Caretaker's House. Nearby are comfort stations, shelters, baseball diamond, picnic grove with fire pit, and all such conveniences for a day in the open. This stretch is a favorite haunt of painters. It was while letter B was being inked in on this map that I happened on something interesting, and, to my thinking, very wrong.

"B, caretaker's house," said I to the Forest Preserve mapmaker, with whom I was working, and added, apropos of a pleasant memory, "that's where good old Mr. Franke lives."

"He did," said the mapmaker, "but he doesn't now."

"No? Why?"

"Fired," said the mapmaker.

"Any charges?" I asked.

But the mapmaker became reticent. He was in no position to talk, and I ought to have known it.

Later I asked questions of commissioners who were in a position to talk, notably one Forest Preserve commissioner who isn't afraid of anybody.

"Why was Mr. Franke dismissed?" I asked.

"Politics."

"Any charges?"

"No. Politics, I tell you."

"He seemed to me an exceptionally good man," I ventured.

"Never heard a word against him," said the commissioner, "except that perhaps he was pretty strict with the public, but you know what the public are. You wrote about the fourteen acres of lavender phlox they uprooted in the preserve, and you know how they steal the nickel plated faucets out of the preserve lavatories. Yes, Franke was a good man. He's on the day labor payroll now."

Wouldn't it made you froth!

But you froth in vain, for there is no civil service in the Forest Preserve administration.

I remember Franke well. I wandered around the Forest Glen tract with him one bitter day in the dead of winter and he was just as interested and eager to show me things as if it had been June. I remember his pride in a century old thornapple tree on the preserve, and the gratified shyness which he mentioned the fact that sometimes there would be as many as six artists coming out of a Saturday to paint in the preserve. He spoke much of trees and asked me whether I thought they had better ones in Europe, and answering his own question, said: "I think they got no better ones, but they take better care of them."

An interesting, instructive man I found him, and I was sorry to hear that he had become the victim of a rotten system.

C—Here is the famous Edgebrook tract, near to the golf club of that name. Next spring a public golf course laid out on Forest Preserve property will be a feature here. It will be an eighteen hole course. A foot bridge crosses the river in this section, and two-thirds of a mile of concrete road will soon cut through it.

Nearby is another caretaker's house, the occupant being Mr. Adams. As he also is an exceptional man, I wonder how long he'll last. He does many of the culpable things good Franke used to do. He is a gentleman. He likes to answer the questions of interested people and he is nice to children. When preserve officials are discussing where to send some children's picnic, the frequent decision is, "Send 'em to Adams—he'll make a nice day for them."

D—Now you are in the heart of a historic tract—the old Billy Caldwell reservation. Billy Caldwell, a half breed known among the Indians as Chief Sauganash, was perhaps the best friend the early white settlers in these parts ever had. His father was an Irishman who served in the British army as colonel; his mother was a Pottowatamie girl whom the colonel married. The Jesuits at Detroit educated Billy, who spoke English and French and several Indian dialects. The Indians, if they did not idolize him, certainly obeyed him implicitly, and he saved many of the rude forefathers from massacre and their homes from pillage. In recognition of his services, which extended over a great part of the first four decades of the nineteenth century, the government gave him a tract of land along the north branch of the Chicago river. That tract was bounded on the south by the present Bryn Mawr avenue and on the north by Kenilworth avenue. If Billy's descendants, if there are any, had it today they would be many times millionaires. For many years he lived in a house which the government built for him at the corner of the present State street and Chicago avenue. He was also given an annuity of $400, and by the treaty of 1833 was awarded $10,000, a sum the United States senate was so careful as to reduce by half. He never became an American citizen, though he was a justice of the peace. About 1836 he led his people on the long trek westward to Council Bluffs, whither they went by the terms of a treaty. Chicago's first hotel, the Sauganash, was named after Billy.

So much for Billy here, though there is much more to tell.

Now, if you look sharp in your wanderings over this so-called Le Moyne tract, at letter D you will come on certain depressions in a clearing on a high bank on the north side of the river. These depressions show where the house and the well of Billy Caldwell were, whether before or after he lived on the place at Chicago avenue and State street I don't know. Both the Edgebrook tract at C and this Le Moyne tract were part of Billy's property, which touched the present Milwaukee avenue at Niles. In addition to its rich historical associations the Le Moyne tract is valuable as a specially nice place for campers and picnickers. The river runs through it and there are fine trees.

E—Excellent baseball diamond on south side of river.

F—Picnic grove, with parking space, shelter shed, comfort stations, and drinking water. This is the main entrance to preserve from Milwaukee avenue.

G—Village of Niles and right of way, 1,600 feet long and averaging eighty feet wide, presented to the forest preserve by John B. Langan of Atlasta farm. It leads northwest from a bend of the river, through the beautiful Atlasta, to the Hart road. "Don't know John Langan?" said Owen O'Malley recently, adding, "Well, I'll identify him to you once and for all—he's the only man that ever gave Cook county anything." Also, he is this kind of a man: Foresters ride up to his door at dinner time and say, "Good evening, John. There are eight in the party tonight." And Langan says to the housekeeper, "Another detachment of the Prairie division! Do the best you can, won't you?" Then everybody eats till he is speechless—not Langan speechless, but everybody else.

H—Here you are at Oakton avenue. It is a large tract and a beauty spot, with playground as yet unequipped. The river runs through it. It is the latest forest preserve purchase. I call it the Tragedy Tract. This is the story: Last autumn the forest preserve offered Mr. Dewes $275 an acre for it. He accepted and then refused the offer, and so condemnation proceedings were begun, to Dewes' distress. The hearing was to come up one day last winter. The lawyers for both sides were in court, and everybody waiting. Then a telephone message: "Mr. Dewes has just committed suicide." Hearing postponed. Two weeks ago the court's decision was announced—$260 an acre—and the deal was closed on that basis. The other day a forester told me the land is worth today $300 an acre. Maybe Mr. Dewes had a right to be sore.

At the north end of this tract is a fine stretch with high banks.

I—Beautiful stretch of timber on banks of river at Church street. Favorite spot for picnics. In this tract is one of the most admired hawthorn groves in the country. Blooming time is May.

J—Caretaker's house: Flock of sheep. Site of Indian village and burial ground. The Indians almost always chose gravelly ground for their burial places because it was dry and easy to dig in. In later times many of these sites were used as gravel pits and the earth was excavated to gravel roads. When Church street was being graveled from this pit, some thirty years ago, the workmen came on so many skeletons that they struck—said they weren't ghouls. Also in this tract is a well partly stoned up with Indian ax heads, which the preserve people intend to rescue. You are now directly east of the Glenview Golf club. Here the east and west branches of the north branch of the Chicago river join.

K—Fine old hard maples. One of them is reckoned to be from 700 to 1,000 years old. They are, says Chief Forester Kennicott, "the oldest trees in Cook county beyond a doubt." Hundreds of them are 400 years old. This is truly forest primeval. The shade of the maple is the densest we have; hence here is the natural home of the wood thrush. Two Boy Scout camps and a well in here.

L—Terminus of Evanston electric road, which brings you from Evanston right into heart of preserve. Dancing platform, drinking water, and comfort station.

M—Harms woods, east of Harms timber road. Full of flowers. L and M are notable for hepaticas (blooming time April), spring beauties (blooming time April), and trilliums (blooming time May). But beware of the poison ivy in here. From the strip bounded on the north by Lake avenue you go three miles north and a half a mile west to reach N, which is the next strip of forest preserve. In between there is none, but there will be when contemplated purchases are completed.

N—Beauty spot. Camping ground of Boy Scouts for many a summer.

O—Badek woods. Notable for wild flowers. Favorite haunt of Indians. Woods full of arrow heads; so numerous that it is not unlikely that here was a "chipping station" or Indian mint for the manufacture of arrow and spear heads. There are no natural deposits of flint in this country and where you find any considerable fragments of it you may be pretty sure that the Indians imported it, probably from Johnson county, near Anna, which is 340 miles to the south of us.

P—Here is what Prof. Cowles of the University of Chicago describes as one of the finest pieces of forest in the county, and he should know, because he has been making a survey of timber in northern Illinois for the United States government.

Q—The Dundee road, leading from Glencoe to Wheeling and the Palatine tracts of the forest preserve, six and a half miles west. Concrete roads all the way.

R—Turnbull woods tract, which is bisected by the Green Bay road, which, in the old days, was one of the heaviest traveled of the trails from Chicago to the north. This Turnbull tract, up in the northeastern corner of the county, is half a mile from Lake Michigan and comprises 120 acres. To reach it from letter P go a mile and a half east across the Skokie (Indian name Chi-wab-Skokie, meaning big wet prairie) and then half a mile north. It commands haunting mystical views of the vast Skokie which Von Hofsten loves to paint. Note the sunsets on the Skokie by special request of Mr. Kennicott. Caretaker's house on Turnbull tract is the old Turnbull homestead. Sixty years ago it was a notable structure in these parts. Chicago and Northwestern suburban trains and Chicago and Milwaukee electric cars deposit you at Braeside station, which is at the northeast corner of this tract.

S—Church; on the preserve and owned by it. Services still held there. Ultimately it probably will be used as a shelter and refectory.

T—County Line road. Commands a great view over into Lake county.

To reach the five principal tracts of the north branch of the Chicago river preserve note the following:

THE public, which has so often expressed itself in favor of Maxwell cars (having purchased more than $200,000,000 worth to date) now finds a new delight in this wonderful car.

It's a Post-War Maxwell.

The hundred and one things that keen engineers worked out in Maxwell laboratories during the war "have found their way into steel!"

It's a greater car than any of the 300,000 of this same basic design that now may be found on any of the world's highways.

You can search from axle to axle and most anywhere you will find bits of fine engineering development that will astonish you.

You can locate them in radiator, brakes, electric system, transmission, frame, bonnet, body and even top.

Yet, there is nothing that long road tests have not proved out, that ripe experience and level heads have not O. K'd.

Also equipped with Hot Spot and Ram's-horn.

You pay $985 f.o.b. Detroit. You might easily pay $200 more and feel that you had a decided bargain.

The Campaign of 1918

particularly as the enemy, knowing that it covered the direct road to Maubeuge, had occupied it in great strength and had numerous machine guns and a powerful artillery.

The battle of the Selle began in the early hours of the 17th of October with an attack by Debeney's 1st French army and the 9th, 2d American, and 13th corps of the 4th British army against the German left, from Le Cateau southward. The enemy fought well, the 27th and 30th American divisions having a particularly hard task in their attack upon the railway line south of Le Cateau, where it ran along a commanding hill. It was only after three days of strenuous effort that the Germans south of Le Cateau were forced back behind the Sambre and Oise canal.

It was quite evident from this fighting that the enemy was making a desperate effort to hold up our advance. Appeals were issued to the German troops to remember the devastation which they had seen in Belgium and northern France, and to save their country from a like fate. But, though they fought valiantly, they had lost confidence both in themselves and in their leaders, and they had none of the grit and staying power which distinguished the British soldier when he was in like straits.

However, it still remained to tackle the German main position along the Selle, and this was done in a night attack by seven divisions of the 4th army and one of the 1st army. A mist in the valley increased the cover afforded by night and enabled the infantry and engineers to lay foot bridges across the Selle under the very noses of the enemy's machine gunners and tanks to be brought down unseen into the valley. At 2 a. m. on Oct. 20 the British infantry advanced to the assault and helped by the ubiquitous tanks, which succeeded somehow in getting across the river, the heights on the east bank were stormed after fierce fighting, for the Germans again fought hard.

Difficulties of Advance Ignored.

THE weather had broken, the ground was saturated, there was little shelter for the troops; the roads churned up by shell fire and by the stream of traffic became rivers of mud, and both roads and railways were constantly being cut by mines, which the enemy had buried beneath them, and fitted with delay action fuses, so that they would explode at irregular intervals after our troops had passed beyond, but the enthusiasm of the British troops was not to be denied.

On Oct. 22 the 4th, 3d and 1st armies made a general advance on a front of fifteen miles between the Sambre and Oise canal and the Scheldt. On the right the Germans were driven back into the Mormal forest, in the center our troops got within a mile of Le Quesnoy and on the left approached Valenciennes. Thus, in the battle of the Selle, British, French and American troops had made a breach about thirty-five miles wide and nearly six miles deep in Ludendorff's rallying line.

The twenty-four British and American divisions engaged had defeated thirty-one German divisions and had captured 20,000 prisoners and 475 guns. After this disaster the morale of the German troops on the British front again collapsed and this time it never recovered. They had nerved themselves for a final effort, and when that failed their spirit was broken. Ludendorff was endeavoring to assure his government that there was no cause for despair when the news of the Selle battle reached them.

It convinced them that there was no line upon which the German army could be relied upon to stand and it shattered what little faith they had left in their military adviser. Ludendorff tendered his resignation, but was ordered to remain at his post and to do what was possible to clean up the mess he had made. The capitulation of Turkey, following upon that of Bulgaria, and the decisive defeat of the Austrians on the Piave, coupled with the never-ending tale of disaster on the western front and the mutterings of revolution in Germany left no glimmering hope in the minds of the kaiser and his ministers. While they were preparing to send in plenipotentiaries to Foch, he, in order to make assurance doubly sure, was setting the stage for the final advance.

In the south, by the end of October, Ligget's center had made more holes in the Kriemhilde system, the village of Grandpre north of the Argonne was captured and the American front, now straightened out into a rough east and west line from Grandpre to Brieulles on the Meuse, was marshaled and ready. Gouraud was equally prepared to storm the German defenses on the Aisne. The British had no artificial obstacle between them and their goal, Maubeuge.

In order to help King Albert to force the formidable Scheldt, Foch had obtained two American divisions, the 37th and 91st from Pershing, and had railed them up to Ypres, whence they had marched to join the French troops, coöperating with the Belgians and were ready in line by Oct. 31. The next morning the curtain was rung up for the final act of the great drama.

Food for Thought

WHEN considering the motorization of your delivery system, or the increase and replacement of your present fleet, give your careful thought to these facts:

first—That thousands of disappointed owners of "orphan" vehicles are daily wrestling with the problem of getting parts for replacement.

That in five years, the makers of 241 motor vehicles went out of business.

That "Infant Mortality" among truck manufacturers is appalling.

second—That the Oldsmobile "Economy" Truck is built by the builders of the famous Oldsmobile, is backed by the Oldsmobile's 22-year reputation of worth and is sold under the Olds Motor Works' Standard Guarantee.

third—That the Olds Motor Works, the makers of both the Oldsmobile and the Oldsmobile "Economy" Truck, as part of the powerful General Motors Corporation, are beyond question ranked among the leading and substantial Automobile and Truck Manufacturers in the World.

What do you know about tire construction?

Do you know that there are six important fundamental features in a tire?

—that any one of them is just as important as any other one?

—that to overemphasize any one merely furnishes sales talk at the expense of real tire quality?

BRUNSWICK
TIRES

In the Brunswick, these six essential features are coordinated into one composite, scientifically balanced tire.

'Rick' Heads List of Officials for Elgin Road Race

Early Birds Expected to Start Practice This Week

EDDIE RICKENBACKER, the top notch hero of the year in motoring circles, has been named honorary referee of the proceedings at Elgin a week from Saturday, when road racing will be revived on the old Kane county course. He will share the limelight for the day with Richard Kennerdell, chairman of the A. A. A. contest board, who proposes to supervise things in person, and C. G. Sinsabaugh, a former Chicagoan, who will serve as active referee.

Other veterans of motordom included in the list of officials as announced yesterday include Fred J. Wagner, who will officiate as starter, and Thomas J. Hay and N. H. Van Sicklen, who will be his assistants. Charles P. Root will act for the contest board, F. E. Edwards, B. M. Ikert, and H. A. Tarantous will make up the technical committee, and the timing devices will be handled by LeRoy Hillman, R. A. Leavell, and Darwin S. Hatch.

Seven organizations will be represented on the board of judges, as follows:

Chicago Athletic association—W. F. Grower, S. E. Hibben, F. W. Wentworth, F. X. Mudd, L. T. Jacques.

Chicago Automobile club—Joseph E. Colleader, Ira M. Cobe, J. T. Brown, B. B. Ayers, Harry Vissering, C. E. Gregory.

Chicago Motor club—C. M. Hayes, G. W. Dixon, F. E. Jack, D. Rosenbach, E. A. Bates.

Elgin Road Race association—Fred W. Jencks, W. C. Willson, John A. Logan, James Berazy, W. A. Kerber.

Chicago Automobile Trade association—L. A. Peil, C. R. Dashiel, C. E. Gambill, George M. Bird, T. D. Beard.

Indianapolis Speedway—C. G. Fisher, J. A. Allis, T. R. Meyers.

Uniontown Speedway—A. C. Johnson.

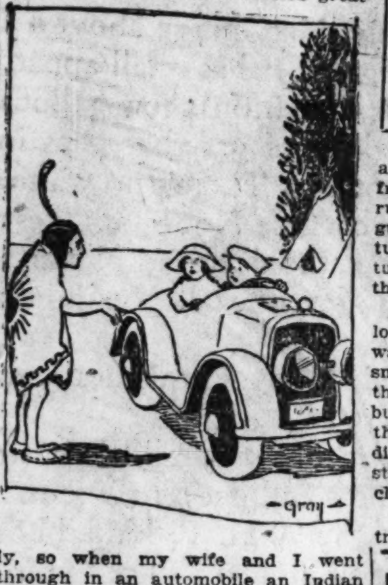
Many drivers and their mounts are expected to arrive daily at Elgin, starting tomorrow. Joe Thomas and his Mercer already are "prepping" for the event. Practice may be started before Saturday.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. Make a copy and keep it if you wish to preserve what you have written.

Canned.

My funniest experience was at Indian reservation. The Indians had been getting shipments of canned goods, at which they marveled greatly, so when my wife and I went through in an automobile an Indian remarked: "Ugh! Heap canned horse!"



G. H.

Dangerous Characters.

My cousin, who has a new car, invited me to go with him the other day when he took it out for its maiden trip. We rode along innocently enough and for a while had the time of our lives. Then Lizzie became fractious and started backfiring, whereupon, to our amazement, three automobiles loaded with police bore down upon us with drawn revolvers. We tried to think what we had done and then remembered. It was the third day of the race riots.

J. B.

He Says It's True.

I recall a funny motoring incident that might have turned out decidedly otherwise if it had not been for a mere chance. It occurred in the country during the early spring.

A young fellow and his sister were returning in the wee small hours from a dance in a neighboring town. He was driving a flivver. They were both very tired and finally they both dropped off to sleep.

It so happened that late the day before a heavy farm wagon had passed that way, leaving deep ruts in the mud, and during the evening these had frozen solid. The car got into these ruts and ran along them with no one guiding it for some time. The tracks turned several corners and finally turned into a farmyard and went into the barn.

The fliv turned the corners and followed the tracks into the yard. It was going straight on and would have smashed into the barn door had not the girl waked in time to see the building looming up just in front of them. Realizing the situation immediately, she jammed on the brake and stopped the car a few feet from the closed door.

I am assured that this is a perfectly true story.

Swinehart Tires

This Man Knows Why
They Wear
-and Wear
-and Wear

MOST DEALERS

are familiar with the care, time, materials and workmanship that go into the making of Swinehart Tires. And, after all, these are the essentials—the principal ones—necessary in making good tires.

We Make Them So

There is such a thing as a good tire.

One that is made to stand up and go through with the worst that comes.

And it's the only kind worth having; the kind you can believe in.

Most men in the tire business think Swinehart Tires are that kind.

At any rate, we try to make them so.

One thing we DO know:

It's the tire without a single Government rejection.

Swinehart Tires are made in both Fabric and Cord—both give more guaranteed mileage for your money than you ever would expect or ever have a right to expect.

Ideal Cellular Truck Tires

The angle, depth and width of the cells or holes in this remarkable tire are scientifically correct. This patented construction makes this tire semi-pneumatic and eliminates the dangers due to blowouts and punctures, so common in pneumatic truck tires. No spare tire is necessary, because the tire will often outwear the truck. This cellular feature also makes the tire anti-skid and non-heating. The many advantages are obvious.

Let your next tires be Swinehart—and see that the truck or car you buy is equipped with them.

Dealers: There may be an opening for a dealer in your territory. Better inquire now.

RIDES LIKE AIR!

OVER 75,000 USERS

No Punctures

Essenkay

THE TIRE FILLER

No Blowouts

For Passenger Cars and Trucks

With ESSENKAY-filled tires, punctures, blowouts, slow leaks or flat tires cannot occur. No time is lost at garages or service stations for air or tire repairs—none of the many dangers, expenses and annoyances of air-filled tires.

Owners of passenger cars and trucks to the number of over 75,000—men of a class notably shrewd and sensible—have replaced air with ESSENKAY in their tires.

Practical PROOF was submitted to these 75,000 ESSENKAY users by means of our liberal Free Trial Offer BEFORE they accepted ESSENKAY as the Better-than-Air Tire Filler.

The logic of ESSENKAY is irresistible. The REASONS for its adoption in place of air are clear and convincing. Its rapid growth in public favor is illustrated by the fact that more than 20,000 installations of ESSENKAY have been made during the past few months.

First Cost—Last Cost

ESSENKAY is an investment, not an expense. When an ESSENKAY-filled tire is worn down to the last layer of fabric the old tire may be discarded and the same ESSENKAY transferred to a new casing. ESSENKAY is now in use on thousands of pleasure cars, trucks, converted trucks, and tractors. Many municipalities, departments of Government, newspapers, etc., have increased truck and delivery efficiency to 100% and proved that first cost is last cost.

Try It FREE

Prove for yourself—on your own car—under road and load conditions of your own choosing—that ESSENKAY is Better-Than-Air.

ESSENKAY is installed by us on free trial. We do not say "buy" ESSENKAY. We say "try" ESSENKAY. Ride over smooth roads, then over the roughest you can find, including hilly and sand country. Allow the car to remain under maximum load on a concrete floor to prove that ESSENKAY does not flatten. Then—if you are not convinced that ESSENKAY rides like air—that it will end your tire troubles—that you will no longer be bothered with punctures, blowouts, or slow leaks—that ESSENKAY will not flatten, crumble or deteriorate—return it—the test will cost you nothing.

Doubles Tire Mileage

The Use of ESSENKAY is a proved economy, because ESSENKAY should last as long as your car. Tires filled with ESSENKAY are always at uniform pressure—cannot be deflated or run flat. 10,000 to 20,000 miles on ESSENKAY-filled tires is the rule, not the exception. ESSENKAY comes in sections to fit perfectly into all sizes of tires and fills the casing completely. It contains no rubber, hence has none of the imperfections of rubber. It can be installed on all types of rims.

Builders Still Differ on Types of Spring Design

Any of Them May Give Trouble and All Need Care.

BY HIGH SPEED.

A FEW years ago there was the greatest diversity of opinion as to the correct type of spring suspension and motorists, even those of experience, were comparing easy riding by comparing the spring design.

It has been proved by many engineers that any of the ten to fifteen different spring suspensions in use will give the desired results if the layout is correct for the particular car on which it is employed. In other words, it doesn't matter so much whether the springs are semi-elliptic or three-quarters elliptic, so long as the spring length is correct, the number of leaves accurately proportioned to the work to be done, and so on.

There will shortly be announced a new model of car of very popular make with a brand new spring suspension which is claimed to give easy riding in a light car such as cannot be duplicated in any car of whatever weight with conventional springs. The maker attributes the easy riding to the spring suspension, though most of those who have seen the car believe it is just as much a matter apart from the mere springs.

To name a few of the many spring suspensions now in use, there are: Cantilever, as on the King (properly semi-elliptic cantilever); quarter elliptic cantilever, as on the small Chevrolet; semi-elliptic transverse, as on the Ford; double semi-elliptic transverse, as on the Marmon; the semi-elliptic design is used for front springs on every car but the Ford and Chevrolet, and on the majority for rears also; platform, as used on the Cadillac; three-quarters elliptic, as used on the Franklin; double cantilever, as used on the Austin, and the new suspension mentioned previously.

That there is such a diversity of opinion among engineers is but natural. All of the designs were produced in order that the best results might be had for all-around conditions, but to say that because a platform spring, for example, gives good results on one design of car it will do the same on a totally different car is not true. For this reason many engineers make the error of supplying springs of a certain design with the result that the owner of the car soon finds out he needs shock absorbers.

It is quite possible to get along without shock absorbers on many cars, but so many have at least one bad feature that shock absorbers are a welcome addition. There are certain cars that show fine results over ordinary macadam roads, but as soon as a really rough road is encountered the passengers cannot keep their seats.

Springs no matter of what type may give the owner trouble. I have received reports lately of certain makes of cars that are chronic spring breakers. One owner told me he replaced four right rear springs and doesn't know what is causing the trouble.

In many cars with Hotchkiss drive where the proper provision is not made to take the additional stresses, spring breakage may be common. If your car gives persistent spring trouble buy the best main leaf possible, keep the spring clips always tight and the shackles free and with a minimum of side play.

Springs require lubrication just as any other parts. While the car is in motion the spring leaves rub over each other, and therefore they should be lubricated. Whenever a spring is removed, and the leaves separated, spread graphite over the surfaces.

There are on the market some special constant lubricators for springs and the majority of these are good. Some are in the form of wicks properly supported and fed from an oil well. There are spring covers also which enable lubricant already spread between the leaves to be retained and above all prevent water from getting in.

Shackles are a common source of trouble. Spring shackles are necessary in order that there be room for flattening of the spring when the frame goes down. The shackle amounts to a free joint between the spring and the frame. The shackles are supported by bolts, and if these latter are not well oiled or greased freedom of movement is restricted.

While grease is not the best lubricant for shackle bolts, it is better than none at all. Grease is bad because it hardens and does not work its way to the rubbing surfaces. Where possible oil cups should be substituted for grease cups.

Shackles often are noisy due to side play. This may be caused in some designs by looseness of the bolt and in others by wear. Where shims are supplied it is easy to take up the play.

In cars fitted up with cantilever springs, with the free end forward and the permanent end on an oscillating member around the axle tube, the latter member should receive its share of lubricant.

Considering the strenuous nature of their service, the springs do not ordinarily receive the care and attention they deserve. A very brief periodic going over, and above all systematic lubrication will keep the springs functioning properly, adding greatly to the comfort of the car owner and his passengers.

Tribune Tours 1919

XVII.—To South Haven and Muskegon.

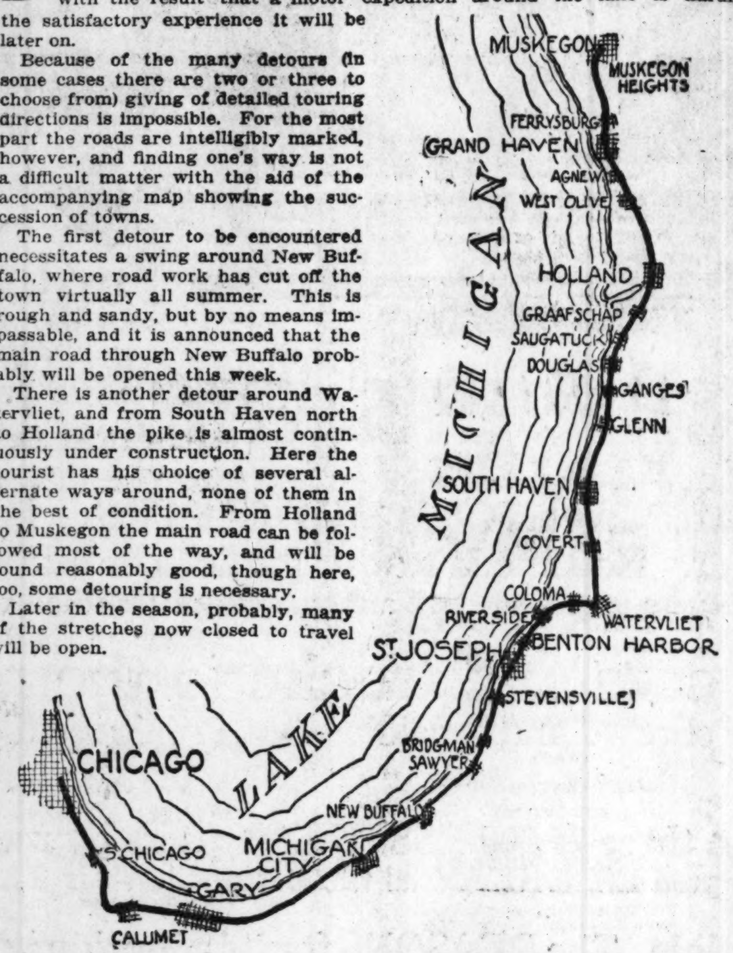
DRIVING to resorts along the Michigan shore this summer is a matter of just one detour after another. Improvement work on the West Michigan pike, delayed by the war, is now under way all along the line, with the result that a motor expedition around the lake is hardly the satisfactory experience it will be later on.

Because of the many detours (in some cases there are two or three to choose from) giving of detailed touring directions is impossible. For the most part the roads are intelligibly marked, however, and finding one's way is not a difficult matter with the aid of the accompanying map showing the succession of towns.

The first detour to be encountered necessitates a swing around New Buffalo, where road work has cut off the town virtually all summer. This is rough and sandy, but by no means impassable, and it is announced that the main road through New Buffalo probably will be opened this week.

There is another detour around Watervliet, and from South Haven north to Holland the pike is almost continuously under construction. Here the tourist has his choice of several alternate ways around, none of them in the best of condition. From Holland to Muskegon the main road can be followed most of the way, and will be found reasonably good, though here, too, some detouring is necessary.

Later in the season, probably, many of the stretches now closed to travel will be open.



Longest Concrete Road.

Hundreds of men are now at work on the National Oil Trails road in various Illinois counties across the state from St. Louis to Terre Haute, and indications point to a real highway within the next six or nine months. The road will be 170 miles long and eighteen feet wide, and is said to be the longest concrete road in the world.

The federal government projected this road, to be built from Washington to St. Louis, more than seventy-five years ago. It was completed from the capital as far west as Ohio, and surveys were made all the way to St. Louis, as well as some grading, but the development of steam railroading came on and interest in the national highway was lost.

Plans are now under way for improving the road in Indiana and parts of Ohio, as well as in other states from ocean to ocean.

Performance

With appealing beauty and comfort Model 90 combines unvarying dependability of performance that inspires the sincere pride of 150,000 owners and the universal appreciation of the public.

Characteristic of the quality of this performance are these recent records made by Model 90:

In Oklahoma Model 90 broke the world's non-stop, high gear record—4370 miles in 7 days and 7 nights. In Massachusetts another Model 90 car established a non-stop record of 3852 miles in 7 days and 7 nights without varying from a fixed schedule. Again in Pennsylvania an unequaled non-stop, high gear record of 702 miles in 5¼ days was made by a Model 90 car.

These remarkable records were all made by stock cars differing in no essential from Model 90 cars that are daily demonstrating their unusual serviceability to 150,000 owners.

WHY A HOT SPOT CHALMERS IS STINGY ABOUT GAS

THE only thing stingy about a Chalmers is its use of gas. It has small appetite. It travels a long day's march on a few gallons.

Every drop of gas that goes in the tank is held to account. There's no waste.

That is because Hot Spot takes the low grade, inferior gas of the day, and prepares it so that the engine can get out all the power that nature put in.

It is aided by Ram's-horn, and the results are de luxe.

Put your foot on the little button of any Hot Spot Chalmers and get a new sensation.

It isn't the 90 H. P. kind, but it gives quick, decisive action and so "silky" you scarcely know there's anything going on "up under the bonnet."

It's action that doesn't burn your pocketbook, nor jar your fenders loose.

One ride usually wins a friend.

Touring Barriers Are Disappearing in Many States

Illinois, However, Still Lags in Motoring Hospitality

TOURING courtesies extended by the several states to stranger motorists are becoming much more liberal than was formerly the case. There is now no part of the United States or of Canadian provinces in which hospitality is not granted for at least short periods without the necessity of local registration.

Illinois motorists, however, derive comparatively little benefit from this interchange of courtesies, since the more liberal visiting privileges are granted in general only for the period allowed by the visitor's home state.

Illinois extends courtesies to motorists from other states for only sixty days. Twenty-seven states and Canadian provinces are more generous than that—to each other—but in most of them Illinoisans may not operate more than sixty days under their home license plates because of our own restrictions.

Nineteen states and the province of Quebec now permit unrestricted touring the whole year to motorists from localities which allow complete reciprocal privileges. One, Arizona, has a six months' limit, while five states and Nova Scotia permit ninety days, and seven states and British Columbia sixty days.

Eleven states and Manitoba, Ontario, and Saskatchewan have a thirty day limit. In Montana and North Dakota the period is indefinite.

One state and Alberta and New Brunswick in Canada allow twenty or twenty-one days, while New Jersey and Virginia have a two week limit. The least hospitable place is Porto Rico, where a visiting motorist may stay only five days without registration.

The time limits now set by the various states and Canadian provinces are:

THE WHOLE YEAR—Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Idaho, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Quebec.

SIX MONTHS—Arizona.

NINETY DAYS—California, Colorado, Michigan, Washington, Wyoming, and Nova Scotia.

SIXTY DAYS—Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Mississippi, Missouri, New Mexico, North Carolina, British Columbia.

THIRTY DAYS—Connecticut, Georgia, Maine, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Manitoba, Ontario, Saskatchewan.

TWENTY-ONE DAYS—New Brunswick.

TWENTY DAYS—New Hampshire and Alberta.

FIFTEEN DAYS—New Jersey.

FOURTEEN DAYS—Virginia.

FIVE DAYS—Porto Rico.

"TEMPORARY SOJOURN"—Montana.

"WHILE PASSING THROUGH"—North Dakota.

In most cases the visiting privileges are granted "provided no regular place of abode or business is acquired for a period exceeding thirty days." Arizona, California, Colorado, British Columbia, Manitoba, and Ontario have special regulations requiring notification of local authorities or the obtaining of a visitor's license or permit, for which no charge is made.

In Canada.

The provincial government of Saskatchewan reports it has issued 37,000 automobile licenses this year.

REMEMBER MOTORCYCLE MIKE?—Well, here's "Cannonball" Baker, who, one suspects, may have learned a thing or two from the old "Tribune" cartoon. The photographer caught him ten days ago with Olin Ross, his passenger, at the finish of a 1,714 mile run down the Pacific coast from the Canadian to the Mexican border—a little jaunt which he negotiated over all sorts of roads in 2 days 17 hours and 53 minutes, beating the train time for the distance by 1¼ hours and the automobile record by 32 hours. That's some people's notion of a good time.

SPEED TITLE TO BE REVIVED NEXT YEAR

THE national automobile racing championship, discontinued in 1917 and 1918 because of the war and allowed to lapse this year for no particular reason, will be revived in 1920 by the contest board of the American Automobile association. Richard A. Kennerdell, chairman of the board, has issued a call for a meeting of representatives of all the speedways, to be held in New York in January. At that time details of the championship award will be arranged and dates allotted for the various contests.

In 1916, the only year in which the official award was made, Dario Resta took first honors with 4,100 points out of a total of 23,332. The late Johnny Aitken ran second, Eddie Rickenbacker third, and Ralph De Palma fourth.

Army Convoy Delayed.

Medicine Bow, Wyo., Aug. 9.—The army's transcontinental motor convoy arrived here today, twenty-four hours behind its schedule, having been delayed for the first time on the Lincoln highway west of North Platte, Neb., early this week.

A real "wild west" welcome greeted the travelers at Cheyenne on Thursday. Gov. Carey and his staff turned out with Fred Stone, the comedian, 150 cow punchers, and a cavalry troop from Fort Russell, who staged a revival of the "Cheyenne days" celebration with all its attendant thrills.

The value of the Lincoln highway as the most satisfactory direct route to the Pacific coast is most apparent on the western plains and desert regions.

French Are Wary of American Cars; Use Too Much Gas

PARIS, July 26.—[By mail.]—The liquidation of the stocks of American army cars in France, and the sale by the French government of their own American cars and trucks have brought to the fore the comparatively great fuel consumption of these cars. In war this was perhaps not so much matter, provided the combustible could be got, but in times of peace it is really a serious consideration to the French automobile owner as to whether he gets twelve or twenty or more miles a gallon.

Possibly it is the fact that "gas" is cheap in America, in comparison with French prices, that has led to this indifference as to the mileage gallon coefficient.

Be this as it may, the French are looking askance upon many an American car that they might otherwise be glad to possess, because of this very handicap. When one hears of tuned up Fords that log 30 miles to the gallon and newly installed carbureters in twelve mile touring cars that now produce twenty, it would seem as though the matter of consumption was one of the very first "reconstructions" and "readjustments" called for in marketing the American car in France.

10 M. P. H. at Car Tracks.

If you are in the habit of driving across street car tracks without hesitating, stop it. A new city ordinance provides that "it shall be unlawful for any person operating any motor vehicle to drive at a speed of more than ten miles per hour on to or across any other street on which a stret car is operating."

This takes the place of the proposed ordinance requiring motorists to come to a full stop at car tracks, which was defeated.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

CHARLES CLIFTON, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, announced last week the full roster of committees which will handle the organization's various activities during the coming year. The heads of the more important subdivisions include: Patents, C. C. Hanch, Maxwell; legislation, H. H. Rice, Chevrolet; highways, R. D. Chapin, Hudson; traffic, William E. Metzger, Columbia; automobile show, John N. Willys, Overland; trucks, Windsor T. White, White; foreign trade, J. Walter Drake, Hupmobile.

The new Doble steam car, whose development was considerably retarded by the war, is to be built in Chicago instead of Detroit, as originally planned. This is brought about by a combination of the interests of the Doble-Detroit Steam Motors company and the Amalgamated Machinery corporation of Chicago, the latter concern having taken over the manufacturing operations in its plant at Thirty-seventh street and Racine avenue. The car, it is indicated, will sell "for $5,000 or more."

◆

Velies for 1920, announced last week, exhibit several radical innovations in car design as compared with previous models. Severely straight body lines, a high radiator, beveled fenders and an entirely new name plate are the most noticeable of these.

Franc D. Mayer, president of the Essenkay Products company, is off for England to superintend the opening of an Essenkay factory there for the development of foreign trade in tire filler. Forty-two department heads and other employés tendered him a farewell dinner on Thursday at the Union League club.

A novel windshield appears on the new Cole closed models. It is in two sections which form a "V" at the roof of the car and are separated by about 10 inches at the cowl, the outer section being composed of two panes and the inner of one. Properly adjusted for snow or rain, the arrangement is designed to create a vacuum between the two sections and draw a current of air from within the car, forcing the snow or rain out at either side and keeping clear a space in front of the driver's eyes.

The Republic Truck company has been investigating the makes of new trucks licensed in the Chicago territory during the first six months of 1919. It finds that 53 per cent of all trucks sold by a list of seventeen distributors were Republics.

Gasoline Reduced To 17¼c Per Gallon
By A Wonderful New Invention

Now we can save you 25% to 40% of your gasoline cost—equal to a reduction in price to 17 1-4c per gallon—and it's guaranteed. The dealers listed below are authorized distributors of the a wonder-working device that injects live steam into automobile and all other combustion engines. Carbon is the devil that makes motor trouble. Every time combustion takes place in your motor a tiny deposit of carbon is formed. As this deposit increases, the gasoline wastage grows until it often reaches 50%. Cleaning the carbon out gives only temporary relief. What you need is a permanent solvent that cleans at every explosion.

AUTOMATIC STEAM CARBURETOR

This is what the Automatic does. It mixes live steam with the gas, improving the mixture and making sure that every ounce of power is developed.

RESULTS ARE POSITIVE

The Automatic Steam Carburetor produces results instantly. Drive your car at any speed, then turn on the Automatic and you will see it pick up from 5 to 7 miles per hour without using any more gas. Attach it to a car with a heavy carbon deposit and you will immediately see the carbon rolling out through the exhaust. Cleaning will be almost entirely eliminated. Already we have a record of one car which ran 16,000 miles without cleaning, and then was found to be in good condition.

Many Other Results

But the Automatic will do much for your motor besides save gas and eliminate carbon. It will cut down oil consumption and stop minor oil troubles. It will keep the intake manifold warm in the winter time. Your motor will have more pep and a quicker getaway, and will run cooler. The Automatic Steam Carburetor will save you nearly all of your motor cleaning and repair bills, as carbon is the great trouble maker in motors. It will give you one-third more mileage per gallon.

For Automobiles, Trucks, Tractors, Motor Boats and Airplanes

The Automatic is made for every kind and type of internal combustion engine burning, gasoline, kerosene, benzol or alcohol. It is guaranteed by the manufacturers and by the dealers listed below, to do all that is claimed for it in this advertisement or you may return it within thirty days and the full purchase price will be returned. It costs only $15.00, and you will save this amount several times each season.

Put the Automatic to the test yourself. You will see results immediately—definite, positive results that will put an end to gas-wasting, carbon cleaning and nearly all the motor troubles you have ever had.

If you are not located conveniently, send order and remittance direct to us. We will send full instructions so that any mechanic can install the Automatic, and if you are not satisfied after thirty days we will refund your money.

Be Sure to Say "Threaded Rubber"

If everybody said "Threaded Rubber Insulation" when they bought batteries and saw to it that "Threaded Rubber" was what they got there would be a lot less battery grief.

—Far fewer jobs of reinsulation that is so often necessary to get full life out of the plates of an ordinary battery.

—Assurance of longer battery life.

If your battery is getting to the point where it shows signs of quitting it will pay you to get on the track of Threaded Rubber. Come in any time and have a talk about batteries.

Economical Luxury for Ford Cars

That's what you find in the tire Goodrich has built especially for Ford cars, "The Goodrich 375."

• • • • • •

Bigger in size, burlier in strength—31 by 3¾ inches—with an inch larger on the circumference, and thicker in the cross section than ordinary size Ford tires, it makes a different car out of your Ford, different looking and different riding. The added class and efficiency quickly cancel the slightly higher cost.

"Three-Seventy-fives," like all Goodrich Tires, are the standard in their class by which other tires are measured.

To learn the value of any tire, square it up to the Goodrich Square of Goodrich List Prices, and the Goodrich More-Mileage Adjustment—6,000 Miles for Safety Treads; 8,000 for Silvertown Cords.

• • • • • •

The comparison of the mileage adjustment, and the prices, tells you why experienced tire users stick to Goodrich Tires.

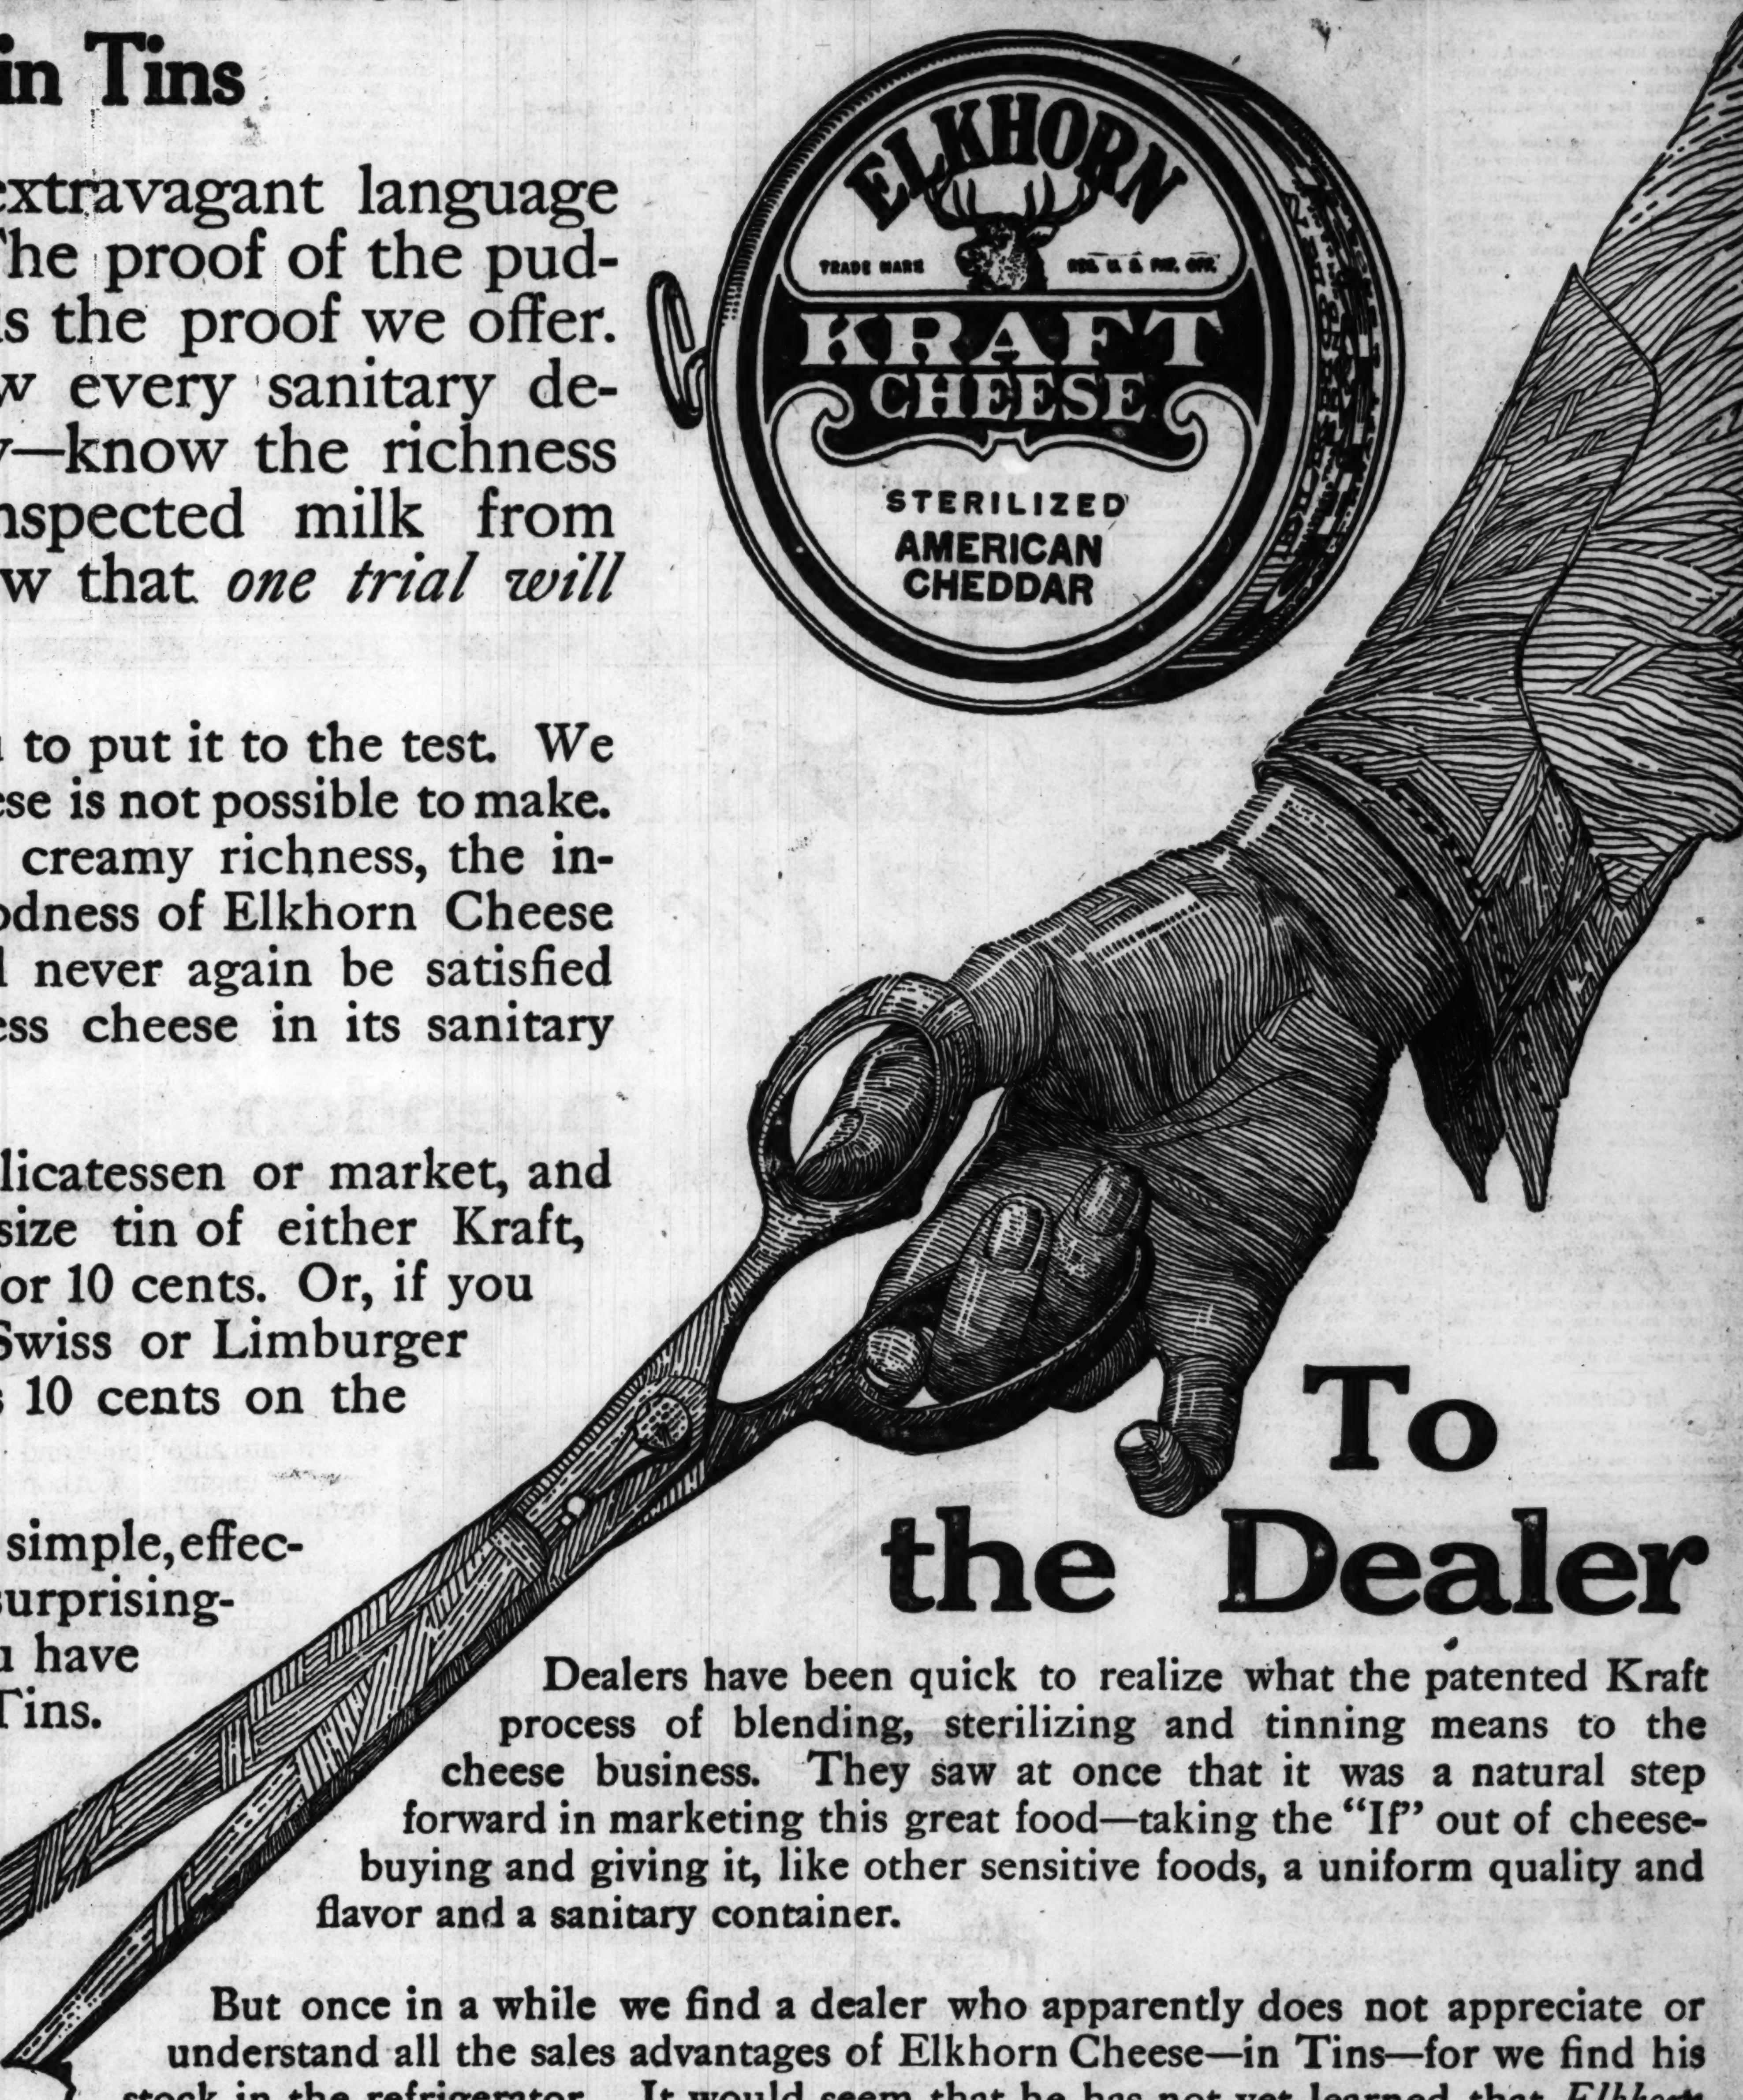
CLIP THIS COUPON

and Test the Supreme Deliciousness of Elkhorn Cheese —8 Varieties in Tins



High sounding phrases and extravagant language may be all very well, but—"The proof of the pudding is in the eating," so that is the proof we offer. We know our product—know every sanitary device that safeguards its purity—know the richness of the Federal and State inspected milk from which it is made, and we know that one trial will win your favor.

That's why we are so anxious for you to put it to the test. We know that a better, more perfect cheese is not possible to make. And when once you have tasted the creamy richness, the incomparable flavor and wholesome goodness of Elkhorn Cheese —in Tins—we are certain you will never again be satisfied with anything less than this peerless cheese in its sanitary container

Take this coupon to your grocer, delicatessen or market, and you will be given a regular 20 cent size tin of either Kraft, Pimento, Chile or prepared Rarebit, for 10 cents. Or, if you prefer the Camembert, Roquefort, Swiss or Limburger varieties, the coupon will be taken as 10 cents on the purchase price.

Tear out the coupon now and make this simple, effective test. You will never know how surprisingly good cheese can be made until you have tasted Elkhorn Cheese, 8 Varieties in Tins.

"The First Hands To Touch It Are Yours"

CLIP OR TEAR OFF HERE

Good wherever this paper is sold.

Good for 10 Cents

This coupon and 10 cents will be accepted by any grocer, delicatessen or market carrying Elkhorn Cheese—in Tins—in exchange for a 20c tin of either Kraft, Pimento, Chile or Rarebit. Or, as 10 cents on the purchase price of the Camembert, Roquefort, Swiss or Limburger varieties, and on half-pound tins of any variety.

ELKHORN
KRAFT CHEESE

To the Dealer*—You will please accept this coupon upon the above conditions, return it to us and we guarantee to refund you the coupon allowance (10 cents). This offer good till Sept. 15, 1919, only. J. L. KRAFT & BROS. CO., 363 River St., Chicago, Ill.

To the Dealer

Dealers have been quick to realize what the patented Kraft process of blending, sterilizing and tinning means to the cheese business. They saw at once that it was a natural step forward in marketing this great food—taking the "If" out of cheese-buying and giving it, like other sensitive foods, a uniform quality and flavor and a sanitary container.

But once in a while we find a dealer who apparently does not appreciate or understand all the sales advantages of Elkhorn Cheese—in Tins—for we find his stock in the refrigerator. It would seem that he has not yet learned that Elkhorn Cheese—in Tins—needs no refrigeration; that he is losing sales with his stock thus hidden away and that the dampness injures the appearance of the container.

With only half a chance, Elkhorn Cheese—in Tins—will make for any dealer a steady cheese trade the year around, with all loss from shrinkage, spoilage, wrapping and careless weighing eliminated. All you need to do is to let your customers know the purity, uniformity, freshness, convenience and economy of Elkhorn Cheese—in Tins—and let them see the goods in stock.

Every piece on display is selected high grade furniture.

Everything needed to make a home more beautiful and attractive. Choice of 2,500 pieces. All finishes and styles.

We are the largest clearing house for storage goods in Chicago and our enormous turnover enables us to sell at such tremendous bargain prices.

TRUE VALUES ON UNCLAIMED STORAGE

Prices on new household furnishings are high. They have advanced 200% and more. This condition cannot be altered by the manufacturers or the retail merchants.

Compare the existing market conditions on new furnishings with those influencing the sale of used and unclaimed storage merchandise. Storage goods should be low priced and are lower at our warehouse than any place in Chicago.

Our business is built upon repeat sales. We call the attention of our old customers and all prospective buyers to the wonderful display of BETTER STORAGE we now have ready.

This midseason clearance will stand as an epoch in furniture sales. When we say true values we mean values which will make every buyer a permanent customer.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A1 SALESMEN
ARE MAKING
$25,000 A YEAR
AND UP WITH US.
Are You Big League Timber?

If you are a real Salesman we will make YOU make good, BIG—make you earn from Twenty-fifive Thousand Dollars or more a year.

To do this we will put you in an exclusive virgin territory and start you off by having one of our experienced men, who has made and received greatly in excess of $25,000 within the last year and is earning better than this right now, close several of your first sales for you. One new salesman, who recently started with us, lined up seven prospects in less than two weeks, and in three days the same closer who is available to work with some of the Salesmen who respond to this advertisement made five sales from the seven prospects, netting the new Salesman over $3,000 in commissions. For another Salesman he closed six sales straight. It is very seldom that less than half of your prospects will fail to be closed, and it should not require more than ten days or two weeks for you to secure six or more prospects. We consider this the strongest support ever given any man on a sales proposition.

The commission on a sale is seldom under $500, even where another Salesman does the closing, and it averages greater than this amount. Many orders are later doubled, trebled, quadrupled, and, in some instances, increased to more than ten times their original size. The Salesman draws full commission on all increases.

We are an old concern, highly rated, with assets of several million dollars, doing a business that will stand the strictest investigation of any one. It is a business that knows no seasons, but is good every month in the year. Our sales are made with all the cards on the table. We sell a concrete thing which the purchaser sees in its entirety. It is nothing in the nature of stocks, bonds, or insurance. It is a proposition that nine people out of ten are interested in the minute you mention it to them, and you are so equipped that you know who is able to buy before interviewing your prospect. All you need to do is to qualify your prospect, who is readily located, and one of our closers will do the rest until such time as you are strong enough to do your own closing.

We are doing a business of many millions of dollars in a year, and, having the facilities to double our business within the next sixty days, are organizing two additional states near Chicago, so the work is necessarily out of town work, although each man is permanently located in his territory. Our men work on a strictly commission basis, and we will positively not consider applicants unless they have made better than $5,000 per year and expenses. This is a permanent business and if you can make good you will never need another position, and you can make all the money you have the ability and desire to work for.

Write, giving an outline of your experience and earnings. Address M O 253, Tribune.

THINKING OF BUILDING?

THIS MAN IS—

Last week we quietly offered for sale our fifth subdivision fronting on Devon-av., west of Western. It went like "hot cakes." One of the largest builders in the city at once bought for cash every 33 foot lot not already sold in this subdivision and will immediately build 46 high grade bungalows.

WE OFFER—

In this subdivision 2 57 foot business corners, 6 25 foot business lots and 6 large apartment corners from 56 to 66 feet wide at prices which will permit handsome profits to buyers. We also offer choice home sites 33 to 70 feet wide on asphalt streets, in our other subdivisions across the street. Easy terms.

WHERE—

Just 1 city block [2 short blocks] west of Devon and Western, where the 2 cars lines meet. The erection of all these homes should attract [1] a grocer seeking a new location, [2] speculators in Devon business frontage, and [3] those seeking improved 33 foot building sites or large apartment corners.

CALL TODAY—

At branch office, 2600 Devon, corner Rockwell-st., two city [4 short] blks. west of Western. Take Broadway, Clark or Western car to Devon and Western, walk west to our office. Branch office phone R. P. 992.

NORTH SHORE ESTATE.

[LAKE FRONTAGE.]

Only at rare intervals are large improved North Shore estates fronting on Lake Michigan offered for sale, and then usually at full value of both land and improvements.

Because of the death of the owner, an estate in beautiful Kenilworth is offered for immediate sale. Possession can be given at once. The price asked is little more than the actual value of the land.

The house is of colonial design and the interior arrangement is modern throughout. The living room, with heavy beamed ceiling, has a massive bowlder fireplace, and, like the spacious dining room, has wonderful lake views. On this floor are also the library, sun parlor, and a breakfast room, besides butler's pantry and kitchen. On the 2d floor are 6 master bedrooms and 3 baths. The rooms and bath for 3 maids are on the 3d floor.

The grounds are decidedly attractive, with full growth trees and rare shrubbery, fruit trees, berry bushes, garden, hennery. A graveled driveway leads to the garage and stables.

Kenilworth can never be invaded by apartment, hotel, or store buildings, and will always maintain its present desirable residential character.

See this property today, for it will be sold within a short time.

WHEAT FARMS
Saskatchewan, Canada

Davidson is our town. We have been located there sixteen years, farming ourselves. You know of the phenomenal advance in farm lands in the United States in the last six months where the prices are now beyond the reach of the man of moderate means. Our district in Saskatchewan is largely settled by American farmers; is thoroughly developed; modern conditions prevail in every way. Harvest is now in progress. Because this is a new country, still in process of development, wonderful opportunities exist for young men to obtain farms at very reasonable prices and easy terms. Or for investors to invest with the prospect of big interest returns as well as a probable big increase in the value of the lands in the near future.

Many of these farms are paying for themselves in one and two crops. Investigation will prove to you that these farms are the surest and most conservative land investment obtainable at the present time. You can buy for from $30 to $50 per acre, on easy terms, as good land as would cost you several hundred dollars per acre down here. Values point to a rapid increase from now on. Don't let the opportunity slip. Excursion rates every Tuesday. Write us for literature and full particulars.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Michigan.

MUST YOU STRIKE?

LAST FALL, when the I. W. W.s were being handled by Ole Hanson in Seattle, farmers in Kalkaska and Antrim Counties, Michigan, were planting their fall rye. This spring, when carpenters struck, these farmers commenced to plant potatoes. When mechanics went on strike in Toledo farmers in these counties commenced to plant corn. While the race riots were going on in Chicago these farmers were thrashing their rye and wheat.

THIS SHOWS

Two sides of life—one where there is idleness and quarreling over wages and the other side where men are going quietly about their own business every day and making money. The government is seeing to it that the farmer gets his. Uncle Sam guaranteed wheat at $2.26, and the farmer is getting enough more for potatoes, beans, rye, poultry, eggs, and everything he produces to far more than make up the extra price he is paying for overalls, shoes, plows, and automobile tires.

THE WORK OF THE SUN, the rain, the soil and the seed have combined with the labor of the farmer to give Michigan some of the biggest crop yields this year the state has ever known, far exceeding any year in money returns in the history of Michigan. Rye has seldom if ever averaged better. Potatoes are coming along splendidly. Wheat has produced well. Corn looks unusually good. The bean crop is promising. A million and a half dollars' worth of cherries were shipped from the cherry section, and the apples will bring more money this year than they ever have before.

NOW IS THE TIME TO come and select land for your future farm home while you can see the crops growing. Come and let us show you a nice plot of ground that you will look at and say "This is the spot I would like to make my home." Then we will tell you the price, which is regulated by a systematic sliding scale, depending upon the location, surroundings and advantages of the particular piece of land, somewhere between $15 and $30 per acre, and we will then arrange the terms to suit your financial condition. If you can pay cash we will give you a liberal discount. If you want easy monthly terms we will arrange accordingly or will give you yearly terms if you desire.

SAFETY FIRST IS NOW the keynote of buying land for a future home. Safety first is the nature of our contract wherein you are protected by insurance while you are paying for the land. Your farming is safeguarded by farm advisers whom we employ to visit and direct the farming operations of the settlers in our district. When your land is paid for we will loan you money to help build or to stock the place. We are financially strong as our bank references will show. We give perfect title and abstract to all lands we sell. We have been engaged in colonizing work in Michigan for 21 years. This is a safety first investment for you. No other investment is better these times than good agricultural land.

OUR NEXT EXCURSION will consist of a good number of farmers from Illinois and Indiana and workers who have been laid off but have saved a little money and still other men who are making good wages and want to make their start now on a land purchase. If you are a renter and want a farm home of your own, or if you are enough interested in your future and want a home for the days when you are too old for factory work, or if you want to get into an independent business which is very profitable now and is going to grow better every season, then we would advise you to join this excursion party.

A POSTAL CARD from you will bring a 48 page book telling you all about this district and will give you valuable points which a person buying land ought to know no matter where he buys. This book also gives facts about the conditions of our lands, their location in connection with lakes and rail transportation and closeness to the nation's greatest markets which unmistakably points to more rapid development in this section of Michigan than will be likely to come to any similar agriculture land in America. Write at once.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Can only be permanently solved by increasing the production of farm products. Southeast Missouri's virgin soil offers the greatest opportunities in the United States to do that. We have 7,000 acres of rich, black, alluvial cutover land, of practically inexhaustible fertility, well located with reference to towns, railroads, and markets, that we are selling in tracts of 40 acres and up at reasonable prices, on liberal terms: 10% of the purchase price in cash, the balance 10 years after date at 6% interest.

During the past four and one-half years we have sold 64,737 acres to 493 different people without a dissatisfied customer. It is the fastest selling proposition in the country because it is the best buy. Write us for a list of our purchasers' names and full and complete information.

R. G. AMUNDSEN

County Agent for Oconto County writes:

The Home Lands Co.,
926 MANHATTAN BLDG.,
CHICAGO, ILL.
DEC. 23, 1918.

DEAR SIRS:

In reply to your request for information on the agricultural possibilities of Oconto County as they appear to me, I will say that it has a wide range of soil and climatic conditions, which makes it difficult to make any specific statement covering the entire county.

Oconto County borders on Lake Michigan, which fact is responsible for its having a longer growing season than the central counties of the same latitude. On the date of this writing we have no snow at Oconto and a few farmers are still plowing sod. While our winters ordinarily commence a little earlier than this, it is by no means an unusual occurrence. The average growing season in most parts of the county is long enough to ripen corn of the earlier maturing varieties.

The southeastern portion of the county is composed largely of the Miami series of soils, which are of the same type as that of most soils of south central Wisconsin. This type of soil is very productive; has a good water holding capacity and is easily worked. In the western and northern portion the Kennan silt loam predominates. This soil is somewhat similar to the Miami. It has a somewhat finer texture and is admirably adapted to growing grain and clover.

With our good grazing lands and the common use of the silo, dairying has come to be of great importance. We have over seventy cheese factories where the finished produce is turned on the market and the whey and skim milk put into pork and veal. This system, together with crop rotation, assures a permanent productivity of the soil.

As a cash crop, potatoes do well in all parts of the county. They are reliable and afford the new settler means of getting immediate returns from a comparatively small patch of ground. A few acres of potatoes will assure the settler of a living while he is further preparing his farm for bigger fields. On new land, 200 bu. per acre is not uncommon. Northern Wisconsin produces the best quality of potatoes on the market. This is shown by the exhibits at the state fair and potato show each year, where the ribbons invariably go to a northern county. Oconto County potatoes this year, in the individual classes, carried off two seconds and a third prize at the state potato show. Sugar beets averaged over ten tons per acre last season, and stock beets are grown and used with success by those who have no silo.

Wisconsin No. 12 and No. 8 corn will mature in this county when properly cared for. However, its greatest use, and for which it is most extensively grown, is silage to provide feed throughout the winter for the milch cows.

Clover and timothy grow luxuriantly in all parts of the county, and alfalfa, on a small scale, has been grown successfully.

To the man with small means and a willingness to work I think our cut-over lands offer an opportunity which is not generally appreciated. A man with a little knowledge of agriculture, who will apply himself, when provided with enough capital to make a reasonable start, is almost certain to build up a good farm, a home, and have a chance to enjoy the great out-of-doors, for which man was made.

Sincerely yours,
ROBT. AMUNDSEN,
COUNTY AGENT.

JOHN M. SHIELS,

ONE OF OUR CUSTOMERS, WRITES:
MR. R. S. DUNHAM, AGRICULTURIST,
HOME LANDS, INC.

Dear Sir: I thought I would write you a few lines to let you know how I am getting along.

I have about five acres of land cleared and two acres planted with a little of everything. Crops look fine. This is the place for a man to come and buy land. I think Wisconsin is one of the best States in the Union. You can cut clover and timothy which grows wild in the open spaces in the woods.

Well, Mr. Dunham, I thank you and Mr. Mordt for your treatment. I think the Home Lands, Inc., is all right. A man with a little means can do well up here. Yours truly,
JOHN M. SHIELS.

Your motor cylinders are full of carbon and plugs get oily. Motor knocks when you open the throttle or going up a grade. Don't waste valves and money having carbon removed and valves ground. Let us remedy the real cause. Regrind your cylinders, fit new pistons and rings and pins. You will have a motor like new, full of pep, and save the cost in one season's driving. Are you having continuous bearing trouble? Your crankshaft has flat spots. Only remedy is to regrind it. We have the only real crankshaft grinder in Chicago.
